STATE HOUSE HEARING

The Committee on Towns of the General Court were the severest critics of the Weymouth Town Meeting Act at the State House hearing on Tuesday before said committee, but several amendments were also proposed by Thomas P. Vaille, and the committee announced at the close that the bill would be redrafted.

Just a dozen from Weymouth attended the hearing, including Selectmen Hawes, Newton, Hastings and Cowing, Representative Prince H. Tirrell, Town Counsel William J. Holbrook, Town Clerk Clayton B. Merchant, Percy L. Bicknell, Fletcher W. Howe, Thomas P. Vaille, Arthur C. Gertsley and the editor of the Gazette and Transcript.

The hearing was scheduled for 10.30 but other bills were assigned for the same hour, and when an adjournment was reached at 1.15 the Weymouth bill had not been reached.

When the committee reconvened at 3 P. M. the Weymouth hearing was opened by Representative Tirrell, who said the bill was properly before the Legislature, a town meeting had instructed the Selectmen to petition. He introduced William J. Holbrook, the town counsel.

Mr. Holbrook informed the committee that the Weymouth bill was copied largely from the Watertown Act and told wherein it differed. The Weymouth bill adopted the present precinct lines long established, while the Watertown act provided for redistricting. Watertown's representation was on the percentage basis, but our bill favored 30 from each precinct. Our bill also modifies the referendum. Facts and figures relative to Weymouth were given. The chairman of the Assessors should have been included as a member at large.

Bradford Hawes, chairman of the Selectmen, was then introduced. He favored 30 delegates from each precinct and thought the present precinct lines very good. Registration by women had not been equal in each precinct, but would even up this year. Public opinion was unanimous for limited town meetings and they were necessary as we have no hall large enough to accommodate half the voters. The committee seemed to think that the bill provided for two moderators and asked many questions.

Town Clerk Merchant read the vote of the town meeting in favor of the petition to the Legislature, and gave the following figures as to registered voters:

Precinct	Men	Women	Total
Precinct 1	584	324	908
Precinct 2	530	222	802
Precinct 3	662	370	1032
Precinct 4	415	240	655
Precinct 5	644	457	1101
Precinct 6	552	317	869

Out of the total of 5367 the number to vote at the Presidential election was 4604. He was heartily in favor of limited town meeting and favored representation by percentage. Said town was cosmopolitan, and thought East Weymouth precincts were growing the fastest.

Committee thought precincts were not very equally divided.

Mr. Holbrook did not think the town cosmopolitan, and thought the North Weymouth precinct was growing the fastest. Favored fixed representation, but had no serious objection to percentage.

Representative Tirrell would apportion by registered voters rather than population.

Thomas P. Vaille was introduced. He said he had been a resident of Weymouth 8 years and of good old Massachusetts 70 years, and resented being called a new comer. People of Weymouth are watching with interest progress on this bill. The legality of some of our town meetings might be questioned as hundreds of voters had been crowded out. He hoped new Act if too late for annual meeting might be submitted to a special town meeting. He proposed amendments cutting off pay of moderator; would elect Moderator at annual town election as Selectmen are elected; would make section relative to referendum conform to the Watertown Act; would provide for the publication of all town warrants in a local newspaper; would redistrict the town into precincts, not less than 6 nor more than 10, based on three percent of the registered voters.

Many questions were asked by the committee and he was requested to put his amendments in writing.

Mr. Howe spoke briefly.

Mr. Gertsley would have the bill conform more closely with the Watertown act, especially on referendum, representation and election of Moderator.

The committee promised Representative Tirrell early action that Weymouth might adopt the act at an early date. The committee suggested that a committee from Weymouth confer with the committee of the Legislature in redrafting the bill.

Adjourned at 5 P. M.

NOT A CANDIDATE

Another member of the Board of Selectmen has declined to be a candidate at the coming election, George L. Newton of North Weymouth. Mr. Newton is one of the veterans of the board, as well as a Civil War veteran, his service dating from 1895, when he was elected with Bradford Hawes, Gordon Willis, Nelson Gardner and Charles E. Bicknell, and his service has been continuous since that year. Mr. Newton entered the office one year earlier.

Among others to serve with Mr. Newton have been Jacob F. Dizer, John F. Dwyer, Edward W. Hunt, Henry E. Hanley, George C. Torrey, Robert McIntosh, Walter L. Bates, William J. Dunbar, A. Francis Barnes, Ralph P. Burrell, Joseph Kelley and Joseph A. Fern.

The following letter is self explanatory:

Editor Gazette-Transcript:

Having been honored by the voters of the town for the past 25 years as a member of the Board of Selectmen and Overseer of Poor, I wish to announce through the columns of the Gazette and Transcript my appreciation of their confidence and support and also take this opportunity to state that I shall not be a candidate for reelection at the coming election in March.

Yours very truly,

George L. Newton
Weymouth, Jan. 31, 1921

FOR SELECTMEN

Because of the withdrawal of Selectmen Bradford Hawes and George L. Newton, many new candidates are mentioned for Selectmen, including William B. Dasha, Henry A. Day, Charles T. Bailey and James W. Colgan in North Weymouth; Joseph A. Fern in East Weymouth; Walter W. Pratt and Theron Tirrell in Ward Four. Possibly Ward Three and South Weymouth may also have new candidates.

Many news articles and some advertising is unavoidably crowded out this week. Big advertisements should be forwarded Monday or Tuesday.

The address of the Gazette and Transcript is Weymouth, 88, Mass., not East Weymouth or South Weymouth. No street or box is necessary.

SOUTH WEYMOUTH FIRE

Columbian Square was the scene early Sunday morning of the most disastrous fire for some months, but efficient work by Combination 5 and Ladder 5 prevented it spreading. The alarm was at 12.15 and the firemen found a lively blaze in rear of the South Weymouth Public Market. The fire burned through to the attic and then to the shoe store of Wesley C. Pierce and the dry goods store of Mrs. Emma Swan and smoke and water caused some damage in the lunch room of A. Dondoro.

The building was owned by William G. Quirk of Boston, whose loss was about $3000. The proprietor of the market was Uriah MacNeil and his loss was about $4000. Mrs. Swan lost $2000 and Mr. Pierce about $1000. Two cats who were imprisoned in the building were rescued.

NOMADS OF THE NORTH

FROM THE NOVEL BY
JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD

And What a Story!

Picture it! Raoul Challoner with his wife Nanette, and her baby, lost to the world in their little cabin in God's Great Wilderness—happy in their hiding place free from law's injustice—their only friends a big black bear and a wolf dog. Then comes O'Connor of the Northwest Mounted to take them back. And as man and wife and child, bear and dog, start down on the trail that leads straight to the gallows their whole wide world bursts into flame.

A forest fire so real it staggers you!
A battle through so fierce it awes you
And a finish so fine that you'll cheer it.
SEE THESE WILD ANIMALS IN ACTION
SOMETIME ELSE TO MAKE YOU REMEMBER
"Nomads of the North"

1—John W. Weeks of Massachusetts, who it is believed will be secretary of war in the Harding cabinet. 2—President Wilson leaving the White House grounds for his daily ride. 3—Test of the new Holt gun mount tractor carrying a 155 MM howitzer near Stockton, Cal.

Supreme Council Attempts to Settle German Reparations and Disarmaments.

EXTEND TIME FOR LATTER

Austria's Plight to Be Investigated—Morris and Shidehara Devise Plan for American-Japanese Accord—Railways Prepare to Ask Reduction of Wages.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

Germany, Austria and Turkey were on the anxious seat last week; and various other nations were only less concerned. For the supreme council of allies was in session in Paris discussing reparations, disarmament, the invasion of Austria and the revision of the treaty of Sevres. Between sessions, Premier Lloyd George lunched and talked in private with President Brand, and gradually won him over to a policy of greater conciliation. It is probable that this was quite agreeable to M. Briand, but he had not put up some argument to satisfy the French people, who are doomed to a long wait.

The matter of German reparations came up, Doumer, the French minister of finance, made a long address in which he insisted that France must be paid 400,000,000,000 gold marks. He stated, as the policy of France, that Germany must be presented with an itemized bill for war damages caused by her, and that the supreme council should then fix the amount that Germany must pay within the next five years. Lloyd George and his colleagues wished to concentrate on what Germany is able to pay, and said there were three ways in which she could make payment—in silver, in gold and in goods. The discussion developed that Great Britain has objections to the two last named. It is held that if Germany is compelled to pay over any considerable amount of the hundred million gold marks she is supposed to be holding as a reserve, the mark would become practically worthless and the economic situation in Europe would be worse than ever. The British also point out that if Germany pays in goods the markets would be glutted and English industries ruined. One other method of partial payment to France has been proposed—the sending of German laborers to reconstruct the devastated regions. But this is opposed by France on the ground that the people of those regions are without employment and need the payment for doing the reconstruction work.

It was on the question of disarmament that the French yielded most. General Nollet's report said that the Germans were not faithfully carrying out the treaty terms in that respect, but this was contradicted by the report of the British General Bingham. The council's military experts, with Marshal Foch as chairman, then got together and agreed to abandon the original French demand that the civil military organizations of Bavaria and Prussia be disbanded at once. A day until July 1 was granted, but insisted on guarantees by military occupation of the Ruhr district if the terms were not executed by that date. In view of the stubborn attitude maintained by the governments of Bavaria and East Prussia and the leaders of the organizations in question, it is not easy to see how the central government at Berlin can bring about the disbandment by July 1 if, as it says, it cannot do so now.

The plea for immediate relief for starving Austria, made to the supreme council by Sir William Goode, British representative in Vienna, and other representatives of the allied nations, was made in vain. The plan proposed by Goode was that Great Britain and France should lend Austria $50,000,000 in ten annual installments, and he suggested the United States might participate in the loan. But Lloyd George said this was out of the question, calling attention to the difficulty in obtaining £10,000,000 to build houses in London. The council, feeling that the case of Austria is so closely bound up in the general central European situation, referred the whole matter to a special committee, made up of the commerce ministers of the allied nations, for investigation.

Admitting that the treaty of Sevres, with Turkey, must be revised, the council decided that representatives of the allies shall hold a conference with Turkish and Greek representatives in London in the latter part of February. If the governments of Constantinople and Ankara can get together for the purpose, they will be allowed to send a joint delegation. To this extent the council recognizes the Turkish Nationalist government, and it probably is the least it can do in view of the strong position of Mustapha Kemal Pasha and his recent military successes against the Greeks in Asia Minor.

Disagreeing with the views of President Wilson as set forth in Secretary Colby's note to the Italian ambassador last November, the council decided that Estonia and Latvia, two of the states carved out of the old Russian empire, should be recognized as sovereign states. Action on Georgia and Lithuania was deferred.

From the other side of the fence—Berlin—comes the information that the German government will not recognize the right of the supreme council to settle the subject of reparations. Berlin holds that there must be first a discussion by industrial experts regarding deliveries, and then the conference of the governments at Geneva as promised at the Spa meeting.

"Pertinax," a usually well-informed Paris journalist, says Great Britain is going to propose that payment of the British war debt to the United States be postponed until 1936 and 1947. This debt now amounts to something over four billion dollars. It is said Lord Chalmers, permanent secretary of the British treasury, will come over here with the plan for postponement.

President Wilson's note, asking that before he undertake mediation for Armenia, the great powers promise Russia that her territorial integrity shall not be invaded, seems to have met with little response from the capitals of Europe, though it may be the statesmen are merely digesting it. Armenia herself appears to have ceased to interest any except the philanthropists who know that her people still are suffering and oppressed. As for Russia, the main development of recent days is the progress of the negotiations for resumption of trade between her and Great Britain. The soviet envoy has received the terms demanded by the British, and it is likely they will be accepted. The movement toward the same end in the United States has received a setback in the senate committee, where a majority seems opposed to an arrangement which they think involves the recognition of the soviet government.

That same Wilson note was interpreted in this country as aiming chiefly at Japan's continued occupation of Vladivostok and the surrounding portion of Siberia, and in this light might have been generally approved if the Republican press had not jumped on it as a presumptuous attempt to establish a policy by a repudiated administration. Anyhow, the Japanese so far have not given it official attention; neither have they made any move toward getting out of Vladivostok. The murder of an American naval lieutenant by one of their sentries, and other unwarranted acts, however, have forced Tokyo to disavow all such actions.

Ambassadors Morris and Shidehara have concluded their negotiations for the settlement of the California alien land law question and the definition of the rights of Japanese in the United States, and their recommendations are embodied in a report which Mr. Morris has submitted to Secretary of State Colby. The principal features of this report are as follows:

1. An amendment to the existing commercial treaty which will grant to Japanese subjects lawfully in this country equal civil rights with the nationals of any other foreign nation.

2. A revision of the existing "gentlemen's agreement," so as to make it conform to present-day requirements, and to that end would absolutely prohibit Japanese emigration to America and the Hawaiian Islands, while admitting it to the Philippines.

At home the Japanese government was violently attacked by the opposition leaders for its alleged failure in diplomatic negotiations with the United States, Great Britain, China and Siberia, and for keeping troops in Siberia. In reply to the latter charge Premier Hara said he would like to withdraw those troops, but he believed their maintenance in Siberia was necessary for the national defense. He admitted that the bolshevizing of Siberia could not be checked.

Hundreds of thousands of workers in the United States are without employment, but the situation is growing better daily. In the North the textile mills and many of the automobile plants are reopening, and in the South the cotton mills are resuming operations. To be sure, the worker is often compelled to accept either a shorter week or reduced wages. The downward trend in pay has now reached the railways, and last week the labor committee of the American Association of Railway Executives met in Chicago to lay plans for a request that the United States railway labor board authorize a reduction of wages. One minor road in the Southeast already has asked for such authority.

The railway executives say that at the present rates the properties are not earning the 6 per cent return guaranteed by the transportation act; that the rates now are as high as the business can be expected to bear; that forces have been cut to the minimum consistent with safe operation, and that the only remaining place for a reduction in expenses is the wage scale. They also will show the federal board that wage increases of more than 120 per cent since the President signed the Adamson eight-hour law have accounted for almost two-thirds of the increase in operating expenses from $3,100,000,000 to nearly $6,000,000,000 a year and that the national industrial conference board's estimates show that the cost of living has decreased.

Union laborers who believe Samuel Gompers and his associates have proved incompetent leaders and "have directed the toilers' industrial ship into the whirlpool of fallacy and corrupt politics" have just started the organization of a new national labor movement called the American League of Union Workingmen. Its officers declare they are for American and American ideals and conceptions, and that they hope to establish cordial relations between their leaders and the Harding administration.

The senate has passed the bill for government regulation of the meat packing industry, which, according to its proponents, will protect both the stock raisers and the consumers from alleged price control by the packers. Eighteen Republicans, mostly Progressives, joined forces with 28 Democrats to carry the bill through, the vote being 46 to 33. Washington correspondents predicted that it would not get through the house, at least during this session.

Charles M. Schwab, the steel magnate, who was accused of having taken from the government $269,543 for his personal expenses while he was director general of the Emergency Fleet corporation, was fully exonerated by the house committee investigating the shipping board, after a somewhat sensational session during which Mr. Schwab wept over the false charges that impugned his patriotism. Attorney General Palmer and Samuel Untermyer continued their wordy battle, the former accusing the latter of having served the German embassy as "unpaid judicial and legal political adviser" during the early years of the war, and of "still serving his old clients." Untermyer countered with flat denials and with charges that Palmer is a grossly incompetent official who has misused his patronage.

THE ECONOMIC CIRCLE.

"You are expecting a still higher price for that pork?"
"Got to get it," asserted Farmer Cornstossel.

"And the ultimate consumer will have to pay a lot of fees and commissions that will make the cost pretty big?"

"It works around in a circle. The only man in these parts who can afford to buy it holds the mortgage on this farm. He has made arrangements to charge more interest."

The Logical Sequence.

"The deserted maiden wrung her hands."

"I suppose that was because the rich man she was after wouldn't ring them for her."

Logical Sequence.

"There was a flash in her eye when he came to tell her he had the facts in the case."

"Of course, a flash always goes before a report."

"Take a sixty-two measure of chest Fill with Puccini and Wagner or Strauss. Add a gesture and cry with a pinch of a sigh. It ought to bring down any house."

The Secret.
"I won success in the game or pen. The best plan is to be. Say the old thing over again. It says them plenty."

Rings to go p.
"Yorick Ham says engagement." "About time." "Says he'll have to double in brass." "Well, he's got the brass to do it with."

The Test.
"The world owes every man a living."

"Yep, and you'll find the world mighty good pay, too, if you're any kind of collector."

Two Versions of the Affair.
Ruth—She told me she slapped him because he tried to kiss her good night.
Helen—He told me she slapped him because he didn't try.—Columbia Jester.

The Explanation.
"Why does it always seem to be a dark horse to win?" "I dare say, because the other can't think it is fair to."

Spoon: What kind of bells do you prefer?
Mr. Bell (who has a nagging wife): Dumb bells!

Real Money.
"I'll bet a thousand dollars!" "Announced a beautiful Ben. But he changed his mind about it. When I said I'd bet him ten."

Got to Have Her.
"The cook says we must get another housemaid." "We have two already, enough to care for the work." "But they need a fourth at bridge."

Not So Dear.
"How dear to my heart are the scenes of my childhood?" "Why don't you go back and view them once more?" "Aw a railroad ticket would cost four dollars."

Not to Be Fooled.
"What do you know about women?" "Nothing, my dear young lady; nothing." "Now you're trying to get me off my guard."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Proud of Armorial Bearings.
The early Dutch settlers of New York, who founded important families, were frequently aristocratic Hollanders who brought their coats-of-arms with them, as an integral part of their household goods. Such families as the Van Rensselaers, De Puysters, Beekmans, Schuylers and Stuyvesants had their arms beautifully engraved on the elaborate silver services which were among their proudest possessions.

Savages Poor Physically.
The natives of the African jungle, instead of being the lusty savages of imagination, are for the most part physically below par. The majority of them are malnourished and diseased and marked physical defects are common.

RISKS HIS NECK JUMPING FROM RACING AUTOMOBILE TO PLANE

"Dare-devil Bill" Strother thinks no more of hopping from a racing automobile to a rope ladder swinging from an airplane, than does the average citizen of swinging aboard a moving street car. When both the plane and auto are hitting a 75-mile gait, the plane swoops low so that Strother can grab the bottom rung of the rope ladder and swing himself up. The photograph shows Strother standing on the back of his racing car about to start around the track to do his daily stunt.

BOLTS NEED TIGHTENING UP

Good Point to Thoroughly Clean the Cooling System Before Warm Weather—Eliminate Squeaks and Look After Springs.

Keeping a motorcar in excellent working order is a simple matter when a regular schedule of lubrication and adjustments is followed. Most drivers are quite conscientious in attending to the minor details during warm and fair weather because they realize that all of the little things go to rounding out more perfect operation.

All-year driving has become the custom rather than the exception. During the winter there seems to be a tendency on the part of some to neglect the usual routine and to let slip such matters as attending to grease cups, spring clips, drip pan, etc.

Should Tighten Bolts.

Should squeaks of any kind develop in the body they may be eliminated by simply tightening the body bolts with a good-sized wrench, which will draw the body down firmly in position again.

It is advisable, whether or not squeaks are apparent, to inspect the bolts after winter driving to see that they are drawn up good and snug against the lock washers.

Another simple matter is the proper care of springs. Springs do an extraordinary amount of work and when the ground is frozen the shocks they meet are greatly multiplied. The slight effort involved in caring for them will be repaid many times by the added comfort derived and the added protection afforded all working parts of the car.

It is essential that the spring clips be kept tight at all times in order that the spring leaves will be held firmly together. As spring leaves generally break on the rebound, it is necessary that the leaves hold together in order to divide up the shock.

At this time of the year it is also advisable to jack up the car, loosen the spring clips and spread the leaves apart, and with a thin, flat instrument liberally smear the surfaces of the spring leaves with a mixture of flake graphite and motor oil. This lubricant will permit the leaves to slip over each other with very little friction, thus giving the same smoothness of action as when the car was new.

Clean Cooling System.

It is also a good point, after driving the car all winter, to thoroughly clean the cooling system before warm weather comes on. No matter what kind of antifreeze mixture is used a certain amount of sediment is bound to settle in parts of the system or adhere to the cylinder and radiator walls.

A simple method of cleaning the system is to drain off the water and then turn a hose in the filler cap of the radiator to admit a moderate stream of water. Let the motor run at a low speed, leaving open the pet cock at the bottom of the radiator.

Another good point is to check up the brakes to see that they are properly adjusted.

If the car has been in use all during the winter a thorough washing and cleaning is also advisable. It is especially important to clean the chassis where dirt and ice accumulated in driving over slushy and wet roads.

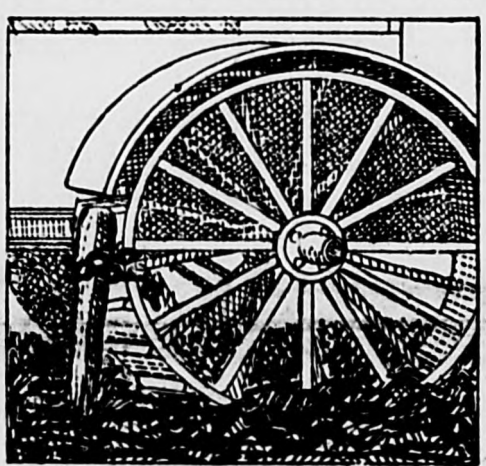

A few hours spent in a "spring housecleaning" will put the car in good shape and insure greater comfort and satisfaction on invigorating spring drives.

OF BIG ASSISTANCE WHEN STUCK IN MUD

Kink Is Well Worth Knowing in Time of Trouble.

Two Pieces of Cord Wood Chained to Wheels Will Help in Pulling Car Out of Hole or Rut When Engine Is Stalled.

The illustration does not look like much of anything, but when you're really "down in the mud," it is one of the best little life preservers that's going, but don't be too quick about using it unless you are really "down in it." The best idea is to have side hogs not very far away if you expect small mud-hole troubles and use them before your small troubles become big ones, but occasionally you will really get down and then this particular kink is worth having, says a writer in Power Farming.

Get two pieces of four-foot cord wood, and lean them against the front of the wheels and chain them near the top. Then throw in your clutch, the stake will be pulled into the ground and broken off, but before it breaks the engine will have made six to ten feet and there are very few holes that take more than two applications of this kind of medicine to get the engine out. But be very careful not to let your chains catch on any other part of the engine.

AUTOMOBILE GOSSIP

Fifteen electric railways in England are operating a motorbus service.

Only one person in every 5,300 in Russia owns an automobile.

Ninety-five per cent of the automobile tires on the market are non-skid.

The American public has an investment of approximately $3,000,000,000 in motor vehicles.

There are 23 states in the Union with a registration of more than 100,000 motor vehicles.

The number of motor vehicles increased 979 per cent in the period from 1911 to January 1, 1920.

Three hundred and fifty thousand people are employed in Detroit and nearby towns in the automobile industry.

An average of four men were employed to construct each of the 1,650,000 passenger automobiles produced last year.

The Indiana reformatory at Jeffersonville is filled with automobile thieves, many of them less than eighteen years old.

A movement is on foot in the automobile industry to eliminate the 23, 24 and 25-inch wheel now in use, and to use as a substitute the single 24-inch wheel.

Henry A. Dudley, 12, of 21 Gainsboro street, Boston, was killed by a bullet from a 22-calibre pistol in the rooms of the Bay State School of Musketry, across the street from his home.

The late Judge Henry W. Bragg of the Charlestown, Mass. court left nearly a half million dollars by his will filed in the Suffolk probate office, the greater portion of the estate going to various charities.

Some one stole a ham from the kitchen of Tree Warden John W. Stobart, Franklin, Mass., and now the town official says that "if the man who took the ham will call again" he can have some eggs to go with it.

Better enforcement of liquor laws in Maine will be considered at a conference of State and Federal enforcement officers with Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League of America, at Augusta, on Feb. 10.

Four women are to be candidates for office at the Marblehead, Mass., town election, Feb. 21. They are: Miss Amy B. Lindsey for the School Board, Miss Edith Fabens for the Board of Overseers of the Poor, Mrs. Amy Snow for assessor, and Mrs. Mary F. Boies for trustee of Abbot Public Library.

Superintendents, directors and other officers of boys' clubs from all parts of New England attended a conference at the Boston Athletic Association, at which the Massachusetts Federation of Boys' Clubs was merged with a new organization to be known as the New England Federation of Boys' Clubs.

"Fish Engineer," "Bachelor of Fish," and other engineering terms connected with the ancient and honorable fish industry, don't appeal to Technology students in Boston at all. The faculty started the argument by investigating the proposition to start a fisheries college in connection with Tech, which, they will vote on soon.

Mylo D. Campbell, president of the National Federation of Milk Producers, told how milk cows, which a year ago sold for $140, are being sold today for $40 and "led to the shambles" of the stockyards. The farmer loses $1 on every 100 pounds of milk he produces, he added. Dr. George R. Little, Schaghticoke, N. Y. was elected president.

The number of volumes in the Harvard University library has passed the 2,000,000 mark, which makes it the third library in size in the whole country. Prof. Archibald C. Coolidge's annual report as director of the library, shows 2,018,100 volumes and pamphlets. The Congressional library at Washington and the New York public library alone exceed it in size.

Woodward N. Ellis, 39, watchman for the Texas Company, Providence, was committed to the State Hospital for Mental Diseases, after, it is alleged he had drawn a revolver and had driven employees out of the company's office. Ellis himself called up police headquarters and stated that the police were needed there right away. Ellis went crazy looking for burglars, friends say.

None of the half dozen women who ran for the Massachusetts Legislature last fall was successful, but a member of the newly enfranchised sex has been selected for one of the most important places in the legislative organization. Speaker Young announced that Mrs. Edna C. Barry had been named clerk by the committee on rules, the occupant of which becomes private secretary to the speaker.

Orlando L. Martin of Plainfield, ex-Commissioner of Agriculture, was elected president of the Vermont Holstein-Friesian Association at the annual meeting held at Montpelier. A committee was appointed to adapt the bylaws of the New England Association to the State society, and it was voted to put a State herd in competition at the Eastern States exhibition and at other fairs next fall.

Speakers at the dinner of the Economic Club of Boston widely disagreed as to the needs of Massachusetts and their remedies. Former Gov. Samuel W. McCall said that the source of the troubles that afflicted Massachusetts lay, not within the state, but at Washington, where there was great need for less taxation, less expenditure and less government. He declared that, though we might be saving at the Massachusetts spigot, we should not make any material advance toward economy unless waste at the Washington bung holes were stopped.

BOSTON PRODUCE MARKET, WEEK OF JANUARY 24-JANUARY 29

(Prepared by the United States Bureau of Markets.)
Fruits and Vegetables.

Except for a slight advance in cabbage, all important lines of fruit and vegetables last week's prices or declined slightly. Trading was practically suspended for two days by the cold weather and since then considerable stock has arrived in a frozen condition. Apples were steady. New York State Baldwins selling $2.50-4.50 per barrel, good New Hampshire Baldwins from cold storage at $4.50-5.00, and native grown Baldwins in bushel boxes at $1.00-2.00. Best Danish cabbage from New York State advanced from $1.25 per barrel to $1.50. New Florida cabbage in barrel crates sold at the end of the week at $3.25. Native grown Pascal celery was firm at $1.00-5.50 per bushel box and California celery at $6.00-8.50 per crate. Cape Cod cranberries were steady at $14.00-17.00 per barrel. Connecticut Valley onions were steady at $1.00-1.50 per 100 pound sack. Arrostook County potatoes were in heavy supply and 10c-15c lower, closing $1.50-1.75 per 100 pounds. This year's potato crop is unusually large, and data collected by the United States Department of Agriculture indicates that a larger proportion of the crop is still in the hands of producers than at this time last year. Native grown parsnips and beets were steady at $1.50-1.75 per bushel, turnips at 75c-1.25, while carrots were lower at $1.00-1.25. Squash was in good demand, native grown Green Hubbard selling at 6c-7c per pound. Hothouse cucumbers were steady at $15.00-30.00 per bushel, tomatoes at 40c-60c per pound, while lettuce advanced to 40c-1.00 per bushel.

Dairy and Poultry

The only real feature on the Dairy markets during the past week has been the further sharp decline in fresh egg prices. The lower retail prices evidently stimulated consumption, and a better trade was reported for a few days, but there was not sufficient to clean up stocks and toward the last of the week prices dropped rapidly. The net loss for the week has been about 6c per dozen. Fresh Western eggs declining from 65c-66c down to 59c-61c on Friday. Nearby eggs have also been more plentiful and dropped from 70c-72c down to 64c-67c. Butter markets have made very little change. Trade has been almost wholly on storage butter and values have gradually hardened, but no great price changes have resulted. Fresh butter has been reaching the market more freely from nearby and western sections but has not sold at much advance over the same grade of storage butter. At the close 90-92 score fresh butter was bringing 45-50c, and the same grade of storage 47-49c.

Cheese also made a slight improvement in feeling but no change in price. Very little fresh cheese has been arriving here owing to the danger of frost damage in shipping from country points at this season of the year, so trade has been on held goods and these have sold in the range of 25-28c for Twins and at 29-30c for Young Americans.

The higher prices during the past week on the poultry markets have not had an effect on trade, as dealers have noted a gradual falling off in demand and most of them find a very quiet market. Price changes have been noted only on the very fanciest fresh chickens, some of these selling 1-2c higher. Fowl have ranged 30-35c and chickens from 40-50c according to size and quality. Very little live poultry from nearby sections has arrived and prices on these have been about the same, although heavier receipts from western points have made this class a little easier. Fowl steady at 35-36c and chickens at 33-35c.

Gov. Lake of Connecticut has issued a proclamation to the people of Connecticut appealing for aid for the starving children of Europe.

The New England Milk Producers Association at its convention in Boston went on record as favoring the Fordney Tariff bill, which provides a tariff of 2 cents a gallon on milk, 5 cents a gallon on cream and 8 cents a pound on butter.

Armed with one large and serviceable looking bucksaw, Sissierine Johnson of New Bedford, Mass., who said she had Indian blood in her veins and is too proud to beg, appeared at the mayor's office and asked to be given a job sawing wood at the almshouse. She carefully deposited the saw in the mayor's waiting room while she told her story in the inner sanctum. She has four children.

Richards M. Bradley of Boston, as one of the trustees of the will of Thomas Thompson, is allowed to use his discretion in the expenditure of the income of a $1,000,000 fund left by Mr. Thompson, a former Boston merchant, for the benefit of seamstresses, needle-women and shop girls of Brattleboro, Vt., and Rhinebeck, N. Y., according to a decision made by Judge Jenney of the Supreme Court, Boston.

Prohibition has increased illicit traffic in narcotic drugs, Charles S. Robinson, for 14 years a prison officer told the Massachusetts Legislative Committee on Public Health at a hearing on bills filed by director William S. Briry of the division of Registration, Department of Civil Service and Registration. One of the bills aims to establish in the department a division of narcotic drug control and to compel every dealer in narcotics to register.

Gov. Cox of Massachusetts points out that a deficit of nearly $1,000,000 confronted the present administration when it took office. This is referred to as a "deplorable condition," and he adds that the condition of the treasury at the close of business for the fiscal year 1920 was "far less favorable than in previous years" and "far from satisfactory." As a result of this condition the state tax for 1921 will probably be $15,000,000, an increase of $1,000,000 over that of 1920. In addition to the $15,000,000, which will be levied on the cities and towns of the commonwealth, it will be necessary to raise $2,000,000 by other forms of taxation, and the Governor recommends increasing fees which the state now charges for services rendered, in granting charters, motor vehicle licenses, etc.

The American Wringer Company, Providence, the largest concern of its kind in the world, was placed in the hands of a temporary receiver by Presiding Justice Tanner in the supreme court, upon petition of Sullivan Bal-lou, secretary of the company. The petition declared the company, which is capitalized at $1,750,000 was insolvent. The court's decree also enjoins starting of suits against the company by directors. Depression due to the war is said to be the chief reason for the company's difficulties.

New Fossil Beds Discovered.

What is pronounced by scientists as one of the most perfect fossil beds in the United States in respect to preservation, has been uncovered in the mountains near Kemmerer, Wyo. The fossils are those of fish bodies and represent more than a dozen distinct types, several of which, it is said, have been hitherto unknown to the scientific world. The entire bodies, in several cases, are intact, and the bones and tissues, usually obliterated, are clearly definable.

Ways to Clean Books.

Speaking of books, most family libraries are disfigured by one or two once-lovely volumes in unpractical bindings of pale silk or white leather, long since dimmed by grime. Art gum or a soft kneaded eraser may clean them. If not, try fine powdered pumice lightly applied with a clean camellia. This is what picture dealers use to clean the margins of old prints. It roughens the surface less than rubber.

In Grant's Cabinet.

President Grant had two secretaries of state: Elihu B. Washburn of Illinois was appointed March 5, 1869, but resigned six days later to accept the post of ambassador to France. Hamilton Fish succeeded Washburn. He was reappointed at the beginning of Grant's second term and remained to its end.

A Straight Tip.

"I have something I have to ask you—er—something—er—very—close to my heart, and—er—er—" "I think I can guess what it is!" "Ah, you have divined! You know—you—er—" "Yes, you want to ask me where I put your hat when you came in!"

WEYMOUTH, FEBRUARY 4, 1921

WEYMOUTH AND BRAINTREE

—Past Commander Charles E. Bicknell of Reynolds Post 58, G. A. R., paid a visit last Saturday to A. J. Canterbury at his home in Braintree. Mr. Canterbury was years ago a resident of this town and his father was at the same company and position as Mr. Bicknell in the Civil War. It was the first time they had met in 62 years.

—There are a large number of cases of scarlet fever in town. Monday the three children of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Floyd were taken ill with the disease. All cases are reported as very light form. In East Braintree the schools are closed this week on account of the disease and the buildings are being fumigated.

—Mrs. Edward H. Frary of Summer street, who has been quite ill, is now much improved.

—David Godfrey of Front street, who has been confined to his home by illness, is now able to be out.

—Are you one of the many in East Braintree who are enjoying the excellent service of the South Braintree We Wash Laundry? Their motto is: "Perfect Service" by telephoning Braintree 6 W or 507 M.—Advertisement.

—Daniel J. Donovan, a well known citizen, died at his home, 315 Washington street, Monday night of heart failure. He was for years a foreman at the shoe factory of Stacy-Adams, Boston. He was in his usual health until a short time before his death. He was a member of Div. 6, A. O. U. and the Weymouth Firemen's Relief Association, being for years clerk of the latter. One of the fire department, he survived by his son, John, and daughter, Mary, and his wife, Mrs. M. J. Kearns and Mrs. J. F. Wollast.

—Elizabeth A. and Marguerite B. Donovan of this town. The funeral took place yesterday morning from the Church of the Sacred Heart, Mass. was celebrated by the pastor, Rev. Fr. J. B. Holland. The music was under the direction of the organist, Mrs. John Hanley. Miss Helen Caulfield was soloist. There were many beautiful floral tributes. The ushers were John H. Coffey and John W. Donovan. Burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery, Quincy. The bearers were: F. Dwyer, James A. Pray, Thomas Fitzgerald, John B. Whelan, Maurice Cleary and Patrick E. Corridan.

—Porter Thompson has taken a position with the American Book Co. of Boston and New York, publishers of educational books, in their sales department.

—The young people of the First Universalist church are busily rehearsing for the play: "No Trespassing" (by Evelyn Gray Whiting) which is to be presented this month.

—William DeNell of 140 Broad street son of Mrs. Richard DeNell returned Feb. 2 from Japan, where he has been for the past two and one-half years.

—The Dancing on Monday evening at the Weymouth Club.

—The Community Brotherhood of the Baptist church will hold their monthly meeting in the vestry Wednesday evening, Feb. 9, at 7.45 o'clock. It will be a joint meeting with the Sisterhood and the speaker of the evening will be Rev. C. J. Underhill of Lynn, a former pastor. The Concorde Quartet will sing and there will be a light lunch served.

—Mrs. William Gorman of Worcester terrace is in Fall River, where she was called the first of the week by the serious illness of her mother.

—Early Sunday evening the automobile of Daniel C. Smith became stalled on Front street near Congress street, just in front of an electric car. Mr. Smith attempted to jump out but was struck by the car and seriously injured. Dr. R. S. Carr rendered first aid and he was rushed to the Quincy hospital. Robert Sprague, who was also in the automobile, escaped with a few bruises. It is thought Smith will recover.

—Light Leg Spring Lamb 36c lb. Fancy Maine potatoes 39c pk. Strictly fresh eggs 50c doz. Pillsbury's Best Flour $1.55 bag at Hunt's Market Grocery.—Advertisement.

NORTH WEYMOUTH

—Mrs. Mary Swan of North street had a narrow escape from serious injury Monday morning. While emptying a pan of hot ashes her apron and waist caught fire. Mrs. Swan made an unsuccessful attempt to put out the fire with snow. Mrs. Joseph Gay, a neighbor, saw Mrs. Swan's plight and catching up a heavy rug rushed to her assistance and succeeded in stifling the fire. Dr. Drake was called and found Mrs. Swan painfully but not dangerously burned. The fact of her having on a woolen skirt and gloves saved more serious injury.

—Everett Otis of Tufts College was the guest over the week-end of his cousin, Mrs. James Melville.

—Miss Carrie Rogers of Bridge street is the guest of relatives and friends in Waltham.

—Mrs. Wesley K. Jackman of Sea street is confined to the house by illness.

—Miss Annie Dunn of Lovell street has returned to her studies at Burdette's College, having been ill for the past week.

—Harold White, a World War veteran, has returned from the Waltham hospital where he has been for a throat operation.

—The L. A. K. C. B. C. held an all-day circle at the home of Mrs. Anthoine on Rosemont road Wednesday. Mrs. Gertrude Souther and Mrs. Place were on the dinner committee. —Marion, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eliza Walker, celebrated her eighth birthday at the home of her parents on Pratt avenue Wednesday afternoon from 3.30 till 5.30. Eight of her small friends enjoyed her hospitality. Indoor games were played and refreshments served by Mrs. Walker. Each guest was served with an individual birthday cake with decorations of candles. Miss Marion was the recipient of many pretty and useful gifts.

—Fred Davis of Birchbrow avenue was so unfortunate as to fall from the deck of a vessel he was working on at the wharf of the American Agriculture Co. at Fort Point on Monday. Mr. Davis thinks he enjoys salt-water bathing better in the summer than at this season of the year with the glass near the zero point.

—Mr. Alfred O. Lee and family have moved from the Jenkins' house on North street to Wessagusset road.

—Last Friday evening Mrs. Sadie Wolfe of Newton street entertained the work committee of the Daughters of Veterans. Plans were made for the work of the coming year.

—William J. Dorley, the well known grocery man formerly connected with Dorley Bros., has severed his connections with that firm and will open a store in Bicknell Square, North Weymouth, with a full line of high grade meats, fruits and provisions at an early date.—Advertisement.

—Bennie Bean of Bicknell Square is confined to his home by illness.

—Troop 6, B. S. A., celebrated Parents night last Monday in the vestry of the Pilgrim church. Mr. Leonard Thompson of Hingham gave an interesting talk on the scout jamboree he attended last summer. An exhibition of scout work was given by boys of Troop 6 and refreshments were served by a committee of Scouts, assisted by Mrs. John Tower and Miss May Carter.

—A meeting was held at the home of Charles Menchin on Tuesday evening in interest of forming a troop of sea scouts. Duncan MacKellar, scout executive of Old Colony council was present and gave an interesting talk on the work of the Sea Scouts. Twelve young men between the ages of 15 and 18 were present and are very enthusiastic in forming a band of Sea Scouts.

—Abe Lodgen has sold his market at Bicknell Square to Mr. Dorley of Quincy.

—At the whist party given at the home of Mrs. Nathaniel Ford last Friday prizes were awarded to Mrs. Charles Dwyer and Mrs. Starr.

—The annual rollcall of the Pilgrim society was held at the church vestry on Wednesday evening. Supper was served by ladies of the society. The speaker was Dr. Emrick, secretary of the Howe Missionary society.

—The Wessagusset club held a very successful ball at Masonic hall, East Weymouth, Wednesday evening.

—While in Quincy last Friday Thomas Dolan of Newton street had a narrow escape from serious injury when he cranked his auto, which was in gear. The machine started, pinning Mr. Dolan between the front of his truck and the back of another car. His cries for help brought assistance and disengaging further aid Mr. Dolan drove home, apparently no worse for his adventure.

—Miss Jeanette Perrow of the Heights spent the week-end the guest of relatives in Braintree.

—"Freckles" will be presented under the auspices of the Men's Fellowship class at the Pilgrim church on Friday evening.

—Miss Edith Tully of Pearl street entertained Miss Esther Cresco of Milton over the week-end.

—Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Blackwell and family spent Sunday in Brockton the guests of friends.

—The Athens basketball team beat the Braintree freshmen by a score of 17 to 14 at Clapp Memorial on Thursday afternoon. The feature of the game was the shooting by Dorey and Riley.

SOUTH WEYMOUTH

—South Weymouth briefs will be found this week in the South Weymouth edition.

—Mrs. A. G. Sanborn of West street is spending a few days with friends in Newton.

CLUB and SOCIAL

—Susannah Tufts chapter, D. A. R., held its regular meeting Monday at the home of Mrs. Albert E. Avery. Mrs. Wieting, the regent, presiding. After a business session Mr. John H. Guttererson entertained the members for an hour or more with a talk on: "Our Country's Epochs, beginning with 1492 up to the present time. He was very interesting and much enjoyed by all. Each member was given a program so one could keep in touch with the different epochs as he touched upon them. There was a fair sized company present although the weather was not all that could be desired. Refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. Avery, assisted by her two daughters, Susan and Dorothy Avery.

The Unmarried Mother

THE BIGGEST PLAY THAT WILL BE EVER SHOWN IN QUINCY

Quincy Theatre -- Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday -- FEB. 7-8-9

One of the World's Greatest Problems That Women Suffrage Will Correct

BY THE AL LUTTRINGER STOCK COMPANY | MATINEE DAILY FOR LADIES ONLY

The Play That Has Everything — Laughter and Tears — Thrills — And a Sweep of Drama, Wit and Romance

IT IS THE UNMARRIED MOTHER:

By forbidden paths she has attained the grace of maternity, but its glory is for her transfigured into a badge of unutterable shame. It might be thought that a social phenomenon so universal, yet so sad, would not be left chiefly to the pen of the novelist or poet; and that more frequently some endeavor would be made to fathom cause and seek prevention of an evil so nearly affecting human happiness. A phrase of human experience touched by the genius of Scott, of Goethe, of Victor Hugo and Nathaniel Hawthorne need not be shuffled out of sight as so repulsive for consideration.

Some of the greatest soldiers, Statesmen, adventurers of ancient and modern times, William the Conqueror, of England; Pizarro the Conqueror of Peru; Marshal de Saxe; General Burgoyne; the most brilliant man in French journalism Emile de Girardin; The Eloquent farsighted French Ecclesiastic, the Bishop of Orleans whom the French Academy raised to a seat among its immortals, son of a maid-servant at a Swiss Inn knew no father; George Sand; Boccaccio, the Father of Italian prose; Erasmus, the greatest name in the history of the Renaissance; Leonardo di Vinci, the painter; and Alexander Dumas and Alexander Hamilton of today all might have borne the sinster upon their escutcheon—all were sons of Unmarried Mothers.

CHICAGO HERALD, Nov 23rd—Miss Katherine Anthony spoke on "The Child of the Unmarried Mother" at the morning meeting of the reform department of the Chicago's Woman Club yesterday.

"Woman of Scandinavia are protected since the passage of the law that gives the child of the unmarried mother the right to the father's name," said Miss Anthony. "The child there also shares in the father's estate equally with his legitimate children, and its mother is cared for by the government. Now that woman of Scandinavia have the ballot there will even be greater advancement made in laws protecting women."

CHICAGO DAY BOOK, Nov 23rd—Women of the United States will vote away the heavy handicap society has placed upon children born of unmarried mothers.

In the fourteen suffrage states plans are being made to procure legislation to remove the bar sinister from the child born out of wedlock!

From the moment of its birth, the child, under the proposed law, will be entitled to bear its father's name and legally demand his support.

The National Council of Women Voters began the movement last Fall at its National convention.

CHICAGO HERALD, Oct. 21st—The Illinois Equal Suffrage Association in Convention at Springfield yesterday endorsed a proposal by Dr. Lucy Waite of Chicago that the parents of a child born out of wedlock automatically become husband and wife at its birth.

CHICAGO JOURNAL, July 2nd—Whether Britain and France has any surplus crop of "war babies" to care for or not, one country in Europe has made provision to care for peace babies who happen to be born out of wedlock, that country is democratic Norway.

CHICAGO HERALD, Nov 27th—The penalties which are exacted of unmarried mothers and of their pitiful offspring are barbarous in humane society. They do not conform to the modern idea of justice.

The AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

ALL LOST SIGHT IN THE WAR

Members of Evergreen Post, No. 5, American Legion, Eulogized by National Commander.

The spirit of the American Legion does not lag in the members of Evergreen post, No. 5, in spite of the fact that all of its members are men who lost their sight during the World war.

When F. W. Galbraith, Jr., national commander, heard of the formation of the post recently, he immediately wrote a letter to Charles Frear, post commander. Mr. Galbraith intends to visit the post in the near future.

The national commander's letter, in part, follows: "I am touched beyond expression that these comrades of ours have seen fit to associate themselves together in affiliation with the great American Legion for the purpose of realizing more fully those ideals for which they fought. It is an inspiration to know that, scarred and maimed to an extent which would lead many to feel that to them there would be no further obligation to give to the world, but rather to live and receive, they still feel a desire to give something further of service to their country and community. This is indeed true nobility."

LEGION OFFICER IN MEXICO

Commander of Department Also Member of National Executive Committee of the Legion.

Although Leigh H. Rovzar, commander of the department of Mexico of the American Legion was president of a large brokerage firm in Mexico City, Mexico, at the start of the World war, he enlisted in the army early in the game.

Mr. Rovzar commanded a battery of field artillery as first lieutenant and upon promotion to a captaincy, served in the Thirty-third field artillery, remaining with that organization during its service overseas. He was discharged from service at the Walter Reed hospital in Washington, D. C., June 10, 1919, and returned to his home in Mexico City.

An organizer of Alan Seeger post of the Legion at Mexico City, Mr. Rovzar was named as its first commander. He was recently elected commander of his department and a member of the national executive committee of the Legion.

IS PIONEER LEGION WORKER

Washington Man, Field Organizer, Will Help Supervise National Movement for More Members.

Robert A. Le Roux, who was one of the pioneer American Legion workers in the state of Washington, has been appointed field organizer at national headquarters, and left recently for Nevada to begin work there.

Mr. Le Roux is a newspaper man and has had considerable experience in the field of organization. He served with a Canadian infantry unit in France during the war. He is one of several national field organizers whose duty it will be to supervise speakers and other organizers in the national movement for more members for the American Legion. The membership campaign to be carried out this year will be national in scope.

DADDY OF LEGION 'POPPY DAY'

Buckeye Major Credited With Originating Idea of Wearing Blossom in Memory of Heroes.

Major Wade C. Christy of Youngstown Post, No. 15, of the American Legion at Youngstown, O., is said to have originated the Legion's "Poppy day" and the idea of selling poppies on the street, to be worn in remembrance of our dead heroes of the World war.

The poppy was adopted at the Cleveland convention of the Legion as the official flower of the former service men's organization.

RAY, VETERAN OF TWO WARS

Commander of South Dakota Department of the Legion Has Had Much Experience.

F. B. Ray, commander of the South Dakota department of the American Legion, is a veteran of both the Spanish-American and World wars. During the days of '98 and '99, Mr. Ray served in 16 battles and skirmishes.

After being mustered out of the service, Mr. Ray enlisted in the South Dakota National Guard and was a member of that organization when the United States entered the World war. During the latter war he served as commanding officer of the One Hundred and Thirty-fifth and later the Three Hundred and Fiftieth Infantry. He is now cashier of a bank at Yankton, S. D.

Mr. Ray is a charter member of Roy Anderson post, No. 12, of the Legion, and served as its commander. He was elected commander of the South Dakota department in 1919.

HAS RENDERED GOOD SERVICE

Commander of Oregon Department of Legion, Has Deserved Title of "Fighting Parson."

Rev. William S. Gilbert, commander of the Oregon department of the American Legion, is a fighting chaplain who has administered to the spiritual wants of Oregon troops in the Spanish-American war, the Philippine insurrection, during their service on the Mexican border, and for 17 months in France with the A. E. F.

His military career started 26 years ago, when he became chaplain in the Oregon National Guard. During the World war he was chaplain of the One Hundred and Sixty-second Infantry, Forty-first division and First army corps. He received the Croix de Guerre.

The "fighting parson" has held a number of pastorates in the state of Oregon, and was for three years president of Philomath college. He was recently appointed regent of Oregon State university by the governor of that state.

CHOOSE AIR MAN COMMANDER

Former Balloon Pilot, Lawyer, Heads Nebraska Department of the American Legion.

Nebraska members of the American Legion have elected Robert G. Simmons, a former balloon pilot, as department commander. Mr. Simmons is now an attorney in Scottsbluff, Neb.

The former pilot entered the air service October 28, 1917, and was licensed as a spherical balloon pilot by the Aero Club of America in February, 1918, and commissioned as a second lieutenant in the air service in March, 1918.

For some time he was an instructor in courts-martial and then was in command of the Sixty-third, Eighty-third and Seventy-fourth balloon companies at Fort Omaha. He was commissioned a first lieutenant in June, 1918.

Mr. Simmons is a graduate of the law college of the University of Nebraska. He served for one term as county attorney.

GOOD SHOWING IN SERVICE

Commander of Nevada Department of the Legion Rose From Private to First Lieutenant.

T. L. Withers, commander of the Nevada department of the American Legion, rose from the rank of private in the National Guard to that of first lieutenant during his military career, which was spent in various organizations of the Coast Artillery corps.

Educated at Thatcher Preparatory school, Nordhoff, Cal., the Universities of Nevada, California and Virginia, Mr. Withers acted as instructor in mathematics and chemistry for some time and then entered the practice of law at Reno, Nev. He served as chairman of the Red Cross Roll Call in 1917 and chairman of the home service section, American Red Cross, Reno, Nev., and was active in organizing the Nevada department of the American Legion.

To Finish the Job. Psmear—Pretty good, don't you think? I made it for a cover design. Kritt If you could only design a picture.

POULTRY

DIFFERENT KINDS OF GEESE

Toulouse Is Most Popular on Account of Large Size—Emden and Chinese Are Liked.

The Toulouse is the giant of the goose family. It is a native of France. Its ordinary weight is from 15 to 20 pounds, but it is not uncommon to find specimens weighing from 25 to 30 pounds. This is the typical gray goose, but beneath and behind these body feathers are white areas in the plumage.

It is said by those who have had experience with this breed that young geese during the first year lay from 15 to 25 eggs, when older they may lay from 25 to 40.

The Emden is a popular breed in some places. The bodies of the birds are snowy white, the legs and bills yellow. They have good type and conformation. In size it is the same as standard for the Toulouse, though it is said a smaller number of Emden reach this standard than the Toulouse.

The Emden, when well bred, properly fed and prepared, makes a carcass that sells well on the market. But it is said that many breeders in this country have not given much attention to fine quality.

There are two varieties of Chinese geese, Brown and White. This breed has different characteristics from the others mentioned. The birds stand more erect and have longer and slenderer necks than the others. The Brown Chinese have at the base of the bill a peculiar dark-colored knob. The Brown is considered the most prolific of all the geese. The standard weight for the gander is 15 pounds, goose 12 pounds. The female is said to lay from 40 to 50 eggs, sometimes more. A large per cent of the eggs are generally fertile.

The African is not at all common in this country. The color of this breed is dark gray on the back and light beneath. There is a dark stripe on the neck that extends well down the back. The bill is black and has a knob something like that of the Brown Chinese.

The color of the eggs is orange. The geese of this breed lay better than Emden, but not so well as the

A Toulouse Goose.

Toulouse. The carcasses of old birds are rather hard to prepare for market. The skin is dark and there is down and also pin feathers that give the carcass a poor appearance on the market.

TUBERCULOSIS IN CHICKENS

Disease Is Quite Common and Is Caused by Quarters Being Poorly Ventilated and Lighted.

Tuberculosis in poultry results in a loss of weight. The birds may look all right for a time, but they will be found to be light. Mr. Barton, of the North Dakota Agricultural college, states that in the later stages the birds become weak, often they cannot fly onto the roosts, but sit in a corner, and after a little die. According to Mr. Barton, this disease is quite common, affecting turkeys as well as chickens. One way to tell if the birds have tuberculosis is to cut them open. If the bird is light in weight and the liver is enlarged and spotted it may be quite safe to say that it has been suffering from tuberculosis.

He states that small quarters, poorly ventilated, poorly lighted, and damp are conducive to the spread of the disease. The best remedy is to dispose of all infected birds and if the flock is badly infected to dispose of all the birds; then thoroughly clean the house and yards, disinfect and start over again with tuberculosis-free birds. Mr. Barton recommends a disinfectant made up in the ratio of one ounce of creolin and one ounce of carbolic acid to one gallon of water.

PROPER SHELTER FOR GEESE

Some Protection Should Be Provided During Winter and Stormy Weather—Have It Dry.

Except in winter or during stormy weather, when some protection should be provided, mature geese do not usually need a house. Some kind of shelter, such as a shed open on the south side, a poultry house, or a barn, is usually provided. The goose house should be kept clean and plenty of clean straw provided for the floor.

HOME TOWN HELPS

WASHINGTON HAD RIGHT IDEA

Disposition of the Farm Buildings at Mount Vernon Little Short of Ideal Arrangement.

A survey of the attempts of many modern farmers to create a humanizing atmosphere around the farm house shows that this effect is accomplished by psychological barriers, screens and enclosures. The work appliances of the farm are necessarily in such close proximity to the house that exclusion is done by suggestion, rather than by actual shutting out of every scintilla of farm work. The low wall, the hedge, the clump of trees, running vines, are mental screens. We can peer over or around, but we do not.

Farm Buildings Screened.

Roofs and outlines of farm buildings are visible, but lost to sense in the competing humanism this side of the barriers.

The scattered situation of the various farm buildings and yards about the ordinary farm house, often at every angle, produces the serious difficulties of the detaching process. George Washington, the farmer, disposed his barns, outbuildings, yards and gardens, at the wings of his Mount Vernon house. The rear was left open and free for stretching lawn, sky above, tall tree foliage at sides, sky at end of vista, meadow land dropping out of sight. The front was "laid down handsomely in grass," as George Washington described the lawn; while the Potomac river, a real moving picture, ran among the oaks on the river bank.

FUTURE CITY WILL BE CLEAN

Declaration That Electricity Will Make Busy Centers of Population Desirable Living Places.

Dr. Charles A. Steinmetz, "electrical wizard of Schenectady," believes it will be illegal to build a fire in the limits of the cities of the future, which will be smokeless and dustless. He made this prediction at a dinner of the Bala-Cynwyd Neighborhood club in Philadelphia. He painted a word picture of a present-day city in the throes of an "electricity strike," and showed how a city depends on electricity in transportation and manufacturing.

"But," said Doctor Steinmetz, "although we are absolutely dependent on our electricity today, we have still only begun to use it. In the city present methods of manufacture will be replaced with electrical methods. The present city, with its dust and smoke, will be unknown. It will be against the law to have a fire in the city limits. Life then will be worth living in cities."

Heat Seeps Out of Walls.

Engineers find it takes two or three times as much fuel as it should to heat the ordinary dwelling.

That is because houses frequently are not built to conserve heat, or for any purpose but to sell. The way to heat a room economically is to insulate it. Most persons know that air space in walls conserves heat. But this is true only if the walls hold dead air. Most walls and ceilings aren't tight enough. Hot air goes through them like water through a net.

Banking up lower walls of houses with dry leaves and earth still is practiced in cold states, particularly in the country. But most city and town houses can be made tighter with little effort. The insulation of walls and ceilings can be improved, and much coal saved.

It's worth considering in places where fuel is scarce or costly. An examination of many houses will show that the occupants literally are trying to "heat all outdoors."

Drive for Building.

In the belief that business and industry of all kinds depend to a large extent for success on a resumption of building activity throughout the country, a group of business men in St. Paul, Minn., are launching a campaign for more construction.

Its Sort.

"James certainly does tax my patience when he persists in coming in the parlor without wiping his muddy feet."

"Ah, I see; a sort of income tax."

Spring Suits in Great Variety

NEW models in suits for spring reveal much ingenuity in designing as well as some departures from style features that have proved popular during the past winter. Embroideries are retained and braids are featured. Skirts vary in width from medium to wide—that is, wide by comparison with those that have been popular with very young women, and in the displays so far extremely short skirts are conspicuous by their absence. There are many straight coats, varying greatly in length. Some of them barely cover the waist line and others are finger-tip length, with many gradations between. As a rule, skirts are plain. Belts are made of the materials and are narrow and inconspicuous.

If one's ambition is to acquire a suit that is unlike anything that has been owned before, the suit at the left of the two shown above, will prove interesting. The body of the ingeniously cut coat appears to be merely a slashed cape, the slashes forming rounded panels, below the waist line, that overlap. They are trimmed with narrow braid. The collar promises to be the most popular type in spring suits and the skirt carries out the panel arrangement suggested by the coat. Soutache and other braids command admiration by the exquisite exactness in workmanship with which they are applied.

The suit at the right is typical of the box-coat model, straight in front, with a slight flare at the back, where it is a little longer than in front. The skirt is an extreme in length and width—more ample than the average. Silk embroidery in two colors and soft shades finishes this handsome model. In the matter of decoration, it remains to be proven which will be best liked, but embroideries have the lead just now.

An Excursion Among Blouses

NOW that the new blouses for spring have arrived in force, a little excursion among them is a sight-seeing event of much pleasure. The charm of novelty in design is added to that of unusually beautiful color and color combinations. Changeable taffetas present a new field for the designers and they are exploiting it with great success. Georgette crepe in two-color blouses, still proves irresistible to those who are responsible for the styles and georgette maintains its place at the head of the little procession of lovely fabrics used for spring and summer blouses.

In spite of early indications to the contrary, the last arrivals have elbow sleeves, although there are many with longer sleeves. It is likely that the short sleeved models will at least hold their own through the summer.

The most noticeable style point made by the new models is the lack of any definition of the waistline—in the front of the blouses at least. The body of the garment is cut to extend nine inches below the waist and often extended at the sides to form a soft girdle at the back. Much ingenuity in cutting is the result of this idea.

The pretty blouse of soft satin, shown in the picture, ignores the waistline entirely—back and front. It honors the mode for iridescent beads in an effective embroidery and shows its allegiance to longer sleeves and tab trimming about the bottom, both innovations for the new season. The changeable taffetas are often trimmed with bands or straps of the silk, frayed into narrow fringe along each edge, this fringe revealing one of the two colors used in weaving the silk. With the addition of a little needlework this makes a beautiful ornamentation.

IN DRAPED EFFECT

Improvement on Ultra-Decollete Dresses Is Manifest.

Dinner Gowns Cling at Hem, While They Are Full Over the Hips.

It is very interesting, writes a Paris fashion correspondent, to note what Worth is doing with regard to evening dresses this season. This maison has always been celebrated for its gorgeous dinner gowns and toilettes for ceremonious occasions. It is not here that one looks for eccentric models nor for sensational displays, but Worth sets the styles for women of refined taste, and so it is necessary to look closely at what he designs.

This season he is showing very lovely dinner gowns which have a draped effect. Several of his best models seem to cling at the hem while they are full over the hips. In some cases there is a distinct train, cut in with the dress itself.

This is a welcome innovation, and one which likely will prove very popular. For a long time past nearly all our evening trains have been separate from the dress—arranged in scarf fashion and often in twin-form—one at either side. Or we have had court trains—these chiefly for wedding dresses. But it is evident that Worth intends to revive genuine trains, cut with the dress and forming part of it.

Trains of this order are specially suitable for matrons or for women of full figure. The picturesque scarf train is also much in evidence, but it will no longer be considered the only possible.

One model represents some of the latest ideas of the Maison Worth: exquisite materials skillfully manipulated; a gorgeous simplicity wedded to extravagance of detail.

The corsage of this model is worthy of close attention; this is the latest thing and it is a great improvement upon the ultra-decollete dresses we have had with us so long.

Rosettes of Malines.

Little choux or rosettes of malines are added to one or both shoulders of some of the newer evening dresses. Tiny bouquets of flowers or small feathers are used in the same way.

SOME OF THE LIKED COLORS

Chow and Blonde Are Shades Now Meeting With Favor in Latest Wearing Apparel.

Chow is a color you cannot help but like and you need hardly be told that it is that rich red brown one sees in the coat of a thoroughbred chow dog. It recently made its debut in the smart shops in a collection of polo coats and wraps made of chow colored camel's hair cloth.

Blonde is a color that is meeting with favor. It is hard to describe, but if you think that it is the color of blonde hair you are quite off the track. It is, on the contrary, a sort of drab dull shade of tan. In net or chiffon it suggests a spider web or cobweb as much as anything gray, in a way, but browner than the usual gray.

NEW CHECKED SILK TAFFETAS

Garment Is Made Up in Quaint Style With Snuggly Draped Bodice and Full Tunic.

The new checked silk taffetas are made up in a variety of ways, among which is a quaint frock with snuggly draped bodice and a full tunic edged with frayed ruffles of the material and puffed at the hips. Another pretty dress in brown check taffeta is made with a finely plaited skirt.

The full skirt and tunic on some of the dresses are trimmed with cording. For instance, a navy blue taffeta dress has many rows of cording at the hips and around the lower edge of the wide tunic.

Pin tucks, finely grouped, pre-

HAT SHOULD SUIT THE FACE

Woman Who Has Passed Prime Knows There Is Certain Type She Should Wear.

"The vintage of 1907," a teacher said the other day in referring to her hat, which some one had been admiring for, having bought a good hat in that far-off time, she has it renovated and renewed every winter. One merit that the hat possesses is that it fits and suits her style, for it becomes more and more difficult for women who have passed their first youth to find hats that are "suited" to them. A favorite milliner makes the same hat over year after year and, while it never loses its look of smartness, it is not in the style. But the woman who has passed her prime knows that there is a certain kind of hat that she must wear. Mrs. Harding is said to have adopted almost exclusively the tricorn shape, which is a very good hat for a woman of her age. One will find that the best-dressed women are those who wear hats that are becoming to them and do not trouble about the latest fashion. The milliner who realizes this will not try to persuade the woman of middle age to wear any of the "stylish" shapes. Can one conceive of anything more pathetic than a woman of middle age with a tam-o'-shanter perched coquettishly upon her hair, unless it happens that the "tam" is the only style that is really becoming to her?

Decorative and Useful.

Unusually attractive is a set of boudoir candlesticks of blue iris and rose iris heavy glass. Candles can be obtained to match these. Bud vases to hold a single flower can also be purchased of the colored glass and would make inexpensive dressing table accessories.

An Attractive Veil.

An attractive new veil is a fine, plain mesh, with lavish embroidery on the part which is arranged over the hat. It is worn with a plain hat.

vide a decorative touch for a dress of navy taffeta, with straight hanging bodice and full skirt, in which the tucks appear as vertical stripes. There is no belt, but the fullness is tied at the sides. The three-quarter sleeves are finished with a puff of the material over an undersleeve of cream lace.

A brown checked taffeta dress made with a long draped bodice and circular tunic has a circular cuff on the sleeves, with a facing of emerald green to match the facing of the collar.

Eyelet embroidery in silk is used to trim some of the taffeta dresses. One striped taffeta is made in chemise style belted with a wide girdle of chamol skin, on which narrow red and black ribbons are applied.

Ostrich Toque.

The lovely ostrich toques are quite bewitching when worn over a young face. They are covered with ostrich, the flues almost uncured, quite soft and fluffy in appearance. They are especially pretty in gray.

Pretty Pincushion.

A pretty pincushion is barrel-shaped. The cover is made of a large piece of satin ribbon and is filled with wadding. It is trimmed with stained fruit and ribbon at each end. A narrow ribbon is used to suspend it.

Fashionable Lines.

Long lines, tight sleeves, high collars, three-quarter length bellows coats, skirts with narrow hems and of a length suited to the individual are some of the new features of the winter costumes.

PLAITED SKIRTS ARE AGAIN THE STYLE

THERE was never a more cheerful outlook for separate skirts than the season just ahead of them. They have more than met all our expectations as to what the spring would bring after their triumph of last summer, and the models for southern tourists foretell another season of delightfully cool and dainty skirts for summer wear. In the meantime there are models for sports and street wear between seasons that meet every requirement that the most exacting taste can make. They are made of wool materials in stripes and crossbars, and apparently the patterns have been woven with reference to the dominant feature of the styles, which is plaits. It is plaited skirts again with all the emphasis possible on "plaited."

Most materials show a plain stripe alternated with a fancy stripe, and they are made up usually in box plaits with the plain stripe inverted. There are box plaits of all widths from an inch to six inches across and the striped and barred materials offer unending opportunities for ingenuity in managing plaits. In the skirt pictured the material is woven in very wide stripes of two colors, and both box and side plaits have been used. The pockets and belt are well managed and finished with very large, handsome buttons.

Any one who is ambitious to prepare for summer in advance of its coming may make up skirts of baronet satin, wash satin, tricolette, crepe de chine or other suitable weaves in white or white and a color. Not all of these are plaited. A plain skirt of white wash satin has four gores in yellow satin set in, one at the front and back and one at each side. They are joined at the top, about seven inches wide at the bottom and terminate at the hip line with an embroidered arrow head. Widths of crepe de chine in white and a color are sewed together—four of each—alternating the color, for skirts that are side plaited or widths of plain and fancy weaves in silks are managed in the same way. Among the newest and prettiest ideas appear little coats with hats to match, made of gay cretonne, to be worn with wool skirts in quiet colors. Ribbon in the prevailing color in the skirt, borders the coat and trims the hat.

Luxurious Furnishings

THOSE lovely and intensely feminine ladies of old romantic times, in their wide skirts and many furbelows, appear to have fascinated the artists of their day and all those that have come after them. Everywhere, in luxurious furnishings, we see the ideas that pleased them, surviving all the years that have passed and even themselves portrayed in miniature to grace the homes of the most modern of Eve's daughters. The silks and satins and gold lace and blossoms that they revealed in all sorts of pretty things—in picture frames, pincushions, covers for perfume bottles and powder boxes, bud vases, trays, lamp and candle shades, and no end of other small furnishings.

Just now the miniature ladies themselves are used to cover and tone down electric lights, or to conceal telephones. The figures shown in the picture above include three tall beauties made to cover the telephone, and one shorter one for screening a light. They are all clad in lovely clothes made of ribbons—with laces and flowers bearing the rich fabrics company. The shops have on sale the foundation for their ornaments, the chine or bisque busts and arms attached to whatever wire frame may be required, and each individual may dress the lady of her choice, as she will, copying to the last detail the costume she selects.

Wide ribbon also serves for covering the handsome pillow shown, in which plain satin and a metallic weave are combined. It is completed by two flowerlike rosettes of the same ribbons, one posed at each end. A perfume bottle, powder box and bud vase finish the group of fancies inspired by beautiful ribbons; they employ gold lace and tiny flowers, and are made to match. There is hardly an article used on the dressing table which may not be covered or adorned in this way.

C. M. A. MEN'S CLUB

High water mark in attendance was reached at the February meeting of the Men's Club of the Clapp Memorial Association, requiring an extra table at the banquet. A hot roast beef dinner as served, the meat being carved on the table.

William J. Holbrook, the new president, presided and introduced as the speaker of the evening Carl F. Doble of the Pneumatic Scale Corporation of Norfolk Downs, who gave an illustrated talk on: "Weighing and Packing Machinery" in which his company are pioneers and have sent machines to all parts of the world.

At the outset he showed the need of sealed packages, as goods thus packed were cleaner, free from adulteration, more accurately weighed, better protection to trademarks of manufacturers etc. The illustrations were moving pictures of the plants of well known National manufacturers, and clearly showed how the machines handled the cartons; how they were opened one at a time, the bottom sealed, then filled and weighed and sealed and prepared for shipment. Everything was almost human, and the audience was keenly interested. Mr. Doble was asked several questions and given a rising vote of thanks.

VIRGIN—HUNT

A home wedding took place Monday at high noon at the residence of Mrs. Ella Hunt, 105 Front street, when her daughter, Louise Phillips Hunt, was united in marriage to Charles Lester Virgin, son of Dr. and Mrs. Franklin P. Virgin. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Francis E. Webster, rector of Christ Episcopal church, Waltham, in the presence of the immediate families of the couple. The couple were unattended. The bride wore a travelling gown of beaver duvet de laine, with hat to match, and carried a bouquet of violets. An informal reception and lunch followed the ceremony, after which Mr. and Mrs. Virgin left on a wedding trip. They were the recipients of many handsome and costly gifts.

Both are popular in social circles. The bride is a graduate of the Weymouth schools and Simmons College. She was for several years assistant librarian at the Perkins Institution for the Blind at Watertown. The groom is a World War veteran and saw service overseas. He is an optician, being connected with a Boston firm. On their return from their wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Virgin will reside at their new home, 169 Washington street, Weymouth.

When Boys Worked At 50 Cents Per Day

JACKSON SQUARE, 1880

But let's get back to Rice's tavern, a popular place when Medford rum and molasses were as common a drink as tea or coffee today. But 60 years ago drinking had gone out of fashion and liquor was not sold in public, though most of the "old timers" made a more or less regular use of it. There were temperance societies galore. Good Templars, Sons of Temperance and Bands of Hope for the young hopefuls and the tavern was then just a memory. Maybe the "home brews" will go the same way. But members of the Rice family still lived there. In the main house on the left dwelt Miss Melitable Rice a slender old lady with a high shrill voice of good carrying power. It would easily reach from her back door to the two "High Top Sweeting" apple trees some distance down the field back of the house. We boys thought her a "crabbed old maid", mainly because of the apples. "Aunt Hitty" wanted a few herself and naturally disapproved of boys. Maybe she was a little peculiar, most of us are, but she was "Aunt Hitty" to the whole community, a fact that speaks well for her standing among us. Who would not rather be known as "Uncle Joe" than "Old Joe Smith." Aunt Hitty left her property to a niece, Miss Ellen Parrott, a beloved teacher in our schools for many years.

On the other side lived Col. Levi Bates, whose wife was Aunt Hitty's sister. Col. Bates, who was well along in years, was said to have been a militia colonel in younger days. About that time he was "depot master" for the South Shore railroad, which then only ran to Cohasset. Later at a time when Lovell Bicknell was highway surveyor the colonel worked on the highways. Some of us boys during the summer vacation were hired to follow a tipcart, with Col. Bates as driver and boss, picking up the loose stones of which there were more than a plenty. The Colonel, we soon learned, was somewhat deaf; we also noticed, too, that his regular term for starting the horse was: "Giddap a long". At times the Colonel was kept busy yelling "Whoa" to the old horse who would persist in starting. The poor old horse was not to blame; he could hear our "Giddapalongs", if the Colonel couldn't. Boys for the sake of fun often do rather, even cruel things, but mostly from thoughtlessness. The Boy Scout movement of the present is teaching them better things. Long may it flourish. Yes, this is to be said in excuse, it relieved the monotony of long hot summer days. You boys of 1921 think of spending ten hours under a hot sun picking up stones at 50 cents a day. Well, we boys didn't fall over each other hunting that job.

Next in order was what is now the Peakes building, then the shoe manufactory of Quincy and Henry Bicknell, used principally or wholly for the cutting of upper and sole leather; a one and one-half story building not half its present size. In the basement was the paint shop of Joseph Peakes, later the owner of the property, the Bicknell brothers removing to what is now J. F. Otis' store, vacated by Nathan Canterbury, who removed his shoe business to a new shop built on the lot where is now the Catholic church.

The Bicknells were among the oldest of the ten or twelve makers of boots and shoes in East Weymouth, all of whom the march of progress forced out of business. The reason why might be of interest, but as Kipling says, "That's another story." The Peakes building has seen many tenants come and go, but there has been a paint shop in the basement from that time to this.

Where is now Gardner's Block was the dwelling of Otis H. Randall, a son of Dean Randall, who lived in the house now owned by Daniel Reidy. Dean Randall owned a tack factory before the advent of the Weymouth Iron Co. in the building last used by the Art Leather Co., burned when the Town Hall was burned.

Mr. O. H. Randall's house was once tenanted by several village doctors, only one at a time, however. Mr. Randall, who is now living in Brockton, sold to Elbridge Gardner, who moved the buildings to the rear and built the block. And now we are back to Pleasant street.

Here on the corner lived Prescott Lothrop, middleaged, quiet, intelligent, one of the type of citizens who made Weymouth an ideal town wherein to be born and grow to manhood.

A few years ago The Weymouth Light & Power Co. moved the old house further up Pleasant street and on its site is their office, one of the few ornaments to the Square. On this spot, it is said, was once "The Little Red School House" of a hundred years ago.

Time works many changes, but the difference between the old Square then, and now, is nothing compared with the countless changes in the things that make for the comfort and convenience of daily life. With all this added has the world become a better place in which to live? Who can tell? You might ask your grandfather.

Monks Used Charcoal.
Use of charcoal in Italy has always been very heavy because of its almost universal use for cooking and heating, says the American Forestry Magazine. At Vallombrosa a large quantity had always been made, even in the time of the monks during the middle ages. Prior to the war this forest alone produced annually about 220,000 pounds of charcoal.

DON'T WED FOREIGNERS!

Mme. Pierre Tartoue, wife of the noted portrait painter, said in discussing her marriage and her suit for separation, that "if American girls who are contemplating marriage with foreigners will only listen to me and take warning from my unfortunate experience, I shall feel repaid in a measure for the ordeal through which I have passed and the humiliation I must endure. My advice to girls is to pick out an American for a husband."

PROMISING YOUNGSTER

Helen Chandler, playwright and actress, is only twelve. She is a golden-haired, slim little lady with a voice that has the qualities of a silver bell. John Barrymore, America's foremost actor, predicts a great future for Helen. A number of her dramatizations have been adopted for use at charitable affairs arranged by society. She has been an actress since she was eight, and she played the part of the Little Prince with John Barrymore in "Richard III," created the role of Marjory Jones in "Penrod," was the Dream Child in Marie Doro's presentation of "Barbara," and has had prominent roles in other plays.

Walnut Fast Grower.

There is a popular prejudice that black walnut is a slow grower, but the fact is that in fertile, loamy soils underlaid with firm but not overly hard clay subsoils, moist yet well drained, it is one of the most rapid growers of America's more valuable forest trees, says the American Forestry Magazine of Washington. It should never be placed in coarse, gravelly, stiff, heavy clay, or thin sandy soils.

Brighten Up Brown Leather.

An excellent renovator for articles made of brown leather, such as shoes, suitcases and traveling bags, is made of two ounces of soft soap, four ounces of beeswax, two ounces of turpentine and half an ounce of neat-foot oil. Melt the soap, wax and oil together, then remove the mixture from the fire and add the turpentine. Stir well. When cold apply with a brush.

MOVING ENTIRE CITY

The gigantic task of moving an entire city is slowly nearing completion in Minnesota. The city of Hibbing, which had reached 10,000 population, with substantial brick buildings and a street car line, is being moved to a new site to permit the mining of rich deposits of iron ore upon which it stands. The photograph shows a three-story hotel being moved on steel tractor rollers to New Hibbing.

Sewing Machines.
About 60,000,000 feet of lumber are used annually in the manufacture of sewing machines. Oaks and red gum supply nearly two-thirds of the lumber, and yellow poplar and black walnut each a little more than one-eighth, the remainder being made up of tupelo, chestnut, cottonwood, maple, basswood, birch, sycamore, mahogany, yellow pine and redwood. Tops of sewing machines are usually made of hardwood veneers such as oak or walnut, or of other woods stained to imitate mahogany.

TONY'S OATH.

Synopsis.—Lonely and friendless, Tonniebel Devon, living on a canal boat with a brutal father and a worn-out, discouraged mother, wanders into a Salvation army hall at Ithaca, N. Y. There she meets a young Salvation army captain, Philip MacCauley. Uriah Devon, Tony's father, returns to the boat from a protracted spree and announces he has arranged for Tony to marry Reginald Brown, a worthless companion. Mrs. Devon objects, and Uriah beats her. Their quarrel reveals that there is a secret between them in which Tony is the central figure. Tony refuses to marry Reginald and escapes a beating by jumping into the lake. Tony finds a baby's picture with offer of reward for its delivery to Doctor Pendlehaven. She delivers the picture and the doctor visits her mother.

CHAPTER VI—Continued.

In another moment the girl had stripped off her wet clothes, had blown out the light and was in bed beside her mother.

When Edith was assured the girl slept, she crawled out of the bed and lighted the lamp. She tried to collect her thoughts, to lay a plan for the future for herself and husband. John Pendlehaven had been there! Pendlehaven, the one man in the world she dreaded the mention of! And Tony had said he would come back tomorrow!

She turned and looked at the sleeping face, half-hidden in the blankets. She had stolen this child from her father, and now she had to escape the consequences of her wicked deed. She had to go away, and that quickly. If she had dared to face her husband's wrath, she would have, then and there, communicated with Paul Pendlehaven.

She reached out and touched Tonniebel's face.

"Baby, darlin', wake up," she said. "I want to ask you something!"

Tony opened her slumber-laden eyes and smiled.

"Don't go to sleep again," exclaimed Mrs. Devon, hoarsely. "Tell me this. Do you honest believe what you said about that thing on the card? About it bein' holy?"

"Yep," asserted Tony, with drooping eyelids.

"You don't want to hurt Uriah and me, do you, honey?"

The girl shook her head slowly, and a doubtful shadow settling in her eyes, seemed to make her wider awake.

"I wouldn't hurt you, darlin'," she replied at length, "but sometimes, when daddy's beatin' you, I feel like whackin' the life out of him. Why, today—"

Edith stopped her by a tug at her sleeve.

"If you swore by that card you brought, I mean if you took an oath, would you keep it?" she asked hoarsely.

"You bet I would." There was amazement, surprise and eagerness in the young voice.

"Didn't you tell me the feller said Jesus was a holy bird?"

Tony nodded.

Mrs. Devon gripped her fingers about the girl's arm.

"Mebbe he's in the Dirty Mary here, only you can't see him, baby dear!" The woman's voice was slyly toned, but she shivered in superstition.

"He's right here," affirmed the girl, thinking of a boy's earnest uplifted face and vibrant assurances.

"Then say after me what I'm thinkin' of," said Edith.

Tony lifted her eyes to her mother's, but drew back when she discovered how terrible she looked, white like a dead person.

"I swear by the livin' Jesus," began Edith, and then she paused. "Say it," she hissed.

"I swear by the livin' Jesus," Tony repeated fearfully.

"I swear to my mummy never to say nothin' mean against Uriah Devon, my daddy," went on Mrs. Devon.

Tony repeated this, too, almost frightened into fits. She had never seen her mother look and act so mysteriously.

"Now say this, keepin' in your mind you'll be blasted to hell if you break your word, I won't never tell that my father beat my poor mummy, or that he's a thief, and a liar—" A thick tearless sob burst from the woman's lips and brought an ejaculation from the girl.

"I swear to it all, honey mummy," she cried. "You believe me, Edie, darlin', don't you?"

"Yes, I believe you," replied Edith, dully. "Crawl into bed, and go to sleep, baby dear."

Shivering Tony Devon got back under the blanket.

Then for more than an hour there was silence on the canal boat, silence that was broken only by the night noises outside.

Then, extremely weak, the woman prepared herself to go out. It took her a long time to write a note she had to leave for Tony, and when that was finished, she divided the money the doctor had left and stole softly from the boat.

It was in the full blaze of a morning sun that Tonniebel opened her eyes and looked around the cabin. The other bunk was empty, and her mother was not in the cabin. In her night clothes, Tonniebel went to the deck, shouting the name, "Edith," her strong young voice repeating itself back from the woods in echoes. Then she went downstairs again and began to dress hastily, and every moment her fear was growing. She spied the note pinned to the lamp handle and stared at it mutely as if dreading to know its contents, but she unrolled it with fingers that seemed to be all thumbs. Her legs were shaking so she had to sit down to read it.

"Tony dear," it began.

"I'm going to look up Uriah. I took part of the money. We might need some. You can go to work somewhere if I don't come back. Maybe some day you'll see me. Leave the boat where she is so your daddy can find her. I love you, darling. Remember about your swearing not to tell on your Pop, and don't tell I'm gone to find him."

Tonniebel gave a gasping sob. They had all gone and left her stranded in a land of strangers. Because it was no longer her home, she began to love the silent old canal boat, and to wish with all her soul that Uriah and Edith would come walking down the cabin steps.

For a long time she sat thinking, looking out over the water, sometimes with tears flooding her lids, sometimes dry-eyed with fright. After a while she got up, took Gussie to the lake, where, much to the little animal's disgust, she washed her with a scrubbing brush and soap. Then she carefully washed herself, letting her feet and legs hang over the end of the dock until they, too, were as clean as her little friend.

It was while she was sitting there with the pig in her arms that a canoe slipped under the overhanging trees and came toward the canal boat swiftly. She watched it coming with no show of interest. Directly in front of her the paddle remained suspended, and the boat came to a stop. Tonniebel's heart thumped, then seemed to fall to the pit of her stomach. Here, right before her, was the Salvation man.

"How do you do?" he said, smiling at her. "I see you're having a nice time."

Tonniebel shook her head. "No, I ain't, and Gussie ain't, either," she replied almost sullenly.

By a skillful twist of the paddle, Philip MacCauley drew the canoe close to the dock.

"Is this the boat you told me you lived on?" he asked, climbing up beside her and holding the canoe fast by a rope.

"Yes, the Dirty Mary," answered Tonniebel, with a little catch in her voice. "Now I live on her, I mean today."

"What do you mean by 'now you live on her'?" he asked. "Isn't this your home? Didn't you tell me that?" The girl's dark head drooped, and the shower of curls almost covered Gussie to her short hind legs. Tears dropped silently.

Philip touched her gently. "Where's your mother?" he questioned.

She lifted her head and looked at him through her tears. She wanted to confide in some one—yes, she did want to tell him, but the oath she'd taken on the gentle Christ flashed into her mind.

"She ain't home just at present," she replied in a low voice.

Oh, how she wanted to ask him if he knew of any work she could do!

As if he had read her thoughts, he asked abruptly, "Can I do anything for you? I brought you this."

She made a slight movement with her head but accepted the card he extended.

Then there drifted over the quiet summer day the tolling of the chimes from the university clock on the campus of Cornell. She bent forward to listen. It struck one, and drawl her feet from the water, she got up. She had promised to be at Pendlehaven place at two o'clock.

"I got to go now," she said apologetically. "Much obliged for bringin' me some salvation, m'ster Mebbe I'll see you again some time Mebbe I will."

"When?" demanded Philip, the blow running swiftly to his face. He felt a sudden renewed interest in the solemn girl, and he didn't want her to leave him at all.

"I dunno," she answered, putting Gussie under one arm. "I mightn't home when you come."

"Can I come tomorrow?" he begged.

"Yep, you can come," said Tonniebel, with filling throat, "but if it's all one around, don't stop."

This was all the warning she gave him. Then she paid long enough to see him jump into the canal, and for a few minutes she stood watching the craft as it drew away on the water toward Ithaca. Then she started for the doctor's.

CHAPTER VII

Tony Finds a New Me.

Many a person turned the street and looked at the bareheaded and barefooted girl as she made her way through the city with a pig slung under her arms. Tonniebel was hurrying to Pendlehaven place where she had promised Doctor John to come to his office at two o'clock that afternoon, and, if she didn't, might take it into his head to visit the Dirty Mary.

When John Pendlehaven came in and saw her he noted how pale she was.

"Your mother," he began.

"She's gone away yin'," gasped Tony. "I don't know 'ere she is."

"Didn't you see her's morning? If she was able to go, then she's better. Isn't she? Ye?"

Tonniebel bobbed head.

"I guess so," she smiled. "When I woke up, she was goin' to see me. She went to find—"

"I guess so," she smiled. "When I woke up, she was goin' to see me. She went to find—"

"She's gone away yin'," gasped Tony. "I don't know 'ere she is."

"Didn't you see her's morning? If she was able to go, then she's better. Isn't she? Ye?"

Tonniebel bobbed head.

"I guess so," she smiled. "When I woke up, she was goin' to see me. She went to find—"

THE ECONOMIC CIRCLE.

"You are expecting a still higher price for that pork?"

"Got to get it," asserted Farmer Cornstossel.

"And the ultimate consumer will have to pay a lot of fees and commissions that will make the cost pretty big?"

"It works around in a circle. The only man in these parts who can afford to buy it holds the mortgage on this farm. He has made arrangements to charge more interest."

The Logical Sequence.

"The deserted maiden wrung her hands."

"I suppose that was because the rich man she was after wouldn't ring them for her."

Logical Sequence.

"There was a flash in her eye when he came to tell her he had the facts in the case."

"Of course, a flash always goes before a report."

Take a sixty-two measure of chest. Fill with Puccini and Wagner or Strauss.

Add a gesture and cry, with a pinch of a sigh.

That ought to bring down any house.

The Secret.

To win success with tongue or pen. The best plan seems to be. To say the old things over again. But say them differently.

Rialto Gossip.

"Yorick Hamm has an engagement."

"About time."

"Says he'll have to double in brass."

"Well, he's got the brass to do it with."

The Test.

"The world owes every man a living."

"Yep, and you'll find the world mighty good pay, too, if you're any kind of collector."

Two Versions of the Affair.

Ruth—She told me she slapped him because he tried to kiss her good night.

Helen—He told me she slapped him because he didn't try.—Columbia Jester.

The Explanation.

"Why does it always have to be a dark horse to win, pop?"

"I daresay, my son, because the other candidates do not think it is fair to them."

RIGHT

Spoon: What kind of bells do you prefer?

Mr. Bell (who has a nagging wife): Dumb bells!

Real Money.

"I'll bet a thousand dollars!" Announced a boastful Bet.

But he changed his mind about it when I said I'd bet him ten.

Got to Have Her.

The cook says we must get another semai.

We have two already, enough to feed the work.

But they need a fourth at bridge.

Not So Dear.

How dear to my heart are the days of my childhood.

By don't you go back and view once more?"

A railroad ticket would cost dollars.

Not to Be Fooled.

What do you know about women?"

Thing, my dear young lady; if you're trying to get me off my feet.

A TRICK X-RAY TOY.

To outward appearances, this toy has the power to transmit light through solid objects.

Procure a box of about the size starch comes in, and remove one side. Fig. 2 shows the box placed upon its remaining side, with the open side uppermost, and the top towards you. Out of the bottom board cut a piece in length equal to one-third the length of the board, and in width equal to one-half of the width of the board. Also bore holes A and D in the ends of the box, near the upper edge, and on a direct line with one another. These holes should be about 1 1/4 inches in diameter. If you have a cardboard mailing-tube of a different size, make the holes to admit it.

Cut the boards K, L, M, N and O of the proper sizes so when nailed together in the manner shown in Fig. 3 they will fit over the upper portion of the box as in Fig. 4. Holes B and C should be bored through N and O on an exact line with holes A and D in the ends of the box. The top board should have a hole cut out of one edge corresponding in size to that cut out of the bottom board, as it will enclose the remainder of the box, but this should not be fastened until after the mirrors have been put in place and been properly adjusted. Paint the inside of the box black.

Broken pieces of mirror may be used for this toy, if you have some. Small mirrors can be purchased at five and ten-cent stores. Pieces of irregular shape can be mounted upon blocks of wood, for convenience in handling. The sectional view of the box (Fig. 5) shows how the mirrors should be fastened. Mirror E should be placed at an angle of 45 degrees to hole A, mirror F parallel to mirror E, mirror H at right angles to mirror F, and at an angle of 45 degrees to hole D. The dotted line and arrows in Fig. 5 indicate how the light is reflected from hole to hole, and how, when looking through hole A, a person sees the light coming through hole D.

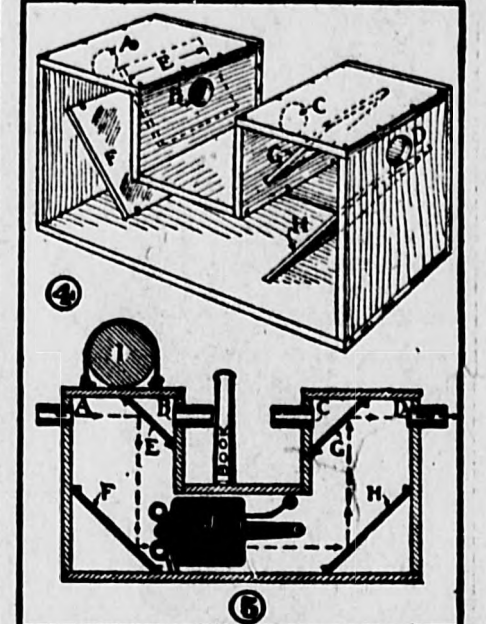

Fig. 5 shows how to fasten an electric bell or buzzer (J) to one side of the machine, and how to mount a dry battery (I) to the top of the toy. Connect the bell and battery with bell wire, and place a switch in the circuit.

fastening it upon the side of the box as shown in Fig. 1.

Here is the way to operate the trick X-ray. Ask your friend to look through the tubes to see that they are clear. He will admit that he can see through them. Then, while he is still looking through the tube, place a book or something in the gap between the tubes at the center of the toy, and at the same instant clap one hand over the end of the front tube. Your friend will shut off the light. Your friend, however, will think that the book shuts it off. Now, close the battery switch, and allow the bell or buzzer to buzz for a few seconds, to complicate the operation and make it more mystifying.

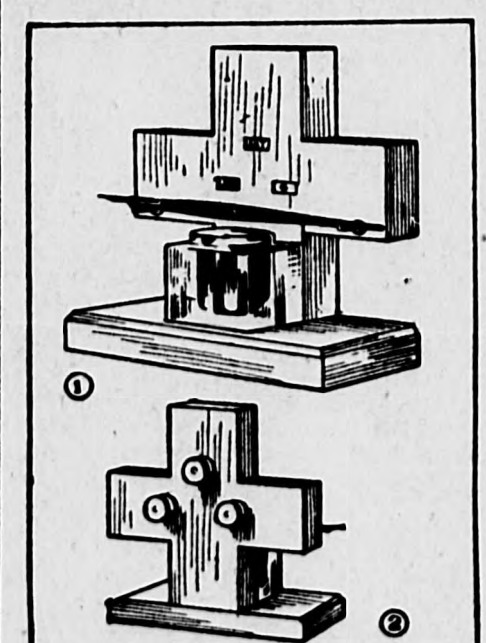

ing. Then throw open the switch, remove your hand from the tube end, and presto! the light will flood through the tubes, and your friend will see through any object placed in the gap

AN INK-STAND AND PERPETUAL CALENDAR.

The ink-stand, pen-rack, and perpetual calendar shown in Fig. 1 is a practical desk novelty.

For the front of the calendar case (A, Fig. 3) you can use a piece of clear-box wood. The cover of a wide-shaped box will be large enough. The thickness of the wood will be just right. For the back (B, Fig. 4), you can use either hard or soft wood. I would suggest oak. The base (C, Fig.

5) should be of the same kind of wood as the back.

Mark out front piece A first, using the dimensions of the pattern of Fig. 8. Draw the vertical lines at right angles to the horizontal lines, and be sure that you make the projections of the cross equal. In cutting, saw close to the lines, then draw up on the lines with a chisel and sandpaper. Use front piece A as a pattern for marking out back block B. Before sawing this out cut the recesses for the three dials, so there will be no danger of splitting the wood when boring the holes.

The 3/4-inch hole through the center of each recess is made for the dial pivot E (Fig. 6). Cut the three slots in front piece A in the places indicated. Cut the dials out of cardboard 1 1/4 inches in diameter. After cutting one mount it upon a dowel-stick pivot (I, Fig. 6), and slip the pivot through one of the holes in block B. Then put front A in place temporarily, and with a pencil indicate where the front slot comes upon the dial. This will show you where the dial lettering must go. Locate the position of the lettering for the other dials, also. By holding your pencil point against the dial, at one side of the slot, then at the other, and turning the dial, you can describe the circles between which the lettering must be placed.

Cut the lettering from calendars, and paste it upon the dials. Figures 7,

CHURCH NOTES.

(Other churches on page 8.)

OLD SOUTH UNION CHURCH
South Weymouth
O. A. Price, pastor

Sunday, Feb. 6, Rev. Warren P.
Landers of Brockton will preach at the morning service at 10.30. Mr.
Landers has visited our church several times and has been well liked by all who heard him. We urge a large attendance next Sunday.

In the evening at 6.15 Mr. Landers will again give an address under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor society on: "Some Reminiscences of Past Christian Endeavor Work." This will be a special service and we urge a large attendance of young people and adults. This service is for everybody.

Sunday school at 12.
Prayer service Thursday at 7.45 P.
M.

The pastor will preach at the First Congregational church, Brockton, both morning and evening.

FIRST CHURCH

Morning worship at 10.30 to which all are cordially invited.
Sunday school at noon.

The Junior Christian Endeavor society celebrates its fourth birthday on Sunday and in observance of the occasion has invited the North Weymouth C. E. to join with them in their Sunday afternoon prayer meeting at 3.45 in the chapel.

Y. P. S. C. E. meeting at 6 P. M.
under leadership of Miss Addie J.
Taylor, the subject being: "A Surrendered and Victorious Life."

PORTER M. E. CHURCH

Lovell's Corner
Rev. Ralph T. Templin, Pastor.
Sunday morning worship at 10.30.
Rev. Arthur Emig will preach and conduct communion.

Sunday school at 11.45. Bring your Centenary collection.
Epworth League devotional meeting at 6 P. M.

Evening service at 7 P. M. with the sermon subject: "China's Cry for Help." An offering will be taken to help in the relief of the famine-stricken districts of China.

We must not allow our part in the Centenary's great program to break down, or even lag, for lack of earnest support. To do that would be nothing short of a tragedy. We cannot allow our church to fail to do her full share in this holy task. Besides it will do us as individuals more harm than it will the cause, for us to neglect to meet our promised subscriptions. To do so is no better than to fail to pay the grocer or the butcher. We would not do that I am sure. Let us not lose our honor by failing to meet our honest obligations.

EPISCOPAL

Trinity church, Weymouth, Rev.

Square, 11 A. M. to 5 P. M. every week-day, holidays excepted.

BRIDGEWATER NORMAL

The honor roll for the entering classes at Bridgewater Normal school, was recently issued. It contains the names of those who received an average of at least 85%, for their first term's work and includes nearly one-third of the students in the entering classes. The list is in three divisions those with an average of A, B plus and B. Among the Weymouth girls in the second division is Helen A. Pray. In the third division is Helen G. Lyons.

REAL ESTATE SALES

The following Weymouth transfers of real estate were recorded in the Norfolk registry last week:

Rufus G. Brooks to D. Arthur Brown,

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Many from Weymouth attended
Sunday afternoon the lecture
Christian Science at the Quin-church. Miss Mary G. Ewing, C.
E., was the speaker and her subject
"A Study in Causation." Excerpts are given:

The fundamental truth of Christian Science is the fact about causation that good, Mind, Spirit, is the only active, operative intelligence, or creative energy. From this it follows logically and inevitably that the universe, including man, the product of this intelligence, is spiritual. One accepts this basic teaching and you are compelled to admit its correlative, the unreality, the impotence, the fastality and entire mortality of evil and matter. The creative power of Mind of good,—the Fatherhood and Motherhood of God,—is the primal fact of existence; the relationship between the creator and His creation, between parent and child, is unchanging and indissoluble.

"Our false theories about life and its origin have led us to accept material beliefs about all things, and, we have named out mistaken sense of substance, matter, and accepted as real and inevitable its phenomena.
Having accepted a false premise, it is impossible to make any correct or reliable deduction, and so it is absolutely necessary to get back to the truth about life itself, in order to have any basis for right reasoning.

"The great mission of Christian Science is to teach us to think accurately, independently, spontaneously, and to reason honestly from the standpoint of understanding of true causation. This ability to think clearly and correctly, which is ours as a God-given capacity, enables us to understand the law of divine Principle and so to detect and uncover the falsity of the phenomena which are contrary to divine Principle; it also arms us with power to dispose of such phenomena in proportion to our understanding of their ephemeral and unreal character. Now disease is one of these phenomena which lays great claims upon our daily experience and holds the human race in bondage, and I know that I am right in saying that health will never be gained nor will it ever be maintained by any system that fails to eradicate disease. It is unquestionably true that the very foundation of all discordant human conditions lies in a mistaken sense of the source of life itself. Jesus meant this when he said, "It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing; and to-day, in the accurate and systematic teaching of our Christian Science textbook, we have the explanation of the rule Jesus laid down and the necessary guidance for its proper application to our every need.

"In a gathering such as this, one recognizes the impulse of that "hunger and thirst after righteousness" which today urges the world of humanity to seek to understand the infinite Love, the divine intelligence which created and sustains the universe and man. Since God, good, is our Father and Mother, good, our fatherland is the great Kingdom of heaven, that land of promise Moses so beautifully pictured for the children of Israel. This war against metaphysical understanding, is the universe of Mind's creating,—the secret place of the Most High,—a present fact, not a future possibility, and Mrs.
Eddy says that of this kingdom there shall be no end; for Christ, God's idea, will eventually rule all nations and peoples—imperatively, absolutely, finally—with divine Science."—Science and Health, p. 565.

WAGES OF CAR MEN

Hints at the necessity of reducing the wages of car men employed by the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company are contained in a report by the trustees of that company, which was published this week by the public trustees. The report covers the first 18 months of the road under public control, during which period, according to the report, the financial returns have been unsatisfactory though the outlook for improved earnings as soon as business depression shall have passed is "encouraging."

Regarding the question of wages the report says:

"When the trustees took control in June, 1919, conductors and motormen were being paid 41, 43 and 45 cent an hour. In August, 1919, the W.
Labor Board increased this rate to 4
49 and 51 cents, retroactive to June 1919. In September, 1920, a board arbitration awarded a further increase to 62 and 67 cents and $400,000 borrowed money.

"On the basis of the number of men employed in June, 1919, the increase in wages during trustee control has been at the rate of $1,900 per annum. Only by one-man and a large reduction in miscellaneous expenses has this increase been partially offset.

"If unprecedented high wages, under pressure of war conditions, reduced in other lines of industry, street railways must, in justice to the public, adopt the same course costs of other commodities decline riders naturally will expect to be reduced car fares, but as labor is by far the largest expense in the operation of a street railway, substitute lower fares will be impossible wages continue on a war-time basis."

ROY THEATRE

Women's in all parts of the country actively engaged in a movement to protect the war babies, and in this comes the inevitable link—war babies. One of the greatest problems today is the social phenomenon presented by unmarried mothers. View of fiction have ever pitifulness; now, constantly growing reorganizations are increasing, and women everywhere are lending the aid to find a solution —one that will remove the bar sniffles cheer where hitherto despised has been the rule.

Of the greatest forces in the world good is the drama: "The Unwed Mother," a four-act play written by Florence Edna May. It tells the pitiful story in all its details and offers a solution. The leading role is taken by Ann Kingsley, well supported by a strong company.
Never this drama has been played, county sentiment has changed and the unfortunate and a more than spirit has developed.

A drama will be seen at the Quintheatre next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday with daily matinees for only at which a lecture will delivered on "The War Baby"; one under 16 will be admitted at performance.

he story it tells, is of especial interest to women, for real life is developed in an intensely dramatic series episodes.

And now is the time to take down our screens and let the flies out of the house where the poor things have cooped up all summer.—Boonville (Mo.) Republican.

CAN'T DO THE WORK

It's too much to try to work every day against a constant dull backache sudden darting pain in the small of the back. Be rid of it. Try Doan's Kidney Pills. Your neighbors recommend them. Ask your neighbor!

B. O. Raymond, 16 Cottage street, East Weymouth, says: "Mornings I felt tired and aching and my back pained. When I stooped over to put on my shoes, or got up from a chair,
I would have a catch in my back. For a time I was unable to do much work or even get around because of the weakness in my back. The kidney secretions passed irregularly and made me get up two or three times every night. They were burning, too, and contained a brick-dustlike sediment.
I had read of Doan's Kidney Pills so I got some. The first box made me feel much better so I continued using them. I was soon rid of the backache and my kidneys were acting as they should."

Two years later, Mr. Raymond said: "I think as much of Doan's Kidney Pills as ever."

Town Clerk's Notice

—TO—
Physicians, Midwives and Parents

Birth Returns

Town Clerk's Office,
Weymouth, Feb. 1, 1921

Attention is called to the following law in relation of births which was passed by the legislature of 1912.

CLAYTON B. MERCHANT,
Town Clerk.

[CHAP. 280, ACTS OF 1912] AN ACT RELATIVE TO REPORTS AND RECORDS OF BIRTHS

Be it enacted, etc., as follows:

Section 1. Physicians and midwives shall, within forty-eight hours after the birth of every child in cases of which they were in charge, mail or deliver to the clerk or register of the city or town in which the birth occurred, a notice stating the date and place of the birth, giving the street and number, if any, the number of a ward in a city and the family name. Failure to mail or deliver the said notice shall be punished by a fine not exceeding twenty-five dollars for each offence. The notice required by this section need not be given if the notice required by the following section is given within forty-eight hours after the birth occurs.

Section 2. Physicians and midwives shall make and keep a record of the birth of every child in cases of which they are in charge and shall within fifteen days after the birth, mail or deliver to the clerk or register of the city or town in which the birth occurred, a report of the birth stating the date and place, the name, if any, of the child, its sex and color, and the names, ages, places of birth, occupations and residence of the parents, giving the street number, if there be any and the number of a ward in a city, the maiden name of the mother, and whether or not the physician or midwife signing the birth return personally attended the birth. If the child is illegitimate, the name and other facts relating to the father shall not be stated except at the request in writing of both the father and the mother filed with the return. The record to be kept by the physician or midwife, as above provided, shall also contain the facts hereby required to be reported to the city or town clerk.

The fee of the physician or midwife shall be twenty-five cents for every birth so reported, which shall be paid by the city or town where the report is made upon presentation to the city or town treasurer of a certificate from the city or town clerk stating that the said birth has been properly reported to him. The report required to be made by this section in addition to the report required to be made by the preceding section, as above provided, if made within forty-eight hours of the birth, the report required by the preceding section shall not be required.

A physician or midwife who neglects to make and keep the record hereby required, or who neglects to report in the manner specified above, each birth within fifteen days thereafter shall for each offence forfeit a sum not exceeding twenty-five dollars. The city or town clerk or registrar shall file daily with the local board of health a list of all births reported to him giving the following facts: date of birth, sex, color, family name, residence, ward, physician or midwife.

Section 3. Section three of chapter twenty-nine of the Revised Laws, as amended by chapter ninetythree of the acts of the year nineteen hundred and ten is hereby repealed.

ODD FELLOWS OPERA HOUSE

More than the usual interest attaches to the announcement of the forthcoming engagement of James Oliver Curwood's "Nomads of the North" at the Odd Fellows Opera House, East Weymouth next Monday and Tuesday.

All those who saw: "Back to God's Country" and "The Worker's End", masterpieces from the workshop of this author, realize they are justified in expecting something extraordinary in the latest picturization of his brand of outdoors, Far North fiction.

This film is an Associated First National attraction and it is said to be one of the very best features ever offered by this organization.

The three high-lights in the production, according to advance information, are: the remarkable performance of animals, including many wild ones in general, and a pet bear and dog in particular; a forest fire which is accredited with setting a new high mark in realism and thrills; and a romance of all-absorbing qualities quite different than the ordinary run of love affairs so universal in the movies.

The cast which has been selected to play the various picturesque roles in this intense drama of the wildest of God's country includes such stars as Betty Blythe, Lon Chaney, Lewis Stone, Melbourne McDowell and Spottiswood Aitken.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE

The presentation of the famous comic opera: "The Maid of the Mountains", at the Boston Opera House on February 7 is an event of genuine importance and significance, for it marks the first occasion upon which a London production of an English comic opera has been presented in Boston since long before the great war.

The company includes a number of the best known and most popular artists on the London stage today, whose reputation has been built up by individual successes. Among the most prominent members of the cast are Miss Viva Daron, a young English beauty who began her career but a few years ago on the concert platform, and whose quick advance to prominence has been due to her brilliant voice, her personal charm and her gifts as an actress of versatility and grace.

Miss Daron will play the role of the heroine, Teresa, the Maid of the Mountains, a role which English critics declare fits her like a glove. She was the leading artist in the London revue: "Joy Land", and comes to America direct from London after having completed star roles in three important films made in the South of France, for leading British companies.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE

"The Passion Flower", the remarkable Spanish melodrama by Jacinto Benavente in which Miss Nance O'Neil has found the greatest role of her long career, will be the attraction at the Plymouth Theatre, Boston, beginning Monday evening, Feb. 7, when New England playgoers will have an opportunity to see Miss O'Neil supported by the original cast with the same production which held capacity audiences at the Belmont in New York last season for six months and for three months in Chicago at the beginning of this season where the leading dramatic critic, Miss Amy Leslie, described play and player as "A blazing genius in a wonderful play."

The author, Spain's greatest dramatist, was dubious about presenting his masterpiece in America. It had been written for Maria Guerrero, Spain's Sarah Bernhardt, and had won great success in Madrid about nine years ago. The Spaniards believe Guerrero to be the greatest living actress and were sceptical about the ability of any American actress to give sufficient power to the characterization of "Raimunda", the soul-tortured heroine of the play. Eventually Miss O'Neil was chosen for the role because it was believed that she, above any other contemporaneous English-speaking stage, could do it full justice.

RECORD PRICE FOR RACE HORSE

The noted English racehorse, Archale, which ran second to Spion Kop in the English Derby, has been bought by John Sanford, wealthy American. The reported price of almost $80,000, created a sensation at the recent Newmarket bloodstock sales. It is probable that the great racer will be brought to this country. The photograph shows Archale, with Jockey Bellhouse up.

GEORGES CARPENTIER LAUDED

According to Battling Levinsky French Fighter is Much Better Than Given Credit for.

Boxing fans, who are of the opinion that Georges Carpentier will be a "set up" for the world's champion, Jack Dempsey, should listen to Battling Levinsky.

According to the "Battler," Carpentier is a much better puncher than the man who knocked the crown off Jess Willard's head in Toledo.

"I've tested the hitting ability of the two men," said Levinsky, "and Georges Carpentier.

I know what I am talking about. Why, when that Frenchman hit me with that right wallop in the second round that knocked me down, I thought a building had fallen on me. That was the punch that sent me on my way, and I never was right after that."

SOUNDS GOOD, BUT—

Eugenics, followed by generations of athletes, would result in the lowering of every athletic mark on record, William H. Ball of New York declared before the Athletic Research society, in session at Chicago.

"The problem of athletics is the elimination of fatigue," Mr. Ball said. "This, with the science of eugenics properly applied, will mean that we may anticipate new records by the sons of famous athletes."

Every boy should learn to box, Dr. A. K. Aldinger, director of physical training of New York public schools, told the society. "Boxing should be taught in every high school. In New York we have boxing gloves in every high school and have regular boxing classes."

RUSIE IS VALUABLE CITIZEN

Former Giant Twirler Gradually Works Himself Into Responsible Position on Coast.

Amos Rusie has "come back" as a valuable citizen. After he was through with baseball he piled lumber in a Seattle (Wash.) yard for $1.50 a day. During the war he worked in a shipyard, saved his money and now is engaged in business profitably in the coast city. Rusie was one of the greatest pitchers of all time.

MAY TRY TO ABOLISH OBJECTIONABLE RULE

Eliminate Goal From Touchdown, Says Cavanaugh.

Many Close Students of Football Have for Years Favored Abolition of Play—Chicago-Ohio State Game Is Cited.

Frank W. Cavanaugh, former Dartmouth star and successful coach at Boston college, declares that "the goal from touchdown is going to be eliminated."

Cavanaugh takes the attitude that the presence of the rule permits of many injustices in the game. He says: "With the old rules it made a considerable difference where the ball was downed after a player had gone over the line for a touchdown. It did seem an injustice that because a team happened to go over the goal line for a touchdown while close to the side lines, the try for a goal should be a more difficult matter than if the ball had been downed directly under the goal posts or close to it."

"For that particular reason a great many close students of the game have for years favored the entire abolition of the play. I feel positive that a great majority of the coaches would like to see it eliminated. However, there are some people who still cling to the goal-after-touchdown idea. Some of them stand high in the game and in order to appease the minority as well as the majority, the rule was changed prior to the start of the 1920 season. In an effort to eliminate as nearly as possible the loss of games through the failure to kick a goal after touchdown it was ruled that all such attempts should be made from a point directly in front of the goal posts."

"Ordinarily it would seem that the kicking of such a goal would be a very easy matter. As a rule it is, yet many an important game was decided last fall through the medium of a goal after touchdown. Take one of the Western conference games for example. Ohio State defeated Chicago 7 to 6, both teams making a touchdown, but Chicago failed to kick the goal."

WHITTED WANTS MORE MONEY

Baseball Career Shortened by Playing Different Position—Some Exceptions Cited.

In stating his case as to why he expects more pay next season, George Whittied of the Pirates says: "If I am to continue around different positions, thereby shortening my baseball career, I want more pay for it."

How shortening his baseball career? Charles Ferguson, Willy Schang, Rog-

Catarhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. Catarrhal Deafness requires constitutional treatment. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflammation of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced, your hearing may be destroyed forever. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system, thus reducing the inflammation and restoring normal conditions.

HOW WOMEN AVOID SURGICAL OPERATIONS

Some Are Extremely Necessary, Others May Not Be

Every Woman Should Give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Trial First

Chicago, Ill.—"I was in bed with a female trouble and inflammation and had four doctors but none of them did me any good. They all said I would have to have an operation. A druggist's wife told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took 22 bottles, never missing a dose and at the end of that time I was perfectly well. I have never had occasion to take it again as I have been so well. I have a six room flat and do all my work. My two sisters are taking the Compound upon my recommendation and you may publish my letter. It is the gospel truth and I will write to any one who wants a personal letter."—Mrs. E. H. HAYDOCK, 6824 St. Lawrence Ave., Chicago, Ill.

A Vermont woman adds her testimony to the long line of those fortunate women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after it had been decided an operation was necessary:

Burlington, Vt.—"I suffered with female trouble, and had a number of doctors who said that I would never be any better until I had an operation. I was so bad I could hardly walk across the floor and could not do a thing. My sister-in-law induced me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it certainly has helped me wonderfully. I keep house and do my work and have a small child. I have recommended Vegetable Compound to a number of my friends and you may publish my testimonial."—Mrs. H. R. SHARON, Apple Tree Point Farm, Burlington, Vt.

In hospitals are many women who are there for surgical operations, and there is nothing a woman dreads more than the thought of an operation, and the long weary months of recovery and restoration to strength if it is successful. It is very true that female troubles may through neglect reach a stage where an operation is the only resource, but most of the commoner ailments of women are not the surgical ones; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors or growths, although the symptoms may appear the same. When disturbing ailments first appear take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve the present distress and prevent more serious troubles. In fact, many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after operations have been advised by attending physicians.

• Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent to you free upon request. Write to The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

Back Lame and Achy?

Do you get up mornings tired and achy? Evening find you all "worn-out"? Likely your kidneys are to blame. Hurry and worry, lack of rest, and eating too much meat, throw a strain on the kidneys. Your back gives out; you are tired and likely suffer headaches and dizzy spells. Take things easier and help the kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's have brought new strength to thousands. Ask your neighbor!

A Massachusetts Case

Fred C. Burrage, 348 S. Main St., South Gardner, Mass., says: "My former work as a painter and the fumes from the turpentine had a bad effect on my back and kidneys. The kidney secretions were on color, painful, too frequent, and deposited sediment. My back got very lame and I had touches of lumbago. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they benefited me."

SHOWN THE DOOR

A canvasser for a subscription for an out-of-town daily found himself in bad in Weymouth the other day. He started to belittle and abuse the home weekly, but found the Gazette had a warm place in the hearts of our business men, when he was shown the door. To encourage said daily would hurt home trade.

CAR FARES REDUCED

The Home Rule Committee of Quincy through the efforts of M. J. L. Kennedy have secured more reductions in street railway fares. The city zone tickets are now good on the Quincy avenue line between Weymouth and Quincy, as well as on the Quincy Point route between North Weymouth and Quincy—13 rides for $1.

The cash fare from East Weymouth to Quincy has also been reduced from 20 cents to 15 cents.

The Home Rule Committee of Weymouth should now try to secure some reductions on other lines in Weymouth which will benefit local merchants.

DANCE OF LEGION AUXILIARY

Last Friday evening the Women's Auxiliary of the American Legion Post 79 gave its first dance in Masonic Hall, and many who were there have asked since: "When are you going to have another?" It seems to have been an enjoyable occasion. The hall was decorated in blue and gold, the colors of the Legion, and a basket in the center from which the colors radiated was filled with chrysanthemums the Legion's flowers.

One corner was made comfortable with chairs and rugs and decorated with flags, kindly loaned by the women of the older patriotic organizations in town. This little pleasant spot was occupied by the matrons, two of them honored Gold Star mothers, and one with her boy's Congressional Medal of Honor, which has been recently sent to her.

To the young people the music, the company and the dancing made a success of the affair, but to the older ones came the added satisfaction of knowing it was financially successful, which means much in the work we must "carry on." There are things to be done for our own boys individually and collectively, and always work for those in hospitals, those who have come back to us maimed in body or mind. We are anxious to have every woman eligible join the order and help with the work for it is greater than many realize.

One visit to a hospital will convince any woman of work to be done and when one goes to West Roxbury and sees the poor shell-shocked boy, knows new ones are coming in every day and hears them coax for "candy" especially "fudge" as any child might, she will go home determined to help.

Red tape has tied up the money some of these boys should have, so they cannot go out in cold weather for want of overcoats, but must depend on charity. As an auxiliary we can help to press this matter of justice to the boys, and meanwhile make fudge and little frosted cakes and cookies for them and remember that mentally they are little hurt children with pathetic questioning eyes, which you must always meet with a smile.

ATHENS SCHOOL NOTES

Miss Lucy A. Money, master's assistant in the Athens school, has accepted a more lucrative position in the schools of North Easton and will begin her work thereon Feb. 7. Miss Money leaves after reasonable notice and with the best wishes of her many friends. Her loss from the teaching staff is to be regretted. The members of the ninth grade at Athens school, as a token of their good wishes, have presented Miss Money with a handsome butterfly locket and chain.

The Home Economics Club organized recently and elected the following officers: Catherine Foley, president; Florence Spaulding, vice-president; Doris Crowder, secretary; Janet Adams, treasurer. The name Athena was chosen as the club name for the year. Instruction for the younger members of the club will be given by Leah Bleakney, Charlotte Delorey, Marion Hersey and Doris Crowder.

The basketball team has begun the season with two victories over Clapp Memorial Juniors and expects to add to its laurels as time goes on. Captain Norman Dorey has grouped about him a galaxy of stars, including William Riley, Ernest Keene, John McCarthy, Kenneth Killeen, Patrick Pwyer, Vladis Dulka and Raymond Nash.

The school library is filling a long felt want and has a large patronage. There are at present about 290 volumes ready for circulation and in circulation together with nearly 70 reference works in the school. The manual training boys have built suitable shelves to hold the books and the library is being carried on by two members of grade nine, Eleanor Freeman and Bertha Prouty.

NORFOLK CLUB BOWLING

All the winning teams took four points in the Norfolk Club bowling last week. Capt. Blanchard's team scoring 1416 Jan. 27, to 1309 for Capt. Veazie's team.

There was a general shake-up in the league and the standing Monday morning was:

NEEDED RIGHT NOW

A noted advertiser said that when business was poor you should retrench in all lines except advertising, but you should double your advertising. There's good solid sense behind the idea.

After all, what is advertising but salesmanship applied to the general public instead of to a single customer? Isn't salesmanship needed right now to start the public to buying and thus bring back sound business conditions?

SUPERIOR COURT AT QUINCY

Representative Walter Shuebruk of Cohasset, a member of the Judiciary committee of the Legislature, accompanied by Representative Russell T. Bates, Secretary LaBrecque of the Chamber of Commerce and W. R. Lofgren have inspected the District Court building at Quincy in connection with the bill of Representative Bates, calling for sittings of the Superior court in Quincy.

According to the opinion of Mr. Lofgren the court building could be altered to make possible sittings of the Superior court at a very reasonable figure. Representative Shuebruk seemed very much impressed with the bill and the advantages to be gained in having the Superior Court sittings in Quincy. Mr. Lofgren will make an estimate of the cost of alterations which will be submitted to the committee on Judiciary before whom the bill now is.

Recently Representative Bates interviewed Chief Justice Alken of the Massachusetts Superior Court. Justice Alken said that he was not opposed to sittings of the Superior court in Quincy. He said that the Superior Court is anxious to co-operate with the Legislature in every movement which would prove beneficial to the people of the state.

MRS. CHARLES M. HARLOW

Lora A. Harlow, widow of Charles M. Harlow, passed away at the home of Mrs. Jacob Loud, East Weymouth, where she had made her home for the past seven years, on Thursday, Feb. 3. She was born Nov. 27, 1831, celebrating her 89th birthday last November. She was the last of eight sons and daughters of Isaiah and Susan French, being born in Weymouth and living here until her marriage, when she and her husband moved to Marshfield, where Mr. Harlow died several years ago. Mrs. Harlow was a woman of sterling character and a devout Christian, being a life-long member of the Methodist church. Her sweet disposition made her beloved by all who knew her; children, young and old were her friends; always cheerful and always saying something to make one happy. She has passed to the great beyond to meet those gone before.

ROUGHLY TREATED

Miss Marion West, a young lady of 19 years, residing at 8 Howard street, had a tough experience Wednesday morning. She was late and took a short cut through the woods to the East Braintree depot. An unknown man followed her and knocked her down; he attempted to carry her far into the woods, but she put up a fight and screamed for help and finally the fellow was frightened away. Miss West was able to return home by the streets, suffering from a nervous shock. A physician attended her while the Braintree police made an unsuccessful search for the ruffian. Miss West was graduated at the Braintree High school last June, and is a stenographer with Smith, Patterson & Co., Boston.

NARROW ESCAPE

No one was injured but 35 passengers in one of the large electric cars had a narrow escape last Saturday morning at the Commercial street crossing at East Braintree. John O'Connell the operator, had just taken the car at the Braintree depot, leaving at 12.35. As he approached the crossing the gates were lowered and he attempted to stop his car, but on the down grade the brakes refused to hold, and the car crashed through the gates on to the track. At the East Braintree station was the inward train, due to leave at 12.50. O'Connell acted quickly and drove his car across the railroad track and through the other gate to safety. It was a close call, but there were a few spare moments.

Reaching Lincoln Square, Mr. O'Connell concluded he had had enough of street railroad and telephoned to the car barn for someone to take the car to East Weymouth. When he arrived he then and there resigned, after a service of nine or more years.

How Long Are Voters Going to Stand For

Not one in 100 voters of Weymouth have been permitted to see the warrant for the Annual Town Meeting, but on Monday and Wednesday of this week the Appropriation Committee gave public hearings to those interested in the articles in said warrant.

It looks very much like an attempt on the part of town officials to put something over on the voters. Only those who have inserted article in the warrant know what the warrant calls for, and the demonstrators have no opportunity to be heard by committee.

In Hingham, Rockland, Plymouth, Dedham and other towns all warrants are published in papers, giving the voters an opportunity to carefully read the

The Weymouth warrant, Jan. 19 and there have been of the Gazette and Transcript that date. There are 74 articles.

The contract for the Annual Reports calls for delivery on Feb. 20. Wonder if they will be at town meeting day before any made their appearance.

Remarkable Record For Collection of Polls

Tax Collector Pearce informs the Gazette and Transcript that only 37 out of 4034 poll tax payers of Weymouth have failed to pay their poll tax of 1921.

This is over 99 percent of the total and a record not equalled by any other town in the State.

He also reports 78 percent of the real estate taxes collected.

Sladen established at Weymouth Heights the grocery business which he still conducts. He is a charter member of the Weymouth Firemen's Relief Association and has been treasurer for many years; is past grand of Crescent lodge, I. O. O. F., of this town; a member of Matthews lodge, A. F. & A. M., of Andover; belongs to the Old Colony Grocers Association, the Weymouth Grocers club and the State Association.

Mrs. Sladen is a member of Steadfast Rebekah lodge, I. O. O. F., and the Old North Ladies Benevolent Society. Mr. and Mrs. Sladen are affiliated with the First Congregational church, Weymouth Heights. Miss Edna L. Sladen and Miss Ruth E. Sladen, daughters, assisted in welcoming the friends.

—Remarkably mild weather continues, in marked contrast with last February.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

Germany says she neither can nor will pay the total of reparations that was fixed by the supreme council—54 billions in 42 years and a tax of 12 per cent on her exports during the period. Eminent financial and economic experts of the allied countries and America agree that Germany will find it impossible to pay that sum and that the German representatives in the forthcoming London conference will demand an agreement laid before them, and that the allies thereafter will get from the defeated country as great a proportion of the 54 billions as they can, modifying the terms from time to time.

The official protest of Germany was voiced by Dr. Walter Simons, the foreign minister, and what he said was concurred in by the reichstag parties through their leaders, with the exception of the ultra radicals, who gloried in the painful position of the government. Doctor Simons asserted that the obligations thus imposed on the Germans would mean the complete economic enslavement of the people, and particularly of the workers. He said the government would offer counter proposals at the London meeting.

Among the people of France there was satisfaction with the reparations plan, especially because it was expected that the first effective payments by Germany will make available for negotiations or for use as security the French share of the 60,000,000,000 gold marks in bonds already delivered by Germany to the reparations commission. Great Britain has agreed not to utilize her claim on Germany as a basis for loans during the next five years, and this gives France the opportunity to make use not only of her share of the bonds but also her part of the 12 per cent tax on Germany's exports, to raise money to continue the work of reconstruction in northern France.

That tax on German exports is a feature that may cause a lot of trouble. By many it is held to be false economies that will react to the injury of other countries, and in Washington there is talk that our state department may feel called on to make protest. Lloyd George says the tax would be easy to collect, and fends the plan in its entirety. If Germany should absolutely refuse to it, he asserts, "there is nothing for us to do but to apply the treaty literally."

That opinion favoring German claims in the matter may be based on false premises is made clear by the report of the conference of financial experts held in Brussels, in which Germany is shown just how to wipe out the deficit of 76,000,000,000 marks in her 1920 budget. The experts found Germany was deliberately putting on a poor face for the purpose of showing the world her precarious financial condition and her difficult situation. Certain of her expenses were multiplied 75 times over those of 1919, and certain of her taxes vastly below those the people of the allied countries are paying. Furthermore, the budgets of 1919 and 1920 carried a number of credits which were only partly disbursed, such as 16,500,000,000 marks for the allied armies of occupation expenses, of which only 4,500,000,000 marks was spent. The budget for 1920 carried 42,000,000,000 marks for execution of the peace treaty, while only 17,000,000,000 marks had been paid out up to December 1 last.

Disarmament, a small army and other forms of unpreparedness got some hard knocks last week. In the first place the senate naval affairs committee put the snuffer on the Borah resolution for a naval construction holiday, after hearing Admiral Coontz, chief of naval operations, and Admiral Taylor, chief constructor of the navy. Both opposed the plan for a cessation of naval construction for six months. They said it would cost as much to do this as to continue to build, as contractors would be able to collect large damage claims from the government. Furthermore, they see no need for an investigation as to what constitutes a modern navy, being convinced by investigations already made that the capital ship is not obsolete and that the present program of the United States is correct.

General Pershing appeared before the house naval committee and gave a warning against unpreparedness and pacifism. He expressed approval of a world conference on disarmament, but said the United States should proceed with its present army and navy programs until at least five great powers have entered into a definite agreement.

On the other hand, the house foreign affairs committee reported favorably a resolution authorizing the President to invite the nations of the world to send delegates to a conference to provide for disarmament.

In the house, the fight to prevent reduction of the regular army below 175,000, was opened by Chairman Kahn of the military affairs committee. He said President-elect Harding told him recently at Marion that he favored an army of 175,000 men, but that he hoped some day it could be cut down to 150,000. Mr. Kahn also disclosed Mr. Harding's belief that congress should enact legislation providing voluntary military training for 150,000 men annually.

Meanwhile economy of the most rigid sort is being forced on our regular army by great deficiencies in funds for the remainder of the fiscal year. The shortage in the quartermaster corps alone is said to be $94,000,000. In order to reduce the prospective deficits to the lowest possible minimum, the War department ordered reduction of 40 to 60 per cent in the number of civilian employees in the army; reduction of the consumption of gasoline and lubricants by 50 per cent; allowance of clothing, equipment and supplies cut to the lowest possible limit, repaired shoes and salvaged uniforms to be issued wherever possible; substitution of canned food for fresh wherever possible, and expenses for transportation, communication and fuel cut to the bone. Much of the vocational training, upon which the recruiting campaign was based, must now be abandoned, as all the teaching will have to be done by army officers.

Gen. Charles G. Dawes of Chicago, former chief of supply procurement for the American army in France, made lively and interesting two sessions of the house war investigating committee. Severely condemning what he characterized as political attempts to discredit the people who won the war, he defended the work of his department and of the army in general, and denied that there was waste and extravagance in the liquidation of American accounts in France and the sale of surplus stocks to the French government. As to the alleged payment of excessive prices for equipment and material, he said this was necessary to get the job done quickly and was justified by the fact that the army did the job. General Dawes did not mince his language, and what he had to say of our "pink tea" diplomats in Europe who delayed matters with their red tape was tonic in its harshness. The discussion at one time turned on Great Britain, and the general shouted:

"I am no more ashamed to stand up here for Great Britain than for the United States. It seems to be fashionable in American politics to attack Great Britain. I am not in politics, and I am not going to be. And I thank God that in a crisis like we had there were no bickerings between the English-speaking people. Great Britain took over 40 per cent of our troops. Of course General Pershing gave them five divisions, but it had to be done to save the allies' line."

In these remarks Mr. Dawes, who has been a leading probability for the place of secretary of the treasury in the Harding cabinet, seemed to remove himself from the lists. Certainly what he said so frankly will not make him very acceptable to the professional Irishmen of America who are mainly responsible for the anti-British propaganda. However, at this writing he is still among the cabinet possibilities. The latest list, as reported by the correspondents with Mr. Harding in Florida, is:

Secretary of State—Charles E. Hughes of New York.
Secretary of the Treasury—Charles G. Dawes of Illinois or A. W. Mellon of Pennsylvania.
Secretary of War—John W. Weeks of Massachusetts.
Secretary of the Navy—Frank O. Lowden of Illinois.
Attorney General—Harry M. Daugherty of Ohio.
Postmaster General—Will H. Hays of Indiana.
Secretary of Agriculture—Henry C. Wallace of Iowa.
Secretary of Labor—John J. Davis of Pennsylvania.
Secretary of the Interior—Albert D. Fall of New Mexico.
Secretary of Commerce—Still vacant.

Mr. Davis, slated for the labor portfolio, was formerly a steel worker and is now director general of the Loyal Order of Moose.

The fight over wages, between the railway executives and the railroad brotherhoods, is on before the railway labor board, and accusations have been flying thick and fast. The executives asked permission to abrogate the national wage agreements entered into during the war, which would mean the lowering of the present wage scale. The brotherhood leaders immediately entered vigorous protest, asserting that the rail chiefs have conspired to overthrow the railroad labor board and to crush, once for all, the existing labor organizations. They said they could show that if the bankers who are responsible for the fiscal needs of the railroads since their return to private ownership would perform their duty, the roads could be adequately financed and their solvency maintained.

A veiled threat was found in the statement of Grand President Grable of the maintenance of way employees, who said: "The whole thing simmers down to a question of whether the employees are to secure their rights by justice and the proper legal avenues or by the use of economic force. This is the question which is now up for answer, as much as that of whether wages are to stay up or go down." President Wilson was appealed to by both sides, but decided, it was said, to take no hand in the fight.

The Fordney emergency tariff bill took up a lot of the senate's time, but there was little prospect of getting it to a final vote. An attempt to apply cloture was defeated by the Democrats, who then embarrassed the Republicans by consenting to have a showdown on the measure about February 16. The Democrats asserted the Republican leaders had been bluffing about their desire to pass the bill and were buncing the farmers.

Prohibition Commissioner Kramer put an awful dent in the illicit booze industry last week by an order forbidding further withdrawals from bonded warehouses of any liquor except industrial alcohol, wines for sacramental purposes, and liquor for retail druggists, who will be permitted to withdraw not more than five cases under each authorization. He also ceased issuing permits for wholesale liquor dealers. Having clamped down this lid, certain of the chief's leading aids were sent to the Canadian border to try to stop the smuggling of liquor there.

Bell That Worked Miracles.

Many tales of the supernatural are told concerning evil spirits and the efficacy of bells in warding them off; likewise regarding the power of consecrated bells for bringing blessings. In an old chapel at Killin in Perthshire, Scotland, was a bell called that of St. Fillan, which had the reputation of curing lunacy. After the sufferer had spent a night in the chapel he was in the morning placed with great solemnity under the bell, and in many cases recorded in the old chronicles the faith was rewarded.

Poker as Glass Cutter.

An ingenious method of cutting glass with a poker is described. Make a tiny notch on the edge of the glass where you want to cut it. Lay the glass over a newspaper, so that you have a printed line as a guide, heat a poker and apply it to the notch. There is a faint click, and if the hot poker is drawn slowly across, a crack follows. When the opposite edge of the glass is reached it will be found that it is in two separate parts.

Tit for Tat.

The late Archbishop Benson once had to face criticism of the clergy as a body. It was urged that the bishops ought to see that better candidates were brought to them for ordination. Benson, with good humor, replied: "Well, you see, we bishops find ourselves in a difficult position, as we have only the laity to choose from."—London Morning Post.

Paint Brush's Many Uses.

Nothing is better to take dust down the stairs than a good paint brush. It removes the dust from the corner niche of each step, brushes between the stair railings of moldings in a way no cloth can possibly do. Indeed a medium size paint brush of about four inches width has many uses in the house.

PLOW IS USEFUL TO REMOVE SNOW

EASILY ATTACHED TO AUTO

Wheel Plow Is Supplied With Shoes or Runners Which Keep It

Quite Handy in Country.

If you live in the country or in the suburbs and do not wish to be marooned by every snowstorm, get a snowplow like that shown in the accompanying illustration, provided, of course, that you are the fortunate possessor of an automobile of some kind to which you can attach the plow. The drawing clearly explains the construction of the plow, which is the invention of Claude C. Hyde of Otisville, N. Y.

The plow consists of two side parts, placed directly in front of the front wheels, and a V-shaped middle part. The wheel plow is supplied with shoes or runners, which keep it from digging into the roadbed and are yieldingly attached with spiral springs so they may pass over rough places or obstacles in the road.

The middle plow may be raised or lowered so as to take as much snow from the road between the wheels as the power of the automobile engine will permit. When the plow is not needed, it may be removed in a few minutes and without the use of special tools.—Popular Science Monthly.

CARE FOR TIRES IN WINTER

They Should Be Partially Deflated If Car Is Used Occasionally—Repair Any Cuts.

If an automobile is used occasionally during the winter, it will not be necessary to remove the tires, but they should be partially deflated, according to the department of agricultural engineering of the University of Nebraska. The wheels should be supported by jacks.

Tires should not be left standing on greasy or wet floors. Grease is injurious to the rubber and moisture to the fabric.

If the car is stored for the winter, it should be jacked up and the tires removed. If there are any cuts in the rubber they should be repaired so that the moisture may not enter the fabric.

During the winter, after the casings have been wrapped in paper or burlap to keep them as dry as possible and to protect them from the sunlight, they should be placed in a dry room with a temperature ranging between 40 and 65 degrees. Inner tubes should be removed and either be deflated or rolled loosely with a slight air pressure left in them. The tubes should then be given the same care as the casings. Carefully avoid any contact with oil.

ANTI-FREEZE AGENTS FAVORED FOR WINTER

Most Motor Makers Recommend Alcohol and Glycerin.

Three Substances in General Use
Which Can Be Prepared by Owner Without Consulting Any Professional Mechanic.

This is the open season for anti-freezing solutions, and car owners will save themselves much annoyance and considerable expense if they will heed this warning and take ordinary precautions.

There are three substances in general use for making anti-freeze solutions, each of which can be prepared by the owner himself, and used without having to consult the professional mechanic. Alcohol is probably the most popular of all anti-freeze agents. Glycerin has proved very effective, but its cost during the war made its use almost prohibitive to the ordinary owner. Calcium chloride is perhaps the most easily prepared solution of all and, for that reason, is widely used, but it is a dangerous solution to use. The commercial product, sold in solid form or in aqueous solutions as an anti-freeze mixture, is highly injurious because of the action on the components of the cooling system. Such alkaline solutions are productive of an electrical action wherever two dissimilar metals are utilized, such as the brass tubing of a radiator and the solder used at the joints, the iron water jackets and the brass or copper plates.

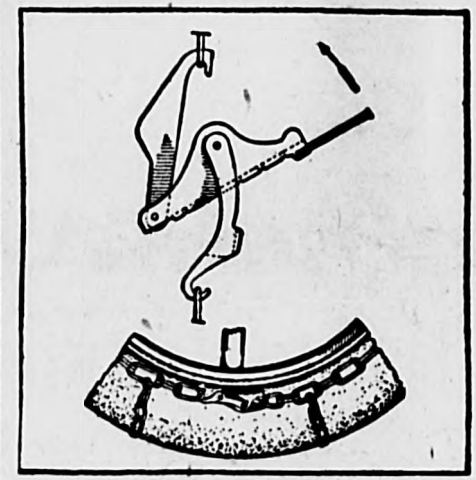

A summary of the opinions of motor car manufacturers as to the value of various anti-freeze solutions shows a decided preference for alcohol and glycerin. Neutral alcohol does not act on metal or on the rubber connections. But the alcohol in the solution will evaporate more rapidly than the water.

CHAIN CLAMP AND TIGHTENER

Invention of Montana Man Is Especially Adapted for Securing Non-Skid Chains.

The Scientific American in illustrating and describing a chain clamp and tightener, the invention of G. J. Weidman and J. H. Hughes of Lewiston, Mont., says:

This invention has for its object to provide a chain clamp and tightener, especially adapted for securing non-skid chains on motor vehicle tires, wherein mechanism is provided for easily and quickly tightening the chain and clamp in place beyond the possibility of accidental opening.

FIRE EXTINGUISHERS' HANDY

Something Like Life Preservers and in Case of Emergency Are Mighty Valuable.

Fire extinguishers are something like life preservers. Maybe you won't ever need one, but if you do need it, you need it badly. Our advice, says Motor Life, is to find a place on the car to attach one conveniently and keep it there religiously against that emergency we hope will never come.

—Miss Mary Pecoraro and Ciraco Guidice were married in Boston on Sunday. They were attended by Margaret D'Allesandro and Alphonso Pecoraro. A reception was held at the home of the bride on Lake street. After a short wedding trip to New York and other points of interest they will reside on Shawmut street.

—Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Frost of Park avenue are entertaining their daughter, Mrs. J. Warren Palmer and daughter Martha of Avon.

—Mrs. Sanford Hollis entertained a party of friends at her home on Front street Tuesday evening. A social evening was enjoyed and the guests played Flinch. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

—Mr. and Mrs. James Cronan of Revere announce the birth of a son on Jan. 29. Mrs. Cronan was formerly Miss Katherine Wagner of this town.

—Mrs. Helen Morse is to have charge of the program on Monday evening, Feb. 14, at the meeting of the Village Study club to be held in the Fogg library. The subject will be "The Boston Museum of Fine Arts" and an illustrated lecture will be given.

MONDAY CLUB

On Monday, Feb. 7, the Monday Club held its tenth meeting of the season. There was a short business session during which delegates were elected to attend the midwinter meeting of the State Federation.

Members were asked if they wished to endorse the Daylight Saving bill, and they showed at once that there were two opinions in regard to the bill, and the larger vote was against it.

The business was hurried through quickly that the entertainment might have plenty of time and it was delightful all the way through. Miss Blanchard was charmingly natural and unaffected in her songs; Mr. Baumgartner's piano playing was pleasing when accompanying the others, and still better when playing alone, and Mr. Webster was an exceptionally good with the cello. The program was well arranged to suit different tastes and all were seemingly much pleased. February 21 there will be another open meeting when Mr. Nathan Howard Gist will give a lecture concerning "The Wise and Otherwise," and Miss Grace Hatch, soprano, of Bridge-water, will sing.

The last meeting of the Civics Class was held on Friday and all those who have attended have felt well repaid for the effort. The different speakers gave much information, and often made one wish for more knowledge on a subject which, before the talk, had not looked worth while.

CLARK UNION SOCIAL

About 175 Christian Endeavorers from Clark C. E. Union attended a social in the East Weymouth Congregational church last Friday evening. The occasion was in celebration of Christian Endeavor's 40th birthday and was in charge of Miss Sarah Rix of East Weymouth.

The guests on arriving were given ways and means of getting acquainted and the evening started off with real enthusiasm.

The first plan was to get everyone into groups this being done in a clever way. The several groups competed on various interesting games and as a few speeches were brought in during the evening on the growth of Christian Endeavor, everyone realized it was Christian Endeavor's 40th birthday that was that night being celebrated.

The friendly rivalry which existed during the games helped to make a good time for all. The winning group was presented with a large box of candy and the group coming in second a smaller box.

After a most enjoyable program of games had been indulged in, the entertaining society served an appetizing lunch. At ten o'clock the guests adjourned, all expressing what a success Christian Endeavor's birthday party had been.

ODD FELLOWS OPERA HOUSE

Box car boxing and the aerial punch form the foundations of a new system of training for prize fighters adopted recently by pugilists on the coast. The system originated from discoveries made by William Duncan, known as the Sandow of the screen, and some of his fellow players during filming of the latest Vitagraph serial: "The Silent Avenger."

"Boxing skill, punching power and confidence can be increased from 39 to 50 percent by the new method," said Duncan. "The process he referred to is that of boxing on a swaying tilting platform resting on a post, which causes the participants to reel, stumble and dance."

He found that the wabbling platform gave him new skill in balance and equilibrium and speed. Several pugilists immediately adopted the idea. The first chapter of "The Silent Avenger," in which the boxer fight occurs, will be seen at the Opera House, East Weymouth, next Wednesday.

In the first episode of his new serial "King of the Circus," Eddie Polo, the "Universal star, engages in three spirited fist-fights, is in an automobile smashup, jumps from a cliff, rescues a girl from a burning house and takes a desperate chance on a swinging wire. These stunts are all logically developed and hold the interest with stirring sequence. Polo promises more and riskier stunts for the succeeding episodes. "King of the Circus," will be shown at the Opera House, East Weymouth, commencing Saturday, Feb. 19.

W. R. C. NOTES

At the last meeting of Corps 102 there was a large attendance, two members were admitted by transfer and two applications were brought in. The Corps is greatly honored by having P. D. P. Mary Holbrook for patriotic instructor.

At the meeting of the executive committee plans were made for a busy year.

P. P. Mary Mahoney, chairman of the birthday committee, appointed her committees for the year.

In the evening Lincoln's and Washington's birthdays were observed. There were visitors from Rockland and Cambridge Corps.

The shut-ins are to be remembered each month with letters.

P. P. Mary Mahoney and her committee visited the Parker Hill hospital, on Monday. Every bed in Ward X, called the W. R. C. ward, is occupied. At the meeting of the World War Veterans yesterday at headquarters, Mrs. Mahoney chairman, there was a large attendance.

Glad to know Mae Barrows, who has been in a hospital in West Palm Beach, Fla., is improving.

Cards were sent P. P. Emeline Vine of St. Petersburg, Fla., on her birthday.

President Clara Maynard and past president Mary Mahoney attended the mid-winter convention at Worcester. Mrs. Maynard representing the corps and Mrs. Mahoney the World War veterans special aid.

Flowers and cards were sent Mrs. Mary West on her 87th birthday.

Past president Mary Brassill was happily surprised by receiving one-half dozen solid silver teaspoons from her many friends in the W. R. C. Glad to know she is improving in health.

Camp 36, S. of V., have invited the Relief Corps to a Lincoln and Washington birthday celebration in Grand Army hall, Feb. 18, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

SERVICE STAR LEGION

At the suggestion of Mrs. M. A. Joy, National President of the Service Star Legion, the Saturday before Valentines day is to be the annual tag day this year, Feb. 12. Tags to be red hearts with "S. S. L." on them. All over the United States these red hearts will be sold to gain funds to help in the welfare work of the local chapters. Old Colony chapter hopes that the public will be generous, as there is great need in our hospitals at this time.

The next meeting of the chapter will be held in the Legion building, corner Washington street and Hollis avenue, Braintree, Monday, Feb. 14, at 2 P. M. Mrs. Raymond Palmer of Rockport, who has adopted one of the French orphans, is to speak and read letters which she has received from her orphan. There will be music also, and it is expected that our State President, Mrs. Irving, will tell of her trip to the executive meeting in Cleveland and what was accomplished there. Friends of the chapter are cordially invited to be present.

Mrs. Libby, Mrs. Dowd, Mrs. Talbot, Mrs. Savage and Mrs. Richards went to the West Roxbury hospital Tuesday, Feb. 1, and carried doughnuts, apples, cigarettes and 50 bags of candy for the boys. The South Weymouth people have donated $11.60 recently to buy treats for the boys, also two overcoats and a lot of candy. Mrs. Billings sent a box of goodies and letters to two lonely Scotch boys at Parker Hill hospital this week.

Anyone wishing to contribute to this very worthy cause, please notify Mrs. H. A. Billings, chairman of the Welfare Committee, phone Quincy 477M. Overcoats for the boys are much needed.

DOROTHEA L. DIX TENT

The Sewing Circle will hold a session on the afternoon of Feb. 17, in G. A. R. hall. Supper will be served at 6 o'clock. Sisters are requested to bring pastry.

The Daughters of Veterans will take part in the patriotic exercises to be held in the Soldiers Home at Chelsea on Monday, Feb. 14, and every sister who can is urged to go.

Sister Augusta Bell is reported as ill and in the hospital. Cards will reach her if addressed to Goddard hospital, Brockton. Send her a card, sisters, for a word of cheer goes a long way when one is ill and away from home.

Officers of the Tent are requested to be on hand promptly at 7 o'clock on Thursday evening, Feb. 17.

WEYMOUTH HEIGHTS

—Miss Margaret Blanchard of Church street celebrated her 82d birthday on Sunday and was the recipient of cards and flowers.

—An entertainment and sale was held in the First Church chapel on Wednesday evening under the auspices of the Junior C. E. and Winona Campfire Girls. The entertainment consisted of Campfire songs by a group of the Campfire Girls in their ceremonial gowns, piano solos by Master Robert Bates, and humorous dialogues entitled: "Obtaining Help at the Country," and "Taking the Census," given by the Misses Frances Crane and Ethel Whipple. The feature of the evening was a farce entitled: "Sing a Song of Seniors," the cast being made up of the Misses Virginia Emery, Mabel Emery, Ruth Mayo, Eleanor Freeman and Esther Mayo, who took the part of seniors; also Bertha Prouty, a member of the faculty and Miss Ruth A. Nash, principal of the school. The farce was greatly enjoyed and the girls deserve credit for the way in which it was enacted. The ice cream and candy sale was a success, and the whole evening was a pleasing one to all.

—On Sunday, February 6, the Junior Christian Endeavor society connected with the First church celebrated its fourth birthday. A special service in charge of Miss Florence B. Nash was held in the afternoon at 3.45 o'clock. The guests on this occasion were the members of the North Weymouth Junior C. E. society, Miss Mabel Emery, president of the Weymouth Heights society, opened the service with a consecration exercise, followed by songs and prayer. A Bible drill was an interesting feature of the program at which time the boys and girls proved they knew how to handle their Bible intelligently. The subject of the afternoon was: "What It Means to Belong to Christ." Several spoke on this topic and the remarks were helpful and interesting. At the close of the service Miss Nash gave a few remarks regarding the fourth birthday of the Junior C. E., after which a beautiful birthday cake was brought in and shared with everyone present. Souvenirs of little candles about which were entwined the verse: "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good work, and glorify your Father which is in Heaven," were distributed, and the birthday celebration came to a close, the Weymouth Heights Junior C. E. having prospects of many more pleasant birthdays.

—The Woman's Missionary society will meet with Mrs. Elmer Lunt next Wednesday evening at 7.30.

—The Ladies in the Sewing Circle connected with the First church are making preparations for an Easter sale and entertainment to be held in March.

—A Valentine social under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E. will be held in the First church chapel next Tuesday evening at 7.45, to which the community is invited.

—Holiday bags have been distributed among the members of the Ladies Benevolent society into which they are to put 10 cents for the observance of each holiday.

—The Neighborhood Whist club held their good time this week Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. A. J. Gold. The first prize was taken by Mrs. George Wheaton and the second by Mrs. Roy Bickford. A dainty lunch was served.

Harmful Inquisitiveness.
In Asia and Africa the inquisitiveness of baboons enables the natives to capture them by placing some jars of sweetened water out where they can reach it. The liquid contains a certain variety of doxy herb. At first the curious creatures advance rather cautiously toward the jars and taste the water, then finding the taste agreeable, they proceed to drink the jars empty. As a result, they soon become quite drowsy and offer no resistance when the natives approach to take them.

Remarkable Swimming Feats.
Capt. Matthew Webb, in 1875, succeeded in swimming from Dover to Calais in 21 hours and 45 minutes. On September 5 and 6, 1911, Thomas William Burgess, an Englishman residing in Paris, swam from South Foreland, England, to Le Chatelet, France. The time was 24 hours and 35 minutes.

Cheerfulness.
Cheerfulness is full of significance; it suggests good health, a clear conscience and a soul at peace with all human nature.—Charles Kingsley.

LINCOLN THE MAN

"Let not him who is homeless pull down the house of another, but let him labor diligently to build one for himself."
—A. Lincoln

A recent writer on Lincoln as a "lover of mankind" has likened him to two other great men who have become a common possession of our Anglo-Saxon race. Although they seem almost as far separated from each other as from Lincoln himself, both Chaucer and Sir Walter Scott reveal to the careful observer the qualities that provoked a comparison apparently so remote. These are the qualities of a lover of mankind.

Chaucer displayed them in depicting, with sympathy for all, the group of widely various characters who made their immortal Canterbury Pilgrimage together. Scott displayed them not only through the creatures of his imagination, but also in his recorded relations with all his fellow beings. In that respect Chaucer is at a disadvantage, because he lived long before biography had attained anything like its modern abundance. Lincoln, later than Scott, and more tempting to biographers because of his high place, is the most fully recorded of them all—although there is no single book about him that seems so sure to persist as the "Life of Scott," by Scott's son-in-law, Lockhart.

It is in the very variety and extent of the studies of Lincoln's character that the strength of his hold on the imagination of the world is shown. Fifty-six years have passed since he met his tragic death. Through all that period the interpretations of his character—historical, analytical, poetical—have steadily increased in number. The bare facts of his unique, yet strangely typical and significant career, arranged themselves in perspective like the acts of a great uplifting tragedy. If he had lived in the days when myths were made, it is easy to imagine that in the process of time he would have grown into a great mythical figure, a King Arthur of the New World, a half-divine hero like those that we associate with the most distant antiquity.

But he belonged to no such period. His age is one of the most amply recorded in all history, and the records of his life are so intertwined with those of men and events quite without poetic or heroic suggestion, that his feet can never be wholly removed from the earth. Indeed, it is much better that no such possibility exists. We need to know that out of our common life can spring so extraordinary an example of the development of which our human nature is capable.

When all is said and done, when his wisdom, his patience, his sacrifice are fully remembered, we shall delight pre-eminently to recall him as the friendly, humorous, accessible lover of mankind.—Youth's Companion.

Lincoln and Sumner.

Lincoln was modestly proud of his stature and of the effect of the physical man, especially when actuated by noble sentiments. He used to speak of his height to every tall man he met, and to propose measuring—another guileless habit of self-gratification. The only refusal he is known to have received was from Charles Sumner, who was also tall and proud of his height. Sumner was worrying the President, as he often did, about some perplexing matter, when Lincoln abruptly challenged him to measure. "Sumner declined," said Lincoln, "making a fine speech about this being the time for uniting our fronts against the enemy, and not our backs. But I guess he was afraid, though he is a good piece of a man. I have never had much to do with bishops where I live, but, do you know, Sumner is my idea of a bishop."—Harper's Weekly.

As Lincoln Is Remembered.

The work he did, the sum of his deeds and their great fruitage, may inspire the chronicler of our national life and the recorder of God's hand-writing in the annals of His world; but to the rank and file, who know but vaguely the details of his heroic achievements, the memory of Lincoln takes the form of a warming, loving, saddening personal presence, a latter-day reflection of the everlasting Man of Sorrows.

Why Lincoln Helped a Bug.

President Lincoln was walking with a friend about Washington and turned back for some distance to assist a beetle that had got on its back and lay on the walk, legs sprawling in air, vainly trying to turn itself over. The friend expressed surprise that the President, burdened with the cares of a warring nation, should find time to spare in assisting a bug. "Well," said Lincoln, with that homely sincerity that touched the hearts of millions of his countrymen, "do you know that if I had left that bug struggling there on his back I wouldn't have felt just right? I wanted to put him on his feet and give him an equal chance with all the other bugs of his class."

Cut Lincoln Off His List.

General Heidekoper in 1862 detailed two companies of his regiment to guard President Lincoln's summer residence. He saw the President constantly and they became real friends.

The first time the general met the President, Lincoln, who had heard that the Heidekopers came from Holland, inquired: "What is the difference between an Amsterdam Dutchman and any other damn Dutchman?"

And the general, who admired Lincoln above all other Americans, adds: "If I had had any awe of the President it was then and there forever gone."—Girard, in Philadelphia Ledger.

With a Nation's Tribute

Funeral Train of the Martyred President Leaving Washington Under Escort.
(From an Old Print.)

The splendor of the ceremonials which aggrandize living royalty as much as they glorify dead heroism was wholly wanting in the obsequies of Mr. Lincoln. No part was taken by the government except the provision of a suitable military escort. All beyond was the spontaneous movement of the people. For seventeen hundred miles, through eight great states of the Union whose population was not less than 15 million, an almost continuous procession of mourners attended the remains of the beloved President. There was no pageantry save their presence. There was no tribute but their tears. They bowed before the bier of him who had been prophet, priest and king to his people, who had struck the shackles from the slave, who had taught a higher sense of duty to the free man, who had raised the nation to a loftier conception of faith and hope and charity

OLD LOVE TOKENS

Years Ago All Valentines Had a Personal Touch.

Much of the Romance of the Day Has Passed, Though Sentiment Is the Same as Ever.

Three hundred years ago young men and women wrote their own valentines, which consisted then only of love mottoes, or declarations of affection, written in verse from a very full heart and on plain paper. Many of our great-grandmothers saved these old missives.

Perhaps our parents came across such valentines, old and yellow and decaying, packed away in lavender in the bottom of a dusty trunk up in the attic. Yet when these valentines were first penned and put in her hand how grandma's heart did palpitate and the blushes rise to her cheeks! No matter how halting the sonnet, or anagram or triolet, it was the music of love to her. "Heart," "dart" and "art" did rhyme sweetly!

The machine-made valentines that we buy nowadays have lost this personal touch, though perhaps some of them have gained from an artistic point of view. Today it is only the school children and a few open-hearted interested grown-ups who find the custom of valentine making and valentine giving the fascination that it used to be. Why, even Charles Lamb wrote valentines, and loved to.

Now the modern young man drops in a confectioner's or florist's shop and orders candy or flowers sent to Her. He scorns the valentine sonnet—whereby the girls of today are missing a heap of romance.

This was the day when a young man might accuse some young woman he admired of being a coquette without insulting her. In those days "coquette" had just such a naughty meaning as "vamp" has today. It meant a heartless trifle.

If she thereupon sent him a handmade valentine on which were two bleeding hearts made as one, it was her answer to his accusation. It meant that conquering the hearts of other men than he, meant nothing to her; that only his heart and hers in all the world counted, that her heart was bleeding for him just as much as his was suffering for her.

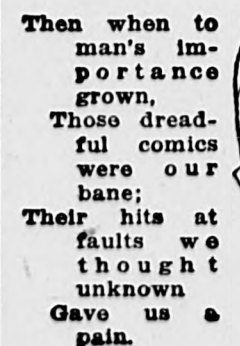

The comic valentine is an outgrowth or burlesque of the super-sentimental valentine and has almost died out. Instead of pointing out the recipient's perfections and charms it dwells vividly and uncomplimentarily on his mannerisms, clothes and appearance, in colored caricature. Red hair, large noses, blotched complexions, remarkable skinniness or avoirdupois are usually the jocular themes. Because valentines are sent anonymously, it is possible with impunity to remark scathingly on the physical characteristics or disposition of one's friends or foes.

NOT AS IN DAYS OF OLD

Valentine Day Missives Somehow Differ From Those of One's Gay and Festive Youth.

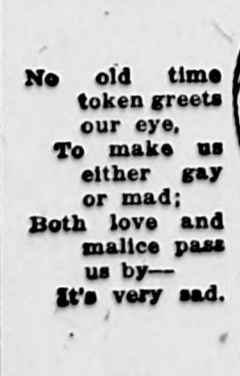

When we were yet a youngster small,
And sweet hearts true swapped valentines,
What joy was ours! How we recall
Their mushy lines!

Then when to man's importance grown,
Those dreadful comics were our bane;
Their hits at faults we thought unknown
Gave us a pain.

But February 14 moves us no more
Although the day brings missives still;
We get a dunning letter, or,
Perchance a bill.

No old time token greets our eye,
To make us either gay or mad;
Both love and malice pass us by—
It's very sad.

Make Sure of Valentine Kiss.
If you have no sweetheart to come to kiss you early on St. Valentine's morning, go out and sweep the nearest well with a broom. Once the cobwebs are gone he will come flying.

CUPID'S OWN DAY

Fourteenth of February Belongs to Him Alone.

Anniversary Brightens the Drab Month With Memories of the Past and Joy of the Present.

Brightening the dull, drab month of February and doing their very best to cheer up and bring love into our hearts, the valentines—the valentines smile at us with their lace-and-forget-me-not daintiness from the shop windows.

There are elaborate "millionaire" valentines of celluloid and blue ribbons that come in big lace boxes, like French dolls; there are valentines that when pulled out like an accordion become Cinderella coaches of cardboard, laden with Loves and Venuses and Cupids. Others resolve themselves into airy pink-and-blue palaces—you never know—peopled with delightful goddesses and doves.

But the best and most sincere, perhaps, are the old-fashioned valentines—vistas of foamy paper lace, through which you look upon hearts redder than lovers' lips, in a prospect of violets and forget-me-nots. And hidden away, like a billet doux in a bouquet, a little verse:

This heart, sweet love, I send to you,
Together with these violets blue;
And if you like this heart of mine,
I pray you be my valentine.

Could anything be more simple or direct to the point? As unerringly as Cupid's darts or a beau's rapier, the verse carries its message home. It may be that the Elizabethan lyrics, the love songs of Herrick and Lovelace and Suckling, survive today only in the valentine.

And, ah, what memories these harbingers of love bring with them! They lead us back along the columbine-bordered road to yesterday, over the asphodel meadows of Youth and First Love and Childhood Fancies, and we meet and kiss our first sweethearts again—alas, they have gone out of our lives these many years.

And so, dear little Valentine, accept these violets and forget-me-nots, and hug this message close to your heart—for surely a sweetheart is the sweeter for a valentine, and, as all wise men know, 'tis love that makes the world go round.

GOOD OLD SAINT IN TROUBLE

Embarrassed by Shower of Hearts, Though It Would Seem He Should Be Used to It.

St. Valentine slyly
Put up his umbrella.
"This shower of hearts
Would embarrass a fellow.

"I'm glad that I manage it
Once in a year.
Exercise is the thing
Hearts are needing, I fear.

"While many are beating,
They're all out of tune,
And cold as December
Instead of warm June.

"So I'll mix 'em and change 'em
And warm 'em up, too."
I wonder if he'll fix
Your heart up for you?

Valentine Challenge.

One form which the observance of Valentine's day took in England was that of a person's valentine being the first young man or woman that person saw on Valentine's day. This developed into the custom of challenging one's valentine by saying, "Good morning, 'tis St. Valentine's day." The one who said it first upon meeting a person of the opposite sex received a gift.

Interesting Valentine Reading.
Interesting reading for Valentine's day is Dickens' account of Samivel Weller's laborious writing of a valentine to his housemaid love, signed "Your lovesick Pickwick."

TEDDY'S VALENTINE

I know that I love you
My own Mother dear,
I'm writing it down on
This Valentine here.
And I promise that I
Most truly will try
To help you
And please you
The whole of
This year.
I love you,
Teddy.

SPRING SUITS THAT ARE VERY TEMPTING

SPRING, having dawned over the horizon in the world of fashion, lures us to study of new suits—and an early Easter is an incentive for making an immediate choice. The new models are as "easy to look at" as a pretty woman—and as hard to resist. There is nothing quite so tempting—except the new hats to be worn with them—and both have beautiful innovations in styles to offer.

At this writing, dark blue, beige and gray are in the ascendant in colors for suits, but not monopolizing attention, and there are many shades in them. Colors are quiet, designs unusual and much attention given to embellishment, in which embroideries lead. Two very smart exponents of the styles in the embroidered coterie are shown in the suits pictured. A dark blue twill at the left has a coat that is plainly of Chinese inspiration, hanging in straight, cape-like lines, and with flaring sleeves. The silk embroidery is in self-color. Nearly always there is a gleam of silver or gold thread in these embroideries, or the introduction of a little soft contrasting color, sparingly used. The skirt in this model is very practical—wide enough for comfort—and plain. It makes a fine background for a handsome sash of satin, bordered with a looped fringe. The coat fastens only at the neck, revealing a frilly blouse beneath. It is a youthful, springtime model, open at the throat and cool looking.

The suit at the right of the picture will delight those who love trim, straight lines; it hardly acknowledges a curve and emphasizes this fact with buttons that extend to the top of the standing collar. Flaring sleeves, embroidery about the arm's-eye, and large patch pockets that extend below the bottom of the coat, are all noteworthy, good points in the smart style of this model.

Everything Glitters

THE goddess of Fashion must have had a twinkle in her eye this year when she turned her thoughts toward spring millinery, and almost everything in hats reflects that twinkle. Colors are reserved and rich—they can afford to border on the sedate, for the most comprehensive description of the new models is found in the phrase "Everything Glitters." It fell from the lips of an expert millinery authority, after a study of a great collection of new models, but is not meant to convey that everything has a hard brilliance. Hats are radiant with a play of light over surfaces that catch and reflect it.

The outstanding feature in spring hats is cellophane materials, sometimes alone, but oftener in conjunction with other fabrics. Fashion has led up to this brilliant stuff by the vogue for beads and embroideries and, after several seasons of experimenting, manufacturers have advanced cellophane to the place of first importance. The new hats—of whatever material—are soft and light, their lines beautiful and becoming and their colors rich. Laces, flowers, bows, veils and handsome ornamental pins are the trimmings featured.

includes four hats that are representative of the season. At the top a chic street hat has a crown of cellophane and a draped brim of corded moire, all in gray, with two coral pins by way of finish. It is a simple but immensely clever bit of artistry. At the right another gray hat of cellophane, with a gray rose of folded ribbon at the front, divides honors with a very handsome navy veil. A lovely dress hat at the left has a body of black hair-braid with rows of narrow cellophane applied and a flange of malines about the graceful brim. A wreath of fine flowers and a generous sash of French blue ribbon completes a hat that every woman loves. A similar style below, of navy hair-braid and cellophane with a wreath of old blue poppies, fulfills the mission of a less picturesque but equally pleasing demidress hat which is equal to many occasions. Black and brown are great favorites and the refinement of lace and malines in both colors is an allurement that designers make the most of.

WHY RISK WET FEET WHEN SHOES CAN BE MADE QUITE WATERPROOF

This Is All You Need with Which to Waterproof Shoes.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Nothing is much more uncomfortable than going about with wet shoes, yet even the most forehanded are caught occasionally in a storm without rubbers and wet feet is their portion, as with those who dislike and seldom wear overshoes. Although rubber overshoes and boots will keep water out, they also keep the perspiration in. Moreover, they are cold in winter and hot in summer. For these reasons, as well as because of their excessive weight, rubber footwear is objectionable to many people; but dependence for keeping the feet dry must be placed on rubber overshoes and boots or waterproofed leather shoes and boots. The bureau of chemistry, United States Department of Agriculture, has recently completed a series of experiments on the care and use of leather and recommends waterproofing the shoes that are worn in the winter and spring months.

Not Wholly Water-Tight.

Leather shoes and boots, as they are made nowadays, when treated to make them water resistant, allow the entrance of some water owing principally to the difficulty of completely waterproofing the seams. Such footwear cannot be expected to keep the feet perfectly dry if worn for a long time in wet weather, nor will it take the place of rubber overshoes or boots for walking in water, slushy snow, or very soft mud. They are very satisfactory, however, for protecting the feet during rain or snowstorms and for use on wet pavements or wet ground. They also keep the perspiration in, but are not as objectionable as rubber in this respect.

The application of oil or grease to light-colored or russet leather darkens it, more or less, and also makes any leather more difficult to polish. Where this is objectionable, only the soles of the shoes should be waterproofed. The uppers can be made quite water resistant by the frequent application of good wax polish.

The occasional use of castor oil on shoe uppers will increase their water resistance, as well as their flexibility and durability, without greatly interfering with their being polished. If the oil is applied lightly to the clean dry shoes and rubbed in until the leather is dry, they may be polished immediately, although it is better to wait until the following day. If the oil is applied too heavily, it will be difficult to polish the shoes and the resulting shine will not last very long. In summer the grease used for waterproofing shoes and boots should be harder than that used in winter. Since heavily greased shoes have a tendency to cause the feet to perspire and swell in hot weather, and there is also less need for the water-resistant shoes in summer than in winter and spring, it is rarely advisable to put as much grease on the shoes at that time of the year. In summer, the quantity of grease used should not exceed the amount that the leather will take up without leaving its surface greasy. In winter, especially if it is desired to get the greatest water resistance, a mixture of grease and oils that is not too hard when cold is required; more of this grease than the leather will absorb may be used. An excess will do no harm and will make the leather more water resistant.

Waterproofing Formulas.

For waterproofing boots and shoes, nothing better than the following simple formulas is known to the Department of Agriculture. While the department believes that these formulas do not infringe on any existing patents or pending applications for patents, it can assume no responsibility.

Formula 1: 8 ounces of neutral wool grease, 4 ounces dark petrolatum, and 4 ounces paraffin wax.

Formula 2: 1 pound petrolatum, 2 ounces beeswax.

Formula 3: 8 ounces petrolatum, 4 ounces paraffin wax, 4 ounces wool grease and 2 ounces crude turpentine gum (gum thus).

Formula 4: 12 ounces tallow and 4 ounces cod oil.

Should Be Melted Together.

In each case the ingredients of the mixture should be melted together by warming them carefully and stirring thoroughly. Better penetration is obtained if the grease is applied warm, but it should never be hotter than the hand can bear.

Grease thoroughly the edge of the sole and the welt, as this is where shoes leak most. The sole should also be thoroughly impregnated with the grease, thereby increasing its water resistance, durability, and pliability. The sole can be most conveniently waterproofed by letting the shoe stand for about 15 minutes in a shallow pan containing enough of the melted waterproofing material to cover the entire sole. Rubber heels, however, should not be allowed to stand in the grease, as it softens the rubber.

CONDIMENTS BIG AID TO ATTRACTIVENESS

Diet Must Please Palate as Well as Give Nourishment.

Rightly Used Various Materials Are Useful in Making Different Foods More Pleasant—Some Furnish Minerals.

In this year of high prices, people are inclined to look askance at foods that do not seem to them to possess plenty of food value. In providing the dietary essentials, however, one must not overlook the fact that the diet should be pleasing to the palate as well as nourishing. There are some materials which are not depended upon to furnish body nourishment, though they add to the attractiveness and palatability of the daily bill of fare. Among this group of highly flavored materials, commonly spoken of as condiments, are vinegar, spices, flavoring herbs, horseradish, onion, parsley, celery tops, and sweet peppers. Such materials may not be absolutely needed by the body, but, on the other hand, most people seem agreed that rightly used they are very useful for making palatable dishes which might otherwise be much less attractive. The green vegetables listed among the condiments—onions, parsley, celery tops, green peppers—while valuable as are the other condiments for flavor also have additional value as they supply mineral matter and vitamins.

When one is striving to make meals reasonable in cost, greater reliance than ever is placed on such naturally flavored foods as cereals, cereal products, and potatoes because these foods which supply relatively amounts of nutrients for a given

In such cases condiments and seasonings are a help to variety. Cinnamon buns, for instance, thanks to their distinctive flavor, seem a very different thing from the biscuit or bread they replace. Rice or beans cooked with tomatoes, with a green pepper and celery tops added, seem very different from plain boiled rice or beans. Cream sauce for fish becomes something very distinctive when lemon juice is added to give it a mild tart flavor. Boiled beef with horseradish sauce tastes quite different from plain boiled beef, yet it requires little time, trouble, or expense to thicken some of the beef broth with flour and to add grated horseradish enough to give it a good flavor, then pour this over the sliced meat.

The thing one must not forget, say Department of Agriculture experts, is that a truly varied diet, one which includes all five food groups, namely, vegetables and fruits; milk, eggs, meat, and similar foods; cereals and their products; sugar and other sweets; fats and fat-rich foods, is essential in order that the needed food constituents may all be supplied. Different methods of cooking everyday things in such varied ways that they make savory dishes means that the diet may be varied without much additional expense. Accomplish this variety by the aid of judicious use of condiments and flavors with common foods.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES

Bed springs painted with aluminum paint will not rust.

Established Styles in Skirts

JUST now shop windows and show rooms are spring songs of cheerful merchandise. Lovely new cottons, in exquisite weaves, are on display and they include heavy as well as sheer fabrics—the heavy weaves suggesting separate skirts and suits, and the sheer ones enticing the seamstress to make summer frocks. Neighboring windows accommodatingly show ready-made garments, helping to establish the styles, and if one thing is more firmly fixed in our minds than another, it is a vogue for plaited skirts. Eight out of ten models, at least, are plaited, mostly in box plaits, narrow or wide, single, double and triple.

It is the great number of striped and cross-bar patterns in materials that accounts for the diversity in plaits. Designers exercise their ingenuity in producing effects with them which change the looks of the pattern in the skirt or feature certain colors in it, so that material in which a light and a dark stripe alternate may be made up into a skirt that is all dark, by plaiting the light stripe under—or the reverse. Even the plain-surfaced goods are plaited, however.

One of the practical skirts for spring, as shown in the picture, has a wide, barred stripe, narrowed by plaiting, that alternates with a plain stripe. The belt is made of the barred stripe, with long tabs at each side, turned up and fastened with an odd flat button. There is nothing more trim than a well-fitting plaited skirt.

For Hours of Leisure

THOSE who begin in late winter to prepare for spring and summer find easy sailing when the matter of afternoon frocks is under consideration. There are so many attractive models, and always new ones that may be copied, in fabrics that are never out of style. Besides, spring materials make their debut in January, or even earlier, and their appearance is the signal that inspires designers. Leaving out the world of beautiful cotton goods, it is possible also to play safe with taffetas and georgette.

These two dependable and beautiful materials have advocates in the frocks for afternoon, shown in the picture above. The dress at the left is a sprightly and pretty model that pins its faith wholly to taffetas in a fascinating shade of blue. It has a long straight bodice and plain skirt to start with and relies upon flounces to give it a flavor of youth and gaiety. These flounces overlap on the skirt and make the best of finishes for elbow-length sleeves. There is a small and somewhat frivolous collar at the back accompanied by a pert bow on the left shoulder.

Georgette calls in the aid of satin in the more dignified dress at the right. Over a satin underskirt there is a very long tunic of georgette in four panels, those at the back and front hanging in plaits, and those at the sides banded with satin. The bodice reverses the order of things in the skirt with panels of satin at the back and front placed over the under-bodice of georgette. The sleeves show the new, draped finish and a generous sash provides an opportunity for handsome embroidery in silk of several colors.

Hutchings, Ernest E. Sanford and the first three officers.

Mrs. Violet Beck, who has been quite ill at her home on Green street is now able to be up and around.

A farewell surprise party was tendered to Mrs. Theresa Condon one evening recently and she was presented a travelling bag. Refreshments were served and an enjoyable evening passed.

The L. A. K. C. B. C. will hold a business meeting at the home of Mrs. Margaret Hurley, Newton street, on Friday evening.

Miss Margaret Delorey of Parnell street and George Harrison of Norfolk, Va., have recently been the guests of Miss Delorey's sister in Dorchester.

Alfred Gardner is confined to the house, the result of an accident at the A. A. C. plant at Port Point last Saturday, when he was caught between two electric trucks.

Gardner was fortunate enough to escape without any broken bones, but a pair of badly bruised legs will keep him confined to the house for some time.

Mrs. Abbie E. Beals has as a guest Mrs. Mary Franklin of Fall River.

Miss Carrie Rogers of Bicknell Square has taken a position at Bradley's.

The Misses Ruth Beach and Isabel Phillips of Mooseheart, Ill., students at Boston University, were the guests on Sunday of Mrs. Warren Menchlin.

The Service League held its regular meeting at the Pilgrim church Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Isaac Sneath president of the Norfolk and Pilgrims branch of the Women's Board of Foreign Missions was the speaker.

Mr. and Mrs. William Mann of Sea street, spent the week-end in Marlboro the guests of relatives.

Mrs. Mary Sherman of Bridge street is visiting relatives in Melrose.

George McAllister of Pearl street is confined to his home by illness.

Mrs. Charles Austin of Standish road spent Sunday in South Quincy, the guest of her son Franklin.

The Philathea Associates had a supper and entertainment at the Pilgrim church on Wednesday. A drama "Mrs. Jenkins Brilliant Idea" was enacted. Vocal solos by Esther McGill and piano duets by Mrs. Lee and Mrs. Dasha made up a pleasing program.

The Sea Scouts, a newly formed organization of young men, are giving their first entertainment next Wednesday evening at the King Cove Boat clubhouse.

Sunday afternoon the Ladies Auxiliary, A. O. H., installed the following officers: President, Katherine Mack; vice-president, Mary Sloan; financial secretary, Annie Egan; corresponding secretary, Josephine Dwyer; treasurer, Katherine Donnelly.

A supper was served to members and a musical entertainment provided. Warren Gunville and Irving Keene, journeyed to P. Smith, N. H., on Saturday with the high school basketball team.

This body of Edward Pike, a former member, was brought here for burial in the cemetery. Interment was made in the cemetery.

Mrs. Harry Desmond will be glad to hear that she is able to be out again after an illness of 8 weeks.

Phyllis Keene, recovered from an illness of several weeks duration.

and has returned to her house in Norwell.

Mrs. Nellie Conneen has returned from a visit to Dorchester and is at her home on Beals street.

Mrs. James Ash of Norton street has recently entertained Edward Sullivan of Dedham.

Mrs. Closson is quite ill at her home on Neck street.

Mr. and Mrs. Eastman and daughters spent Sunday at their summer house on Wessagusset road.

Under the auspices of the Men's Fellowship club Supt. Wilkins of the Massachusetts Oil Co. at Braintree delivered a talk on "Oil Fields to Refineries" at the Pilgrim church Tuesday evening, which was of interest just at this time. He gave a very interesting explanation of the process of refining crude oil and the different products obtained therefrom. In regard to the odors which have been a source of annoyance to people living in the vicinity, he said the company was using every means to overcome the trouble, and it was his opinion that although unpleasant it was in no way injurious to health. They had also had complaints from bathers in regard to so much oil on the river and he explained that the company did not have any oil at the plant until the last of August and therefore were not responsible for oil on the water previous to that time, but when the first cargo and the tanks were being filled with water for the return voyage the watchman fell asleep on his job and allowed the oil that remained in the tanks to escape on the river, something that would not probably happen again.

About 20 from Weymouth attended on Tuesday the hearing given by the State Board of Health in Boston on the petition for abatement of nuisance alleged to be caused by the Massachusetts Oil Refining plant at East Braintree.

K. OF C. ANNIVERSARY

The 18th anniversary of Weymouth council, K. of C., on Thursday evening, Feb. 3, was a social event of the season, including a reception, banquet, entertainment and dancing. The entertainment consisted of selections by an orchestra, soprano solos by Miss Gracie O'Connell, piano selections by Mrs. Charles M. Burke, humorous numbers by Leo W. Burke, baritone songs by John Ghorse and songs and specialties by John Bandy and Thomas Ohmert. Orchestral music, dancing and serving of refreshments occupied the time until after midnight. Guests were present from Quincy, Rockland, Braintree and Cohasset, making an attendance of 250.

ALHAMBRA WEEKLY

—The Community Association of South Weymouth will give a lecture next Sunday evening, Feb. 13, at 7.30 by Col. C. H. French, subject: "Mt. Pelee of Martinique and the Destruction of St. Pierre." The lecturer was an eye witness to this catastrophe.

—Mrs. L. A. Pack of Union street is spending several weeks in Providence, R. I.

—Wesley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Holbrook of Pleasant street is quarantined at his home with scarlet fever.

—The Norfolk Pilgrim branch, W. R. M., met with Mrs. Waterman at her home on Pleasant street Friday afternoon. Mrs. Sneath, president of the branch, was present and gave an interesting talk to the members.

—Rev. C. H. Murch, D. D., of West Virginia conducted the service in the Second Universalist church Sunday morning. Mr. Murch is a candidate for the pastorate.

—Mrs. George Hunt won the first prize at the whist party conducted by the Weymouth A. A. in Music hall Friday evening.

—The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Parker Allen of Main street is recovering from an attack of pneumonia.

—Sunday evening, Feb. 13, Col. C. H. French, reputed to be one of America's best travelogue lecturers with the "Most complete and Expert collection of Pictures in the World," will deliver his lecture on "Mont Pelee of Martinique and the destruction of Saint Pierre" in the Community House. The lecturer was an eye-witness of this great catastrophe and brings to us first-hand knowledge and the very best of illustrations.

—William Moore of Main street has accepted a position with the A. O. Crawford Co.

—Mrs. J. E. Knight is confined to her home on Union street by illness.

WHY WAS HE OVERLOOKED?

Editor Gazette and Transcript:
It will surprise most people in Weymouth to learn that the pre-eminent greatest sufferer from last fall's tornado did not share in the funds collected for the relief of tornado victims.

Olaf Peterson of 143 Pine street, South Weymouth, has by this suffered a disappointment almost as great as the shock consequent of the tornado. His is a very pathetic case, which evidently escaped the sympathies of the relief committee.

1. His two barns were blown away.
2. His house was made untenable.

3. About 500 chickens, some hogs and cows were blown away or killed.
4. He has had a son sick with infantile paralysis the last nine months. This child has cost him all he could earn and owes about $200 to hospitals.

5. The $2400 mortgage on his place has just been foreclosed by an Abington bank.

He collected in his hat during the fall about $525. Other sufferers whose losses were practically nil collected in almost as much.

It will become necessary to help Mr. Peterson for decency and humanity sake.

This is written to familiarize Weymouth people with the status of his case, not to criticize the committee's work, which has been difficult. Mr. Peterson's inability to express himself at the hearings no doubt influenced the members to leave him out.

I trust the Weymouth Gazette will take this matter up and see what can be done.

Respectfully,
Lars P. Solness

BASKETBALL

Weymouth High journeyed to Portsmouth on Saturday and were taken into camp by Portsmouth High 44 to 22. The home team had ten men of the floor. All the Weymouth boys secured points.

The C. M. A. five played at Cambridge on Saturday and won from the Y. M. C. A. five 29 to 28. Gannon and Williams made most of the points. At the Clapp gym last Friday the C. M. A. five won from the All-Collegians 44 to 37. Williams, Galveriski and Gannon made big scores.

TORNADO IN ALABAMA

A tornado similar to the one at South Weymouth last September visited Alabama last Saturday. At Haleyville it moved the residence of E. J. McNabb 100 yards without injury to the sleeping family. Other buildings were lifted from foundations and a score of small structures demolished. No one was seriously injured.

At Phil Campbell a storm pit probably saved the lives of the family of Riley Peppers. The Peppers residence and several other buildings were demolished, but no serious casualties were reported.

Free Maintenance Service

Finding some of our consumers are unaware of our maintenance service, we give below a brief outline of this benefit to you.

Without charge, we will adjust or regulate any gas appliance upon request. This includes not only gas lights and gas ranges but also water heaters, room heaters, and in fact any gas burning appliance. In case any new parts are needed, the cost of this material alone will be charged.

Many of our customers have had their lights so long that they are now out of date. In many cases it will be cheaper to buy a new light than try to repair an old one. In order to give our customers an opportunity to secure more modern lights, we will allow 50c for your old light wherever a new light is purchased. Some of our consumers having other means of lighting, have allowed their gas lights to get in a condition where it would be impossible to use them when they are needed. We would like to make a suggestion that these gas lights be put in order and used regularly to insure being ready when needed.

Just explain what you need and it will receive immediate attention.

DRUDGERY DONE AWAY WITH

Unusually Well Designed and Substantially Built—Has Screened-in Sun Porch and Sleeping Porch—Rooms Are Airy.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.

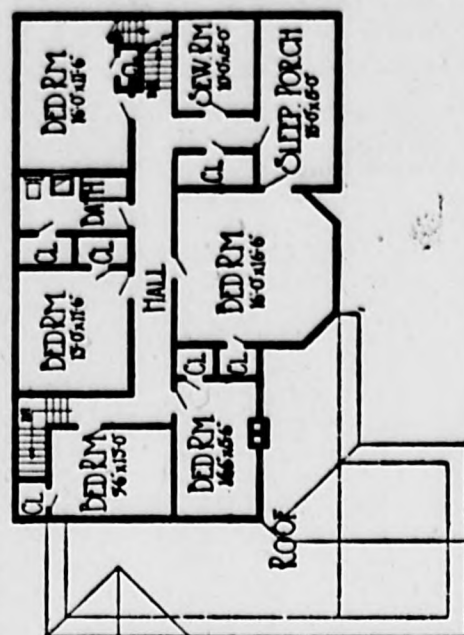

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1877 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill. and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Building ideas have changed a whole lot in the space of less than ten years. Many old features which were considered absolutely necessary to the comfort of a home have been eliminated entirely and many new ideas which were frowned upon as freaks when first suggested are now the regular thing. We have in mind the sun parlor or porch and sleeping porch, now one of the most popular features in city home, apartment or farm home. People have become educated to the appreciation of good fresh air when sleeping. Our grandfathers regarded open windows in the sleeping rooms with a feeling akin to horror. Everything was shut down tight and it seemed to be the notion to prevent as little fresh air as possible from getting into the bedrooms.

But times have changed radically. Today fresh air is recognized as one of the greatest aids to health, and homes are being erected along lines one side in the form of a large bay with four windows. It opens at one side into a hall, at the other into the kitchen and screened porch which is at the far corner of the first floor. This screen porch is also connected with the kitchen and can be used very conveniently for breakfast or other meals to save much work for the housewife.

The kitchen is modeled along practical lines, being small, condensed and complete. It is only 10 by 16 feet. Immediately adjacent is the wash-room, a very essential part of the farm home because of the work it saves and its general convenience for the men who come in from the field.

The kitchen is connected with a small bedroom by a hall which opens into a lavatory. This bedroom is very handy for the men who have to get up very early in the morning and who do not wish to disturb the rest of the family.

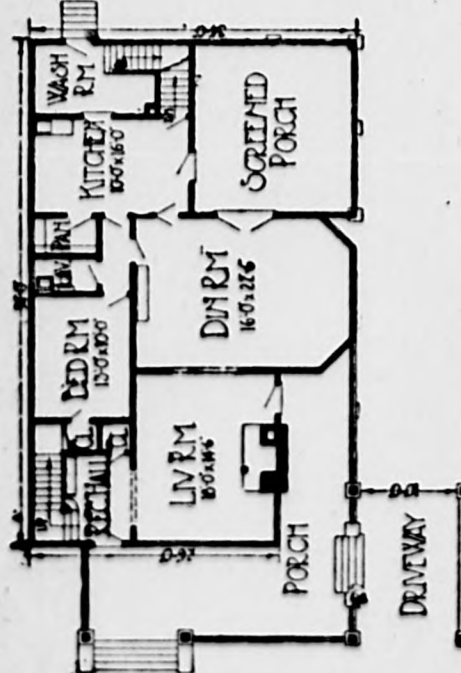

The sleeping quarters are located on the second floor and consist of five bedrooms and a large sleeping porch, 18 by 8 feet. The bedrooms vary in size from the smallest, 9 feet 6 inches by 13 feet, to the largest, 16 feet by 16 feet 6 inches. This large room is over that will provide a maximum of fresh air, of course without discomfort. The number of windows in a dwelling have been greatly increased and the ventilation facilities of the bedrooms vastly improved.

Along the lines of better ventilation has followed the two most important innovations of the last decade, the sun parlor and sleeping porch. In the beautiful, large spacious farm home shown here both of these features are prominent. A large screened-in sun porch on the main floor provides a wonderful recreation center for the family when the warm weather becomes uncomfortable. In the winter this same porch can be glazed in and made into a very valuable room.

A wide attractive driveway leads the way to this charming farm home. It passes under a portico covered by an extension of the roof porch supported by concrete block and wood pillars. The front porch extends the width of the house and is approached by stairs on the drive and at the end of the main walk. The front entrance opens into a small reception hall with a handy closet for outside clothes. This room in turn leads through a wide open doorway into the living room on one side. This room is a very comfortable center for the family, 18 by 13 feet 6 inches with a great open fireplace providing a wealth of warmth and cheer on the cold and chilly nights. Plenty of light comes from triple window in front and small side windows.

Another open doorway to the rear brings us into view of the dining room, an equally spacious and cheerful room, 16 by 22 feet, extending to the dining room and gets the benefit of the wonderful lighting and ventilation afforded by the large bay window. All of the rooms are exceptionally well lighted and airy, and have plenty of closet space. In one corner is a small sewing room, 10 by 8 feet.

While this home is large and rather pretentious, it is by no means an exception, and is indicative of the type of homes farmers are building for their families. They are demanding the best of comforts because they realize that is the touchstone to family harmony and instrumental in keeping the children on the farm after they grow up and appreciate the good things of home life.

WORLD MENACED BY TYPHUS

Dreaded Fever in Poland and Galicia and it is Feared it Will Spread.

The severe epidemic of typhus fever now raging in Poland and Galicia must be regarded as an international danger, and there can be very little doubt that if it is not checked in the new stricken areas it will spread westward, says the Medical Record. It has been conclusively shown that the infection is carried by lice. The principal carrier is the body louse, which anchors itself in the underclothing next to the skin and feeds twice a day. The only remedy against the parasite is the immediate baking or disinfection of clothing.

Typhus is essentially a winter disease and occurs most frequently in temperate climates, the obvious explanation being that its development is enhanced by overcrowding, bad ventilation and close contact in dwellings. The mortality is almost invariably high among doctors and nurses. Our greatest safeguard is that typhus is now thoroughly understood, while precautions can be applied without difficulty.

Cumulative Funeral Services.

The custom (in the mountain districts of the South) is to have a funeral preached every two or three years for all the people who have died during that time. Each one is buried at the time of his death, but the preaching is reserved for a later day, when it is convenient for more people and more preachers to get there. Sometimes a man will be married again, and his second wife will be one of the chief mourners at his first wife's funeral preaching. This custom is dying out to some extent. The burying and preaching together are becoming more common.—Irene Hudson in the Atlantic Monthly.

POULTRY FLOCKS

EXTERMINATE CHICKEN LICE

Several Kinds of Powdered Substances Found to Be Effective Against Parasites.

Experiments to determine what substances are best for exterminating or keeping under control chicken lice have been made by the United States Department of Agriculture.

The following is a list of powdered substances that were found to be effective against chicken lice when used as dusts: Arsenic trioxide, barium fluoride, barium tetrasulphide, borax, boric acid, cloves, naphthalene, paradichlorobenzene, sabadilla seeds, sassafras bark, sodium fluoride, flowers of sulphur. Only a few of these materials can, however, be considered of any practical value in the control of chicken lice. Arsenic trioxide is too poisonous, barium fluoride, barium tetrasulphide, borax, boric acid, cloves, naphthalene, paradichlorobenzene are too expensive, or not readily available in large quantities; naphthalene is dangerous if applied too freely, and barium tetrasulphide does not kill all the lice. Sodium fluoride is the most practical remedy given in this list.

The materials listed below were found to be of no value against chicken lice in spite of popular opinion regarding many of them:

Angelica root, calcium carbonate, calcium fluoride, calcium hydroxide, calcium oxide, calcium sulphate, colocyth pip, diatomaceous earth, dolomite lime, eucalyptus leaves, ferrous oxide, flour, wheat, gypsum, hebebores, lime (air slaked), lime (water slaked), magnesium carbonate, magnesium oxide, magnesium silicate, orris root, quassia chips, road dust, silica, sodium bicarbonate, vermilion, yellow ochre.

The fact that 26 different finely powdered materials—7 organic and 19 inorganic—were found to be of no value shows the fallacy of the old idea that any fine powder is effective against chicken lice if dusted into the feathers.

MAINTAIN QUALITY OF EGGS

Handling and Treatment Given After Being Laid Have Much Influence on Worth.

An egg is never any better in quality than just at the moment it is laid in a clean nest. What happens to it after it has been well borne is what gives it character and reputation. For instance, an egg that has been harvested and placed in a hot kitchen near decaying vegetable matter will soon "take on" deterioration, while a good quality egg placed in cold storage for several months will possess quality, though far from being freshly laid. It is the handling and treatment of eggs after being laid that has everything to do with the maintenance of quality. As matters average, March or April laid eggs, properly stored, possess a quality equal to many so-called fresh eggs produced during the hot days of summer, and particularly if the latter are not handled just right. Environment is of quite as much importance as age. More depends on the human factor than the hen. Birds well fed and in sanitary surroundings lay good eggs; it is the care and attention given them while in transit to the ultimate consumer that largely influences quality.

TURKEYS BEST AS SIDE LINE

Most Profitable for Those Who Are Favorably Situated—Ample Range Is Essential.

Turkey raising as ordinarily engaged in is a side line upon the general farm. For those who are favorably situated for raising turkeys, a more profitable side line can hardly be found. Plenty of range is essential to success.

PROVIDE FOWLS WITH TEETH

Fine Gravel or Coarser Part of Ground Limestone Will Supply Grit Needed by Hens.

Give your hens teeth so they can get the most out of the feed. Fine gravel or the coarser part of the ground limestone used for acid soils will supply the grit needed for use in the crop. The limestone will help supply needed lime.

NOVEL WEDDING CAKE

This is the elaborate 80-pound wedding cake presented by the American colony in Jerusalem, to the son of Sir Herbert Samuel, British high commissioner in Palestine, and his bride, Hadassa Grasovsky of Jaffa. The decorations on the cake depict some of the historic scenes about the Holy city.

Keep Barber Guessing.

Sitting in a barber's chair, a new technique occurs to us. We find that as soon as we have announced that we do not want a shave, a shampoo, a face massage or an invigorating vacuum vapor, our friend, the artist, loses all interest in the haircut that we do want, and in fact rather looks down on us altogether. Therefore, from now on, we will keep him in suspense. We will pretend to be making up our mind, and say we will let him know about that shampoo and massage when our haircut is finished.—New York Evening Post.

Remarkable Insanity Record.

At an inquest at Ashford, Kent, England, on Eddie Goll, who committed suicide by placing his head on the railway line in front of an approaching train, it was stated that his wife was in asylum, having become insane owing to air raids. He had a brother, and brother-in-law in asylums, and another brother-in-law committed suicide. Goll left a statement showing that he was worried by family and money troubles.

THE FIGHT.

Synopsis.—Lonely and friendless, Tonniebelle Devon, living on a canal boat with a brutal father and a worn-out, discouraged mother, wanders into a Salvation army hall at Ithaca, N. Y. There she meets a young Salvation army captain, Philip MacCauley. Uriah Devon, Tony's father, announces he has arranged for Tony to marry Reginald Brown, a worthless companion. Mrs. Devon objects, and Uriah beats her. Their quarrel reveals that there is a secret between them in which Tony is the central figure. Tony refuses to marry Reginald and escapes a beating by jumping into the lake. She finds a baby's picture with offer of reward for its delivery to Doctor Pendlehaven. She delivers the picture and the doctor visits her mother. Mrs. Devon makes Tony swear "never to say nothin' mean against Uriah Devon." The Devons disappear and Tony again visits the Pendlehavens.

CHAPTER VII.—Continued.

"This is my brother, Paul Pendlehaven, my child," said Doctor John. "He wants to thank you for bringing back the picture."

"Sit down a while," murmured Doctor Paul.

She squatted unceremoniously upon the bed beside the pig.

"Our little friend here is in trouble," said Doctor John to his brother, "and wants work. I'll come back after three." Then he went out.

For a long time Paul Pendlehaven looked at Tony, and Tony looked back at him. Tony was mentally pitying him with all her loving heart. He was thinking over the conversation he and his brother had had about this strange little girl who had brought from a thief's den the picture of his baby.

"How would you like to stay here a while with me?" he asked at length.

Gray eyes widened to the fullest extent of fringed lids.

"Lordy," was all Tonniebelle could say, as she glanced around.

"You might wait on me," explained the doctor, "and keep me company. I do get lonely sometimes. Would you like that? I know you like flowers."

"I love 'em," cried Tonniebelle.

Pendlehaven smiled into the shining eyes. He felt better already.

"I've such a lot of them all over this wing," he went on. "You might take care of them for me and—other things."

Tony was almost bursting with joy. She had within her the greatest gift of God, supreme gratitude. To work for him would be bliss indeed. She didn't want to cry, so to keep from it, she bit down on her red underlip. He had said in positive tones that he wanted her. It didn't seem good to be wanted somewhere. What she did then Pendlehaven remembered many a long day. She bent over and kissed him on the cheek. The warm red lips thrilled him as vibrant youth always thrills weakness.

"Can Gussie stay, too?" she pleaded presently. "She'd be without anybody if she didn't have me."

"Yes," said Pendlehaven, as his brother opened the door. "You can make her a nice home in my conservatory."

It took but a moment for the sick man to explain to Doctor John his arrangements with Tonniebelle, and the girl's heart was not the only rejoicing one among the trio.

When Katherine Curtis came home late that afternoon she found her mother in a towering rage, surrounded by many strange looking boxes and bundles.

"For heaven's sake, what's the matter?" asked the girl.

"I think your Cousin John's gone mad," said Mrs. Curtis, beginning to cry. "He's brought a ragged girl into the house to stay, a girl with bare feet, and enough hair for three people. From what I could gather she's going to stay over with Paul. And John insisted on my going with him to buy these. Think of a poor nobody dressed up like a horse."

Katherine looked at her keenly. "I suppose you served Cousin John a deep-seated spell of hysterics, didn't you, when he popped the girl in on you?" she demanded.

"I did my best," admitted Mrs. Curtis, smiling.

"Men get surfeited to women's tears, mamma darling," said the all-wise Katherine. "If I wanted to make any impression on him, I'd leave off howling every minute or two. And you don't look pretty when your nose is red. Who is the gutter rat?"

"I'm sure I don't know. She's got a queer name, and I asked her about herself, and she looked as sulky as could be."

"Leave it to me—" began Katherine.

Just then the door swung open, and there appeared before Katherine Curtis a girl who made her breath almost stop with surprise. A very young girl, too, the gazer caught at a glance. Abundant curls hung about one of the most beautiful faces Katherine had ever seen. Her mother hadn't told her the girl was so pretty. She felt a nervousness come over her when she thought of Philip MacCauley.

In silence Tonniebelle donned her new clothes, and when she stood up to be inspected, Mrs. Curtis scowled at her. "Go show Doctor John," she said. "He told me to send you right down to him."

Tonniebelle was glad to escape. Katherine hadn't said a word to her, but both girls had eyed each other appraisingly, and Katherine suddenly came to a resolution, which she made known to her mother the moment they were alone.

"She can't stay in this house," she said between her teeth.

Mrs. Curtis laughed sarcastically.

"See what you can do with your cousin, then," she snapped. "I did my best with John, and he positively refused to let me go to Paul! As much as told me it was none of my business."

"I won't cry when I talk to him," said the girl. "I'll speak my mind outright. I'll make the house too hot to hold her. I think I know how to put one over on our philanthropic cousins."

When Tonniebelle came into the office that evening to ask a very important question of Doctor Pendlehaven, he said to her:

"My dear, I want you always to remember what I am going to tell you now. This house belongs to my brother and me. I do not wish you to take orders from anyone but us."

Tony gazed at him a moment, not understanding at first. Then her lips widened.

"That means if anyone says I've got to hike back to the canal boat, I don't go unless one of you tells me to," she demanded. "Is that it?"

The doctor laughed.

"Yes, that's it," said he. "Now what did you want of me?"

"Can I go down the lake tomorrow afternoon?" she hesitated and then went on, "I want to see if anyone's home."

"Certainly, dear child, you can," was the answer. "But get back before it's dark; I don't want anything to happen to my little Tony Girl."

CHAPTER VIII.

The Fight.

Little by little Paul Pendlehaven taught her, and little by little Tony's salvation boy preached his lessons of Universal Love to her; and the eager young mind drank in the knowledge as a thirsty plant takes in water.

There were no signs of Uriah and Edith returning, and Tonniebelle grew daily more hopeless when she thought of her mother! Perhaps she would never see her again. She had strenuously refused to speak of her people to Paul Pendlehaven.

Doctor John noticed as the days passed how much better his brother was looking, and no wonder his own heart warmed hourly to the curly-headed waif who had come among them so mysteriously.

Unknown to either of the doctors, Mrs. Curtis and her daughter had been able to keep Tony Devon from meeting Philip MacCauley in the house. At first John Pendlehaven had insisted that Tony attend the family table, but both Paul and the girl decided that her meals should be served in the sick room. Perhaps if Philip MacCauley hadn't been interested in a certain little girl on a canal boat, his curiosity would have taken him to Paul's apartments to make the acquaintance of the little companion John Pendlehaven had casually spoken of.

"She's a wonder, Phil," he said one evening. "For the first time I've hopes of Paul's recovery."

"Good!" replied Philip, and immediately fell into a reverie.

Tonniebelle had reached the canal boat and had changed to her old clothes when suddenly she heard footsteps on the path beside the Hoghole. Her heart almost leapt out of her mouth. Perhaps her mother was coming home, perhaps her father. Tremblingly she peeped out through the aperture. She drew back instantly. Reginald Brown was approaching the canal boat. She heard him cross the deck, and then the footsteps ceased. She hoped with all her might and main that he wouldn't think of coming downstairs.

But that was exactly what he did do. She crouched up against the bunk, as the boy stepped into the cabin. When he saw her a slow grin spread over his thin face.

"So you're here," he got out thickly. "Where have you been? I've visited this place three times in that many weeks. Where have you been, I say?"

"Go away," she said, half frightened to death. "You'd better get out of here before my mother comes back. She'll beat you with the broom!"

"I'm not afraid of your father or mother," he said tauntingly. "I know where they are."

The words sent Tonniebelle forward a step.

"Honest?" she gasped. "Is it honest what you say?"

"Certainly," replied the young man, "and they told me to come here and get you."

"Where are they?" She had come very near him now, her eyes gazing at

Never Had She Seen Such Strength.

him wistfully. "Please tell me where my mummy is!"

"Never mind just now," said he, his eyes taking in her slight young figure passionately. "Here, I want to kiss you."

He dragged her forward until her slender, quivering body was pressed against his. He had said he intended to kiss her. All the rebellion of a primitive uneducated nature sprang into life within Tony Devon. The curly head darted upward for a moment, and the gray eyes blazed into the muddy blue ones, leering down upon her. Then, knowing no other way to protect herself from desecration, she set her sharp white teeth into Reggie's hand, sinking them deep beneath his skin. A cry of hurt rage escaped his lips, and he flung her from him.

"You little vixen," he got out, shaking his hand in panic. "You little wicked brat! There! Now I'll teach you to bite me again!"

He sprang at her, and Tony screamed twice with all her lung power. Then something happened! Someone grasped hold of the man who had snatched her into his arms, and for what seemed an interminable time two forms struggled together in the small cabin. For a few seconds Tony didn't realize who Reggie's assailant was; then with a grip at her heart she recognized Philip's white face as with terrible strength he dragged Reggie up the steps.

Into her terrified eyes came one strange flashing smile of welcome. Her salvation man had saved her, and as every woman does in cases where her need is great, she cried out her thanksgiving in his name, that best-beloved name of Philip. By this time the two men were struggling on the deck, and as if impelled by some unknown force Tony staggered up the steps.

It was just as she reached the top that she saw Captain MacCauley, by one mighty effort, lift the struggling figure of the other man and throw him into the lake. A sharp ejaculation fell from her lips. Never had she seen such strength, never had her heart sung as it did then. She trembled so that when Philip swung back and rushed toward her, she sank down at his feet. As falls away an old garment so fell away Philip's anger. Tenderly he lifted her up and spoke to her.

"Poor little girl," he whispered. But he had no time to add anything. Nor had Tony time to answer him.

For there on the Hoghole path looking at her, a frown dragging his brows together, was her father.

Uriah Devon had halted at the sight of a man being thrown into the water. Then he came forward, and the girl loosened herself from the arms that held her and turned swiftly to him.

"The face in the window."

THE NEW MONKEY.

"A monkey had just arrived at the zoo," said Daddy, "who had before been a pet of a lady. He had been fairly happy where he had been, but the lady wanted to travel and she thought it would be hard to take the monkey around with her so she gave him to the zoo."

"She had a dog too, named Raggles, who played most of the time and still was fond of chewing an old shoe if he got the chance. Raggles hadn't yet quite gotten over his puppy days. She decided she could take Raggles with her as he would like traveling better, but the monkey wasn't so very strong and she didn't think it would agree with him."

"Besides, on the trip Raggles might meet many other dogs with whom he would become friendly, whereas the monkey wouldn't be apt to meet any of his friends."

"When the monkey came to the zoo all the other monkeys said, 'How do you do,' and made other polite remarks."

"They said they were glad to see him and that they hoped he was glad to see them."

"And he wrinkled up his face and grinned and gave a little squealing noise and said he was glad to be with them too."

"We hope," they said, "that you will tell us your story and of how you happened to come to the zoo and why you will stay here and if you will stay here and such things."

"I will be glad to," the monkey said.

"Do you want to tell us first or do you want to take a little rest now?" they asked.

"I'm not tired," the new monkey said, and so the others urged him to tell his story.

"He told them why he had come to the zoo and that he expected to stay at the zoo for he had been told so. His mistress was going abroad and probably would live there. And at any rate she would be traveling from place to place and so had left him where he would be comfortable.

"Well," he said, "I used to be fed ice cream at times. I used to take some of it in my hand on the hot days as well as in my mouth!"

"And I would eat it then, and after that I would rub my back with my hand which was very cool and comfortable from having had the ice cream in it."

"One time we were out in the country visiting and I saw something queer. I've been told since that it was a grasshopper. I thought I would catch it and find out anyway. And I did! I caught it!"

"I am quite proud of myself to think that I had been able to catch it."

"Well, after I had caught it I thought I would have a good look at it and so I opened my hand very, very slowly. After I did so and my hand was open I found to my great disappointment that the grasshopper had jumped away."

"He hadn't wanted to stay with me and he hopped off just like that!"

"But I was so sad to think that I had let him go when I wanted to see what a queer-looking creature he was."

"They told me that my expression was very funny. They said I looked so sad and so surprised that it was most amusing. But I was cross with myself afterward for I thought how stupid I had been not to know that the creature would jump away when I gave him the room."

"Well," the other monkeys said, "we're glad you've come with us and we have an idea that you'll find life with us more interesting than you did where you were, for you don't speak as though you had been so very happy."

"Here we can pick the salt off our backs that is in our skin and we shake off the dust and the keeper explains that it is not because we are dirty, but because we are really very neat and clean!"

"He won't let people think anything wrong of us! There he comes now. Oh, he is so good to us. Hear what he has to say!"

"And they heard the keeper say, 'I must get my children something to drink now,' and one of the monkeys said to the new monkey:

"He means us when he says that!"

A PAPER-BALER.

The homemade paper-baler shown in Figs. 1, 2 and 3 will enable you to tie up the household waste-paper.

Figure 1 shows the baler after the binding cords have been adjusted, and waste-paper has been thrown into the receptacle, the compressor board placed on top, and the compressor lever thrown over, pushed down and locked. Figure 2 shows the baler with front removed. The binding-cords should now be tied. Figure 3 shows the lever raised and the bound bale removed.

Figure 4 is a longitudinal section through the baler, and Fig. 5 is a cross-section. Figure 7 shows the parts unassembled, with their relative positions indicated. You will find the dimensions upon Figs. 4 and 5.

Perhaps you will find a box of the right size for the base, the parts of which are lettered A, B, C in Fig. 7. Bottom must project 1 inch beyond end pieces A, as shown. When these parts have been assembled, cut the four end strips D and nail two to each of the end pieces A, placing the rear strips even with the back edge of boards B, and the front strips with their front edge projecting 1 inch beyond end pieces A. Cut board E (Fig. 7) to fit between the rear pair of strips D. Cut the four strips F 1 inch square, and fasten one in each of the corners formed by board E and strips D, and one to each of the front pair of strips D flush with the front edge of end pieces A. The slide is completed by strips G, nailed to the front edge of strips D.

The compressor top (J, Fig. 7) is made of the right size to fit loosely between strips F. Fasten the boards together with a pair of battens (K).

The compressor lever (L, Fig. 4) is a wooden bar 1 1/2 inches square and

A WALL-PAPER BEAD PORTIERE.

Making beads of wallpaper is one of the inexpensive fads now in vogue.

The first step in preparing the wallpaper beads is cutting up the paper into strips 16 inches long, 4 inches wide at one end, and tapered to a point at the other end (Fig. 1). Prepare one hundred or so of these strips. Figure 2 shows how to roll the strips into beads. Lay a strip upon a table, place a pencil upon it, and wrap one turn of the wide end of the strip around the pencil, then coat the remainder of the strip with paste, and roll the pencil over and over until the entire length has been wrapped about it. Then slip

3 feet long. Bore a 1/2-inch hole 1/2 inches from one end, and pivot the bar with a 1/2-inch carriage-bolt 6 inches long (M, Fig. 6), supported by a pair of screweyes (N) screwed into strips D 3 inches above the top edge of end pieces A. Round the other end of the lever for a handle, attach a short piece of chain to a screweye screwed into it (Fig. 3), and drive several nails into the end opposite to that on which the lever is pivoted, to hook the chain on to.

Cords for tying the bale of paper must be arranged inside the baler before the paper is thrown in. These cords must pass around rods Q in the bottom of the baler, and around rods S on the under side of compression top.

When the paper has been compressed, the sliding-front of the baler removed, and the ends of the cords tied; withdraw rods Q (Fig. 3); then remove the bale, and withdraw rods S.

the pencil from the center, place the bead to dry, and start another.

The curtain rings and fancy-work rings used for the portieres should be wrapped with wallpaper, as shown in Fig. 3. Cut the paper into narrow strips, coat with paste, and wrap in and out around the rings.

With enough beads, curtain rings and fancy-work rings prepared, let us begin a portiere of the design shown in Fig. 5. The best method of procedure is to take the pole or rod upon which the portiere is to hang, slip the curtain rings over it, and rest the pole ends upon two chair backs (Fig. 4). Then, to each curtain ring tie a cord of a length several inches shorter than the height of the doorway for which the portiere is to be made, so when hung, the strands will not quite touch the floor. String the wallpaper beads and glass beads upon each cord, using first a glass bead, then a wallpaper bead, then two glass beads, another wallpaper bead, and so on until the end of the cord has been reached, where the strand should be finished off with a couple of glass beads, and the cord knotted to hold them in place.

When the cords have been strung in this manner, form a valance across the top of the portiere. To form one of the loops of the valance, tie a cord to the ring at one end of the pole, string upon it a glass bead, a wallpaper bead, and a second glass bead, and tie to a fancy work ring; then string another glass bead, a wallpaper bead, and a glass bead upon it, run the cord through the second curtain ring, and proceed in a similar manner with the formation of the second loop. The loops below the valance are strung upon cords in the same way, and the cord ends are tied to the fancy-work rings and to the strands, as indicated.

Fancy-work rings can be used along the top of the curtain overhangings shown in Fig. 6. Make the top wallpaper bead of each strand 2 inches long, so the ends of the beads of these strands will come opposite the centers of the other strands.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE
OF REAL ESTATE

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Joseph Carlon, of Weymouth, County of Norfolk and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, to John W. Hedden, of said Weymouth, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, Book 1447, Page 494, will be sold at public auction at the office of Russell B. Worster, Washington Square, Weymouth, Mass., on Saturday, March 5, 1921, at ten o'clock in the forenoon for breach of conditions contained in said mortgage, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, namely:

A certain lot of land with the buildings thereon situated in Weymouth aforesaid, being lot number 10 on a plan of Lake Shore Park, Russell H. Whiting, C. E., dated September 11, 1916, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, Book 82, Plan 3977, said lot being bounded and described as follows: Northerly by Whitman's Pond, as shown on said plan, fifty and four-tenths (50.4) feet; Easterly by Lot numbered 11, one hundred and seven (107) feet; Southerly by Lake Shore Drive proposed, fifty (50) feet; Westerly by Lot numbered 9, one hundred and nine (109) feet.

Containing 5400 square feet of land more or less and being all of said measurements, areas and boundaries, more or less, according to said plan. ## CAN'T DO THE WORK

It's too much to try to work every day against a constant, dull backache, or sudden darting pain in the small of the back. Be rid of it. Try Doan's Kidney Pills. Your neighbors recommend them. Ask your neighbor:

B. O. Raymond, 16 Cottage street, East Weymouth, says: "Mornings I felt tired and achy and my back pained. When I stooped over to put on my shoes, or got up from a chair, I would have a catch in my back. For a time I was unable to do much work or even get around because of the weakness in my back. The kidney secretions passed irregularly and made me get up two or three times every night. They were burning, too, and contained a brick-dustlike sediment. I had read of Doan's Kidney Pills so I got some. The first box made me feel much better so I continued using them. I was soon rid of the backache and my kidneys were acting as they should."

Two years later, Mr. Raymond said: "I think as much of Doan's Kidney Pills as ever."

Town Clerk's Notice

—TO—
Physicians, Midwives and Parents

Birth Returns

Town Clerk's Office,
Weymouth, Feb. 1, 1921
Attention is called to the following law in relation of births which was passed by the legislature of 1912.
CLAYTON B. MERCHANT,
Town Clerk.

[CHAP. 280; ACTS OF 1912]
AN ACT RELATIVE TO REPORTS AND RECORDS OF BIRTHS

Be it enacted, etc., as follows:
Section 1. Physicians and midwives shall, within forty-eight hours after the birth of every child in cases of which they were in charge, mail or deliver to the clerk or registrar of the city or town in which the birth occurred, a notice stating the date and place of the birth, giving the street and number, if any, the number of a ward in a city and the family name. Failure to mail or deliver the said notice, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding twenty-five dollars for each offence. The notice required by this section need not be given if the notice required by the following section is given within forty-eight hours after the birth occurs.

Section 2. Physicians and midwives shall make and keep a record of the birth of every child in cases of which they are in charge and shall within fifteen days after the birth; mail or deliver to the clerk or registrar of the city or town in which the birth occurred, a report of the birth stating the date and place, the name, if any, of the child, its sex and color, and the names, ages, places of birth, occupations and residence of the parents, giving the street number, if there be any and the number of a ward in a city, the maiden name of the mother, and whether or not the physician or midwife signing the birth return personally attended the birth. If the child is illegitimate, the name and other facts relating to the father shall not be stated except at the request in writing of both the father and the mother filed with the return. The record to be kept by the physician or midwife, as above provided, shall also contain the facts hereby required to be reported to the city or town clerk.

The fee of the physician or midwife shall be twenty-five cents for every birth so reported, which shall be paid by the city or town where the report is made upon presentation to the city or town treasurer of a certificate from the city or town clerk stating that the said birth has been properly reported to him. The report required to be made by this section is in addition to the report required to be made by the preceding section, and as above provided, if made within forty-eight hours of the birth, the report required by the preceding section shall not be required.

A physician or midwife who neglects to make and keep the record hereby required, or who neglects to report in the manner specified above, each birth within fifteen days thereafter shall for each offence forfeit a sum not exceeding twenty-five dollars. The city or town clerk or registrar shall file daily with the local board of health a list of all births reported to him giving the following facts: date of birth, sex, color, family name, residence, ward, physician or midwife.
Section 3. Section three of chapter twenty-nine of the Revised Laws, as amended by chapter ninetythree of the acts of the year nineteen hundred and ten is hereby repealed.

QUINCY IN MOVING PICTURES

Manager C. R. Black of the Quincy Theatre announced this morning the Quincy in moving pictures will be taken and shown on the Quincy Theatre screen. Special preparations have been going on to give to Quincy Theatregoers a rare treat in the form of showing the entire city of Quincy in moving pictures. The camera-man is now on the ground and has started to take the pictures. Backed by the Quincy Theatre, the camera-man was secured from the Marston Amusement Co. of Boston. Mr. France experienced in this line for the past 13 years is considered one of the best camera-men in the country in this line of work.

Special preparations have been made to give to Quincy Theatregoers an unusual picture of this great event. To begin with the camera-man will start out to take the 6000 school children of Quincy in picture. The Mayor and many important officials of the city will also be taken for the event.

The fire department will be taken in action going to a fire, and if possible a fire siren will be shown of real local event. The police department will also be shown in pictures as well as many of the principal streets of Quincy. The picture will also show many of the beautiful residences of the city in conjunction with many historical events pertaining to the old history of the city.

Plans are also made to take the Fore River shipyard and the granite quarries as well as thousands of local people will also be shown. Many of our well known churches will be shown in pictures as well as public buildings.

It is estimated that 30,000 people will see Quincy in moving pictures when they are shown the Quincy Theatre screen, and Manager Black is to be complimented on securing such an event that Quincy will be proud of. The slogan of the picture is a boost for publicity of Quincy, and the picture will be entitled: "Quincy in Moving Pictures, Co-operation makes Quincy Grow."

The Chamber of Commerce will also be taken in the picture and will show to Quincy what a new energetic body of men can do for the city of Quincy. Preparations have also been made to show many of the prominent stores both inside as well as outside, also the many different factories. It is also the plan of Manager Black to take several different scenes of Hancock street and the Square at Quincy showing the public in every-day life as we see them in all walks of life.

A little comedy will also be given, which will add a touch to the amusement side of the picture and thousands of dollars will be spent in order to secure as good a picture of Quincy as possible.

These pictures will also be shown in many of the surrounding towns of Quincy. The staff of camera-men are new on the job lining up the different scenes to be taken. A prize will be awarded to the best looking girl in Quincy and her picture will also be shown on the screen.

NOT GUILTY

Mrs. Angelina DeFaleo, Italian interpreter at the Norfolk County district court at Dedham, was found not guilty, last Friday of the charge of attempting to solicit law business, not being an attorney.

Judge Murray exonerated from all connection with the case District Attorney Frederick G. Katzman; his brother, Percy A. Katzman, and Francis J. Squires, clerk of the district court at Dedham.

The following remarkable endorsement of Tanlac was given recently by Mrs. Alice Gresham Dodd, at the Gresham Memorial Home, Gavin Park, Evansville, Ind., which home was presented to her by the patriotic people of Indiana, as evidence of their appreciation of the services rendered to his country by her son, Corporal James B. Gresham, the first American soldier killed in France. Expressions of sympathy were received by Mrs. Dodd from all parts of the United States, and the people of the country carried on the memory of the first "war mother."

Her son's death resulted in a breakdown of everyone will ensure that she is now in good health. When seen at her home she made the following statement: "The entire credit for her health is due to the well-known medicine, Tanlac."

"After my dear boy's death, I had a general breakdown in health," Mrs. Dodd, "At first it was just indigestion. My food used to upset me and I had to diet myself very carefully, which wasn't much hardship, as I lost all desire to eat. Then I had an attack of rheumatism, with severe pains in my shoulders, back and arms. Sometimes I used to suffer a great deal, and my joints would get all swollen up and stiff. I was able to do very little about the house, and at times couldn't even cook a meal. I got very nervous and restless, and at night would lay awake for hours, and lost many a night's sleep as a consequence."

"A friend of mine had received a great deal of help from Tanlac, and it was she who advised me to try it. I am so glad I did for it proved the best medicine I have ever taken. It soon gave me a good appetite and seemed to settle my stomach so that I was no longer troubled with indigestion. I don't know what it is to have rheumatic pains now, the swelling and stiffness has all gone out of my joints and I am able to do the work of the house with the greatest ease. My nerves are now steady and strong. I sleep fine at night, and I feel better in health than ever before in my life. I shall always be grateful for what Tanlac has done for me, and shall recommend it every chance I get."

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—Adv.

THE QUILT LEGACY

By DORA LEFAVOUR.

(© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Joseph Plism lacked the business acumen of his ancestors, and when he died the home which had passed down his line for generations was his only legacy to his two daughters.

The city came. Massive buildings towered menacingly above Miss Esther's wee shop, and homes of modern architecture grew around their weather-beaten home, till the sisters felt shoved aside—shoved into their respective, old-fashioned corners by the busy, self-seeking, hustling throng; and her little shop became Miss Esther's life, and home an oasis in a wilderness of people, most of them with foreign accent in their speech and foreign methods in their ways; while Miss Lucretia rarely ventured beyond her well-kept garden.

Miss Esther patriotically, conscientiously, sold her prewar stock at pre-war prices, and the alarming post-war replenishments bit into her narrow margin so keenly that one evening, when she locked her store, she thought that upon the twenty-fifth day of this bleak November there'd be little to make her and her sister thankful.

As she walked the two city blocks to her home, her step was as deliberately sedate, her poise as perfect as if the world were at her feet; yet, her heart was so tumultuously timorous that she closed the door with its shining brass knocker quickly, almost with a bang—as if to shut out the grasping, giddy, up-to-date six o'clock throng; and the noisome grievances of her day dimmed to the soft froufrou of her sister's black silk as Miss Lucretia came down the hall to meet her, and announce dinner, just as she had done every evening of every business day for the twenty years which Miss Esther had been the breadwinner.

After they'd eaten their toast, Miss Lucretia carried the tea things to the drawing room, while Miss Esther turned the oil lamps economically low. "Esther," confided Miss Lucretia, before a blazing wood fire in the open grate, "this is the last of the tea. The fire's gone, and there's only one loaf of bread flour in the barrel. I'm sold that can be sold, and everything going under the hammer."

Miss Esther's sigh swelled her flat bosom. "Business is dull—extremely dull, Lucretia," she confided in her turn. "People advise advertising, but I shrink from flaunting my store news through the blatant newspapers, and I fear its rent will use all my capital this month."

"Miss Dovney was in today—she's opening a tea room, and if I could match this chintz she would commission me to decorate her place."

"It would put us quite on Easy street," she continued, fingering the bright-hued sample she took from her skirt pocket.

"Let me see that, Esther," Miss Lucretia held out her hand. "Seems to me I've seen some just like it somewhere."

"Probably when you were a child," Miss Esther replied vaguely. "If I could match it anywhere it would be at Vall's in Boston, but its price would be exorbitant—quite prohibitive. No, it's no use—the game is not worth the candle."

"I think I'll retire, sister," Miss Esther said wearily very early in the evening. Miss Lucretia opined she, too, would go to bed.

Each took a small lamp and silently climbed the shadowy, creaking stairs. Miss Lucretia's brow wrinkled in memory-searching frown.

"Where in the world have I seen chintz like that?" she kept asking herself.

"Esther," she fluttered, "don't you remember Aunt Anstice Dolbear's legacy?"

Straight to an old brass-studded hair trunk they sped, simultaneously opened the creaking lid and dragged a bulky quilt from the place where it had lain untouched for twenty-five years.

Down in her room, Miss Esther, the reserved, the self-contained, lighted a lamp with eager, trembling fingers, and compared the sample flutteringly. Miss Lucretia also held it far off and near to her dim vision.

They agreed—it matched.

"I've just got to get a scissors and rip it off now," said Miss Esther, "and measure it before I can sleep a wink."

The sharp-pointed scissors soon gave a vent; she slipped her fingers through the opening to hold her work the better. They touched something crisp; she ripped faster, her faded blue eyes protruding as the crispness proved to be a dollar bill. She gasped, and slipped her hand in farther—more crispness.

With trembling haste they clipped them off, and placed them in neat piles—one thousand of them.

Neither spoke; the moment was too tense, too freighted for speech. Simultaneously they dropped to their knees beside Miss Esther's bed in reverent thanksgiving.

Presently practical Miss Lucretia arose and, putting on her slippers and dressing gown, went down to the kitchen to get foot-warmers.

By the time she got back Miss Esther had the money safely stowed away for the night and the two old ladies quietly went to bed again, with their bony feet cuddled snugly against warm soapstones, and their hearts aglow with gratitude to eccentric Aunt Anstice and her chintz quilt legacy.

NATION IN DANGER

Farm Abandonment Has Created Most Serious Situation.

Food Supply Threatened Through the Drift of the Population to the Cities—Now Is Great Opportunity to Take Up Land.

The question, "How is the country to be fed if the population continues to drift to the cities?" is one that should create an agitation that will bring about a reply that will mean a solution. The census, recently completed, reveals a situation truly alarming, one that has never been known in the United States before. The urban population is now greater than that of the rural districts by about 4,000,000. Cities and towns, each with more than 2,500 inhabitants, contain 54,318,032 persons, or 51.4 per cent of the total population, while the farms and smaller towns together claim only 51,399,739 persons, or 48.6 per cent of the total.

As is pointed out by an influential Chicago daily, "the drift to the cities is thus proved and, reduced to figures, showing a top-heavy condition of the industrial life."

Farming is and must remain the basic industry of the world, and certainly should remain the basic industry of a nation with a continental area like ours. It is small profit to gain the markets of the world with manufactured goods if agriculture has decayed so badly as to furnish an uncertain subsistence for our people, and fluctuating crops are reflected in price changes that upset the economic life of the country. Yet we are within measurable distance of that condition, if the present or recent drift toward the cities continues.

Most writers on this topic take it for granted that young folks go from farms to cities merely to make more money. Doubtless that is something of a motive at all times and was a very strong one in the period immediately after the war, when city industries paid wages totally impossible for farmers to rival.

It is hoped that this drifting has reached its apex. Unless it has, and there still remains a possibility of its continuance, the effect cannot be foretold. The great wave of manufactures for war purposes has ceased, and with it the number of those employed in factories is diminishing by thousands daily. It is therefore hoped that there will again be heard the slogan, "Forward to the Land." If prices to which farm land has reached are prices prohibitive to many, the opportunity is still open elsewhere. There are states possessing large areas of good land that may still be had at prices within the reach of many, and it is doubtless true that in self-preservation it will be necessary to bring these lands under cultivation. The prices are not high, considering their value. Then, too, there are the lands of Western Canada, that hold out an inviting prospect. Reports from there show that the prosperity of the farmers there is not mythical. Farming there is conducted on scientific principles, and the climate is such as appeals. The production amply repays all the expenditure that may be made. The social conditions are of a character that make farm life a pleasure, and tends to keep the young man and young woman from pining for urban life with so many drawbacks. If conditions as above mentioned, showing such a large percentage of population in the cities and towns, continues, they will require food. The opportunity to supply it is by the means suggested. Go forward to the farm, become independent, and become a factor in supplying the world's needs in cattle, sheep, grain and such other commodities as the farm will produce and the resident of the city requires.—Advertisement.

WHEN JOYCE WED

By LOUISE HOFFMAN.

(© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

It was decided at last in family conclave that Joyce was to have a wedding. Not a formal church affair, but just a sweet little home wedding with a few close friends and relatives. The family had lived in this spacious old colonial home for almost a quarter of a century, and this was the first great event to take place within its portals. Something unusual must mark the very first wedding.

Brother Bob, who was handy with tools, was pressed into service and he constructed a wonderful arch of chicken wire in one end of the living room where the ceremony was to take place. A bevy of loving girl friends covered the whole with spruce and then twined June roses among the green. Joyce was to be married in a veritable bower of roses.

After many weeks of joyous preparations the fateful morning dawned. Joyce opened her large blue eyes in happy anticipation but snapped them shut as quickly. It was a dull, gray day with clouds threatening rain any minute.

Her sister, Antoinette, roused herself and threw an arm about her.

"I'm glad we didn't plan a garden wedding," she comforted, slipping out of bed. "Don't worry your poor little head over the weather. Everything is going to go off fine even if the weather is sloppy. I don't believe the weather has anything to do with it, anyway," she continued, hopping into her clothes. "Think of Mariana Drew's wedding day. It poured and she's just as happy and prosperous as she can be." She bent to kiss her sister.

At length breakfast was over and before Antoinette realized it the guests were arriving and everything was delightful hubbub. She never quite knew how she managed to don her maid of honor frock of palest pink organdie.

Mrs. Martin, in dove gray georgette, was busy cordially welcoming the guests at the library door.

Aunt Estelle was with the little bride, and to allay her fears that all the wedding party had arrived Antoinette kept bobbing in and out to assure her everything was in readiness and everybody had come. She counted them over on her fingers.

"Douglas and all his family have just come. Doug and Joe, the best man, are with father. The wedding cake is all arranged on the hall table."

In a few minutes she was back.

"The rector is here," she announced, "and Mary and Holmes have been here for over an hour. So we're sure of the music. Mary was to play the bridal march and also during the ceremony. I'm sure everything is going off fine. Your veil is a dream," and off she flew.

Mary met her at the foot of the rose-twined stairway with a white, strained face.

"What shall I do?" she gasped. "I've forgotten the music. I thought Holmes had it and he thought I had it."

Antoinette, panic stricken, glanced at the clock. It was 20 minutes of 12. The wedding was planned for high noon. Just as the clock struck the hour was to be the signal for Mary, from the concealed depths of the arch, to begin the wedding march. The maids were beginning to light the candles. The ushers were placing the ribboned aisle.

But without music the wedding would fall flat. Yet five miles there and back lay between that precious music. Could Holmes possibly make it? Speechless, she nodded to Holmes to make a try. Holmes' car fairly shot out of the drive and up the road.

"Saved" came the welcome report at exactly two minutes of twelve, when Holmes dashed wildly into sight.

Antoinette gave the signal for the rector, the best man and the groom to take their places, and when the clock struck the tenth stroke of twelve she led the bridal party as Mary began the exquisite joyous strains of "Here comes the bride."

The rest of the wedding went by like a blur to Antoinette. She moved and heard her part in a detached way. She heard the guests wishing the bride joy and had a hazy recollection of Joyce looking like a misty shining cloud of happiness. For the sun had come in all its glory just at noon. Just as Joyce, all radiant in her pretty blue traveling suit, threw her bouquet to the bridesmaids as she descended the rose-twined staircase. Philip Whately took her arm and led her into the deserted living room.

"It's time," he whispered, "for you to attend to your own wedding. Come, dear." He bent to kiss her. "I love you. You know it."

"Say, you spooners," broke in Brother Bob. "You'll miss the show. Get out and watch the bride off."

Joyce caught her sister as she came out and whispered: "It was all so sweet and I'll help with yours." The bride was gone.

"Gee, I felt like doing a handspring over the porch rail when Holmes got there and everything went off on the tick. Such a relief," said Brother Bob. "Your turn next, Sis."

"No more sweet little home weddings for me," laughed Antoinette, dead tired, but deliciously happy. "Just the barest formalities to make it legal, so I can enjoy every minute of it."

And she was married in a—but that's another delightful story.

LOVE SEEN IN NEW LIGHT

Old Idea of Affection All Wrong, According to Pronouncements of Modern Scientists.

"Science revolutionizes our ideas." The speaker was W. L. George, the English feminist lecturer. He resumed: "A millionaire contractor was complaining to a scientific friend of mine that a beautiful actress had accepted his proposal of marriage, only he had just discovered that she did so for purely mercenary motives. 'But my scientific friend poo-pooed the millionaire contractor's lament."

"What a queer devil you are!" he said. "You want to be loved for your looks alone—that is, for the position in space of the atoms, ions, molecules and what-not which chance, working through some Darwinian selective theory, has grouped together in the entity that is yourself. Ridiculous! And you hate to be loved for your wealth—for a financial achievement, that is to say, which is an unimpeachable testimony to your industry, intelligence, sobriety and virtue."

TRAILS ABOUND IN ROMANCE

Written Testimonial of the Trials and Triumphs of the Men Who Fashioned Them.

Nothing is more romantic than the trail, remarks a writer in the Los Angeles Times. It is the artery of trade and life itself. On land it moves about the bases of the mountains, out of the lowlands, winding through the chaparral, along the easy grades of the canyons, never forcing its way, but definitely avoiding the slippery rock face and the poison oak; upward into the fresh air that breathes through the pass; on, through the pass and into the unknown beyond. Into the valley of heart's desire it carries the laden mule and the traveler with his pack.

Across the great deserts the trail is a caravan route, seeking the shades of cliff and avoiding the shifting dunes; stretching unerringly toward the next water hole. It is the written testimonial of the trials and triumphs of the men who have gone before. It is the only pathway of the devout pilgrim, as of the warlike Bedouin. Every habitation of man that has ever dominated one of these great trails has made history and has been in its day a treasure house.

Many a bored man has wished that he could get interested in some foolish game.

R. T. Webster, 22, of White Plains, New York, has been elected captain of the Colgate university football team for 1921.

RECORD PRICE IS PAID FOR ONE SOCCER PLAYER

Soccer, the English national game, like organized baseball in this country, has come into an era of high player values. There has been no transaction rivaling the "Babe" Ruth deal for $100,000 as yet, but word has been received of the sale for $20,000 of Stanley Fazackery, a crack soccer forward, who played for nothing a few years ago. The price of his purchase by the Everton club in England was said to set the high mark for the British national sport.

HAPPENINGS IN 1920

The following events stand out in 1920 sport's chapter:

The victory of America once more in the Olympic games at Antwerp, Belgium.

The winning of the Davis cup series by Johnston and Tilden, at Auckland, New Zealand.

The winning of the American open golf title at Toledo, by Edward Ray, one of England's greatest golfers.

The successful defense of America's yachting cup for the Resolute, against the Shamrock IV, Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger from England.

The winning of the city's first major league pennant, and then its first world's championship by the Cleveland ball club.

The capture of the National league pennant by the Dodgers—not figured in the running by most experts last spring.

The winning of the national tennis title by William T. Tilden.

The victory of Chick Evans in the national amateur golf tourney.

The winning of the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis speedway by the late Gaston Chevrolet.

Next to these events rank the following:

The visits of Georges Carpentier, European heavyweight champion, in the United States, and his defeat of Battling Levinsky for the light-heavyweight title.

The retention of his heavyweight crown by Jack Dempsey, world's champion, in his bouts with Billy Miske at Benton Harbor, Mich., and Bill Brennan at New York.

The tour through the eastern half of the country of Ray and Harry Vardon, in which these English stars again demonstrated their greatness, although Chick Evans and a few other Americans registered victories over them.

The winning for the fifth time of the national women's golf title by Miss Alexa Stirling of Atlanta, Ga.

The record-breaking feats of Man o' War, unanimously considered the greatest horse the turf has known. He wound up a spectacular season by defeating Sir Barton in a $75,000 match race at Windsor, Canada, late in the summer.

The successful flight of United States army aviators from Mineola, N. Y., to Alaska and back—a distance of 4,000 miles. While this wasn't booked as a sporting classic, the men who drove the planes must be considered as having sporting blood of the nth degree.

YALE HOCKEY TEAM STAR

Diefendorf, star goal keeper of the Yale hockey team. He is one of the veterans of the 1921 team.

WEIGHT EVENTS IN MORNING

Intercollegiate Track Union of Canada to Schedule Qualifying Contests in Forenoon.

The Canadian Intercollegiate union, just organized, will hold weight events in the morning of the day the annual intercollegiate meet is held. Those who qualify will take part in finals in the afternoon, the same rule holding good in the pole vault. The organization will include colleges all over Canada. The next meet will be held in Kingston, October 22, 1921.

Padlock Off Bank Roll.

Barney Dreyfuss has at last taken the padlock off the bank roll, according to flashes from Boston. The Pittsburgh owner is charged with having offered $80,000—all in cash money—for Rabbit Maraville.

ASPIRIN

Name "Bayer" on Genuine

Beware! Unless you see the name "Bayer" on package or on tablets you are not getting genuine Aspirin prescribed by physicians for twenty-one years and proved safe by millions. Take Aspirin only as told in the Bayer package for Colds, Headache, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Earache, Toothache, Lumbago, and for Pain. Handy tin boxes of twelve Bayer Tablets of Aspirin cost few cents. Druggists also sell larger packages. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Mononucleicacidester of Salicylicacid. —Adv.

The Best Ones Never Do.

"How was the lecture?"
"Fine. It didn't last more than forty minutes."

Important to all Women Readers of this Paper

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine, will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by Parcel Post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.—Adv.

Horrible Death.

"How does a hairdresser end his days?"
"He curls up and dies."

WOMEN! USE "DIAMOND DYES"

Dye Old Skirts, Dresses, Waists, Coats, Stockings, Draperies—Everything.

Each package of "Diamond Dyes" contains easy directions for dyeing any article of wool, silk, cotton, linen, or mixed goods. Beware! Poor dye streaks, spots, fades, and ruins material by giving it a "dye-look." Buy "Diamond Dyes" only. Druggist has Color Card.—Adv.

These Troublesome Times.

Knicker—What is the matter with the world?
Bocker—Unrest, arrest and rest.

Better general health is sure to follow the use of the natural Herb laxative, Garfield Tea. It corrects constipation.—Adv.

Knowing things to be true that are not so, makes lots of trouble and misery in this world.

WAGES CUT AT SHIPYARD

Confirming the news in last week's Gazette relative to a reduction in wages at the shipyard, comes the following from the Craft Committees of the Fore River given this week to the shop committees:

"The present condition of the shipbuilding industry makes it imperative that immediate action be taken toward reducing costs in every direction. The Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, Ltd., has not signed a new ship contract for any of its east coast yards since June 1, 1920.

"On a new wage scale which will reduce labor cost it is believed by the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, Ltd., that new shipbuilding business can be secured that will furnish employment for the employees of this company, many of whom would otherwise be laid off in a short time.

"The whole situation has been thoroughly discussed in several conferences with the joint shop committee and the following action by the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation is the result thereof:

"The present day work rates will be reduced 10 percent and intermediate rates will be established in conference between the management of the company and the shop committee where necessary.

"The existing allowance of 10 percent over black book rates will be eliminated.

"Certain existing inconsistencies in the present black book rates will be corrected. This, however, will not cause any appreciable change in the black book rates as a whole.

"There will be a 10 percent reduction in the scheduled piece work rates and certain existing inequalities will be adjusted.

"There will be a 10 percent reduction to all salaried employees.

"All of the above will take effect on Feb. 14, 1921."

WEYMOUTH HISTORICAL SOCIETY

The annual meeting of the Weymouth Historical society was held at the Fogg Library Thursday evening, Jan. 27. The meeting was an interesting one dealing with the new history of Weymouth. A large number of pictures for the new history were on file. Two new names were presented by the secretary for membership. The following officers were elected for exhibition and more are yet to come 1921:

President, Howard H. Joy.
Vice-president, Clarence W. Fearing.
Secretary, Rev. William Hyde.
Treasurer, Walter L. Bates.
Librarian, Ruth N. Tower.
Executive committee, the above and A. C. Gertsley.

Nominating committee, H. B. Reed, Dr. K. N. Granger, A. C. Gertsley, P. H. Tirrell, E. W. Hollis, F. T. Barnes and Mrs. H. H. Joy.
Library committee, C. W. Fearing, Rev. William Hyde, Ruth N. Tower, H. H. Joy.

Committee on the order of business, the same as the Executive committee.
Delegates to the Bay State Historical league, Howard H. Joy, Clarence W. Fearing and Rev. William Hyde.

Weymouth Boys As Braintree Suspects

Unless the police have some evidence, they should be careful not to do an injustice to young men, especially juveniles and those who saw service in Europe. Because of the assaults and hold-ups in Braintree, women and others have been advised to arm themselves, and young men have been urged to be alert to discover the ruffians. Considerable excitement undoubtedly prevails.

The Gazette is aware that a young soldier, whose home is at North Weymouth, and three Weymouth boys were before the District court at Quincy or Wednesday, for carrying revolvers without a permit. An attempt is being made to connect them with the East Braintree assaults, which may be successful, but thus far there has been very little evidence.

Knowing that many of the soldier boys who saw service in France are unnerved, and more or less irresponsible for some things, the police evidently hope they may connect the boys with the assaults. The soldier boy has been examined by Dr. Walter L. Sargent and Dr. Daniel B. Reardon of Quincy, who advised the court that the young man should be subject for observation.

NOTICE TO VOTERS

Owing to the fact that the Appropriation Committee do not see fit to increase the rate for the Collection of Taxes from 7 mills on a dollar to 8 mills and postage, I wish to inform the voters through the Gazette and Transcript, that I am not a candidate for re-election for 1921.

Thanking all voters for past favors I am yours very truly
HARRY E. BEARCE,
Collector of Taxes for 1920
Town of Weymouth

The case of the juveniles will come before the juvenile court at Quincy today.

Two of the Braintree women assaulted, Miss Marion West and Mrs. Emelina Giovanni say the Weymouth soldier is not the man who assaulted them.

PAST MASTERS NIGHT

Twelve of the 14 past masters of Orphans Hope lodge, A. F. & A. M., were guests at the last communication of the lodge and occupied seats at the head table at the banquet.

Their dates of service were:
Francis A. Bicknell, 1880-83.
Joseph E. Gardner, 1889-92.
*Herbert A. Newton 1892-94.
Joseph Chase 1898-00.
T. J. Evans 1900-01.
*Fred L. Bayley 1901-03.
Frank H. Torrey 1903-05.
Wm. P. Denbroeder 1905-07.
Gardner R. P. Barker 1909-11.
Charles W. Dunbar 1911-13.
George F. Farrar 1913-15.
Stanley Torrey 1915-17.
Charles H. Chubbuck 1917-19.
Henry P. Tilden 1919-20.

*Absent
Worshipful Brothers Herbert A. Newton and Fred L. Bayley, who were unavoidably absent, sent letters. A good dinner was enjoyed while an orchestra furnished music. An address was given by Bro. James E. Harris, formerly of the Governor's Council, who spoke on the work of the Governor's Council. It was late before adjournment was made to the lodge room for the regular meeting. A count showed 114 members present.

HOW TAXES ARE SPENT

Town Accountant Emerson R. Dizer has prepared a chart showing how the money raised in 1920 by taxation was expended.

For education 27 cents plus, or if charities, health and soldiers benefits are included, 36 cents plus for public welfare.

For highways 21 cents plus, or including street lighting, 24 cents plus for service.

For protection, including police, fire and moths, 9 cents plus.

For State and county taxes, 16 cents plus.

For indebtedness, 7 cents plus.

*For general government a little less than 4 cents, and unclassified about 2 cents.

WEYMOUTH JURORS

Because of the murder trial at Dedham an unusually large number of jurors were drawn by the Selectmen this week: Carl F. Anderson, Ernest F. Barrand, Lewis M. Beach, Elmer L. Belcher, Frank M. Bryant, Edmund W. Chandler, F. Everett Clapp, Howard M. Clark, Clement N. Curtis, Frederick J. Cushing, James R. Dolan, William R. Dwyer, John P. Fisher, John F. Flynn, William H. Gifford, Charles H. Kelley, Edward H. Laskey, Everett Loud, James P. McGuire, Neil McLeod, Harry L. McLeod, Charles J. Meuse, Paul V. Mulready, Henry A. Nash, James O'Connor, Everett D. Richards, George W. Rix, Edward T. Ryan, Elmer E. Sargent, Benjamin B. Syvester, Winslow M. Tirrell, Silas B. Totman, John J. Webster and Robert M. White.

Ward Caucuses Tonight Town Caucus Tomorrow

Rumor has it that there may be some dark horses for various town offices at the Republican Ward caucuses this evening.

Two members of the Board of Selectmen who have served 25 years, have declined to be candidates for re-election—Bradford Hawes and George L. Newton. New candidates have appeared in both North Weymouth and Ward Four and there may be others.

Tax Collector Bearce is also, unexpectedly, out of the field. Tomorrow evening delegates from the Ward caucuses will meet at G. A. R. hall to complete the Republican ticket.

K. OF P. ANNIVERSARY

Delphi lodge, Knights of Pythias, observed its 52d anniversary last evening with a banquet at 6.30, followed by an entertainment and dance. The caterer was H. J. Soller of Boston, and the entertainment by Scott & Barr, the popular two-men minstrels. Richards orchestra furnished the music for the dancing.

C. C. Herbert C. Johnson and the officers of the lodge were the committee of arrangements. The officers are:

C. C.—Herbert C. Johnson.
V. C.—Victor H. Hall.
K. R. & S.—Arthur C. Bicknell.
M. & F.—Francis P. Whittin.
M. E. C.—Francis M. Drown.
Prelate—Grant B. Chase.
M. & W.—Lawrence E. Ray.
M. & A.—Elmer L. Goodspeed.
J. G.—Lester W. Tisdale.
O. D.—Sylvanus B. Richmond.

NOT A CANDIDATE

Tax Collector Harry E. Bearce gives notice in this issue of the Gazette and Transcript that he is not a candidate for re-election. Mr. Bearce appeared before the Appropriation Committee asking for an increase in pay for collection of taxes, from seven to eight mills on the dollar, but the committee were not favorable to the increase, hence the decision of Mr. Bearce. A good record has been made by Collector Bearce the past year, who has employed a clerk and devoted considerable time to the duties of the office.

Nearly every man is required to file income returns to the National government this year, and many to the State.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Railway Labor Board Refuses to Abrogate the National Working Agreement.

IS WITHOUT JURISDICTION

Senate Committee Report Against Naval Holiday and Suspension of Immigration—Germans Are Preparing Their Counter-Proposals on Reparations.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

This year's first big labor fight, that between the railways and the rail workers, really opened last week when the national railroad labor board took up the appeal of the rail executives for immediate abrogation of the national working agreements. The hearing drew to Chicago the heavy guns of both the executives and the railway brotherhoods. The board decided the railways, which, however, abandoned the fight.

Chairman Bartow said the board for several months had been considering the national working agreement, clause by clause, to determine whether any parts were unreasonable, and he urged that it be "not further interrupted by the introduction of unwarranted demands by either party."

The second part of the general argument of Mr. Walsh was that the move by the railroad executives is part of a "Wall street conspiracy" to kill the power of the unions, establish the open shop, crush collective bargaining and reduce wages.

"Twelve New York banks," said Mr. Walsh, "through interlocking directorates, control 92 class I roads, which have 80 per cent of the class I mileage and 76 per cent of the total railroad mileage of the United States. In the hearings of the Lockwood committee in New York the testimony revealed a movement on the part of certain interests to crush unions and establish the 'open shop.' It is directed first at the two basic industries of building construction and transportation."

A great many persons not directly concerned in the present controversy believe with Mr. Walsh that there is a concerted movement to establish the open shop, and, likewise, a great many persons are in sympathy with such a movement. These persons see the impending conflict as a fight not between labor and capital, but between tyrannical labor unions and industry. Most of them have suffered and are suffering from the intolerance of both organized labor and organized capital, and they are very tired of it.

What railroad men said was one of the most far reaching decisions made by the labor board was handed down last week, the ruling being that it was the duty of the Boston and Maine railroad to confer with the committees of the American Federation of Labor over the grievances of its workers. Employees said the decision upheld the right of independent organizations of railway workers to present their grievances to road officials. In the Boston and Maine case it was said a conference was refused because those with the grievances were not a party to the national agreement.

Inspired by the conviction that the United States should have a navy as strong as that of any other nation, the senate naval affairs committee reported against the Borah resolution for a six months' naval construction holiday. The report, presented by Senator Poindexter, said the committee was as anxious as possible to bring about a reduction of armaments, but that no disarmament would be of value unless it were general and, in the case of the great maritime powers, universal. "Unhappily this is not the case at the present time," continued the report, "and we must deal with conditions as they exist. For one nation to leave itself exposed to attack while another is preparing all the engines of war would be not only folly, but the greatest danger to the peace of the world that could be imagined."

A temporary suspension of building, it was pointed out, would cost the government immense sums through deterioration of material and dislocation of contracts; would throw large numbers of workmen out of employment, and, by rendering it difficult or impossible to reassemble these forces should work on vessels be resumed, would give an immense advantage to powers that had not interrupted the construction of their fleets.

The committee upheld the contention of the navy board that the capital ship is not obsolete. It recommended that twelve destroyers and six submarines, authorized in 1916 but not yet contracted for, be eliminated from the building program. These 18 ships were expected to cost the government about $55,000,000. The committee suggested the use of this amount for the construction of two airplane carriers of the most modern type and of the most advantageous size.

Another senate committee—that on immigration—also took important action when it rejected, by a vote of 5 to 4, the bill passed by the house providing for the suspension of immigration for one year. Senators Johnson, Washington, Harris, Georgia; Harrison, Mississippi, and King, Utah, voted for the bill, and Colt, Rhode Island, chairman; Dillingham, Vermont; Sterling, South Dakota; Keyes, New Hampshire, and Phelan, California, against it.

Next day the committee began consideration of the Dillingham substitute for the house bill, and the indications were that it would be acted on favorably. This measure provides that the number of aliens of any nationality entering as immigrants in any one year shall be limited to 5 per cent of the total number of persons of such nationality already in the country, as determined by the latest census. The legislation would not apply to immigrants from the American continent and adjacent islands, nor to the Asiatic "barred zone," from which immigrants already are excluded, nor to Japan, immigration from which is regulated by agreement. Some of the radical restrictionists will make a fight to have the percentage cut down, perhaps as low as 2 per cent. In Washington it was said there was no likelihood that the bill would get through congress before March 4.

Frequent charges that thousands of sick or disabled ex-service men are being inadequately cared for by the government had their effect on congress. The senate adopted an amendment to the sundry civil bill appropriating $12,500,000 for five new buildings and $6,100,000 for the enlargement and improvement of existing hospitals. The house, by unanimous vote, passed a bill carrying an appropriation for $13,000,000 for additional hospitals and enlarged facilities. Under this bill five new hospitals are to be located—one in the central Atlantic states, one in the region of the Great Lakes, one in the central southwestern states, one in the Rocky mountain states and one in southern California. In addition, the secretary of war is instructed to take over at once and equip for hospital use Fort Mackenzie, Wyoming, and Fort Walla Walla, Washington.

Foreign Minister Simons has notified the allies that the German government will send qualified delegates to the reparations conference in London March 1, "provided negotiations are based on proposals which the German government reserves to itself the right to lay before the conference." This acceptance being satisfactory, Doctor Simons called into consultation a large number of experts in finance, industry and economics, and they proceeded to frame the counter-proposals which Germany will submit.

Premier Briand has obtained from the French chamber of deputies the support he required before going to the London conference. The chamber voted 395 to 83 to approve the reparations terms framed by the supreme council, and then gave a vote of confidence in Briand, 387 to 125. The opposition was led by members of the former Clemenceau cabinet. The premier closed the debate with the statement: "The fate of Germany lies in her own hands. Should she, after May 1, 1921, refuse to fulfill her pledges the French government can be relied upon to take all measures to make her."

The Hansa league, the great economic association of Germany, says many of its members urge a boycott of French and English goods in favor of goods from America, and adds that the directors of the league may adopt the suggestion if Great Britain continues to support France in the reparations claims.

Of the two great military operations in the Near East that are believed to be impending, one of the soviet Russians against Poland and Rumania, has not yet been started. The other, the conflict between the Greeks and the Turkish nationalists, may already be under way. The news from Asia Minor that comes through Paris is carefully censored, and advices by other routes are conflicting at this writing. There is no doubt, however, that the Greeks have been concentrating large forces for this fight, and that Kemal Pasha also has gathered together most of his troops for what he hopes to make a decisive operation. Greece relies on financial assistance from the allies for this warfare, and without it she will have great difficulty, for her expenses are now vastly greater than her revenues. Chronic trouble-makers and trouble-seekers are trying to find in the Greek operations in Asia Minor a cause for serious conflict between France and Great Britain; but there is no reason to believe that their hopes will be realized.

Walter Lyman Brown, director of American relief work in Europe, has been making a tour of all the countries in his jurisdiction, and is skeptical concerning the expected Russian offensive this spring. He thinks the Bolshevik government would scarcely dare to undertake an attack on Poland that would lose to its cause the support of the workers of western Europe. He says Hungary and Latvia are sure the attack is coming, Poland is nervous, and Czechoslovakia and Estonia believe the Russians will refrain.

The loyalists of South Africa, headed by General Smuts, won a great victory in the recent elections, and as a result the provinces of the Cape of Good Hope, Transvaal, Natal and Orange Free State will continue as one of the self-governing dominions of the British empire instead of setting up an independent republic. The opposition was led by General Hertzog, who asserted the right of South Africa to secede from the empire despite the act of union.

In India a more liberal self-government was put into effect last week when Prince Arthur of Connaught arrived at Delhi as personal representative of the emperor, King George, and issued a proclamation announcing the surrender of much government power to the native princes.

R. C. Roper of Nebraska makes the interesting announcement that William J. Bryan and his brother, Charles, whom Mr. Roper represents, are planning to reorganize the Democratic party so that the Cox-White and McAdoo-Woolley factions shall be eliminated and the control put in the hands of the "middle class Democrats." The program, said Mr. Roper, will be made public on March 18, W. J. Bryan's birthday.

A Vocalist Provoked.

"I knew there was going to be trouble as soon as the mule heard the honk of our new flivver," remarked Farmer Cornstossel, ruefully. "How did it affect the mule?" "Threw him into a fit of professional jealousy so violent that he backed up and kicked the rear transmission clear through the radiator."

Queer Attitude.

"His argument does not leave his opponent a leg to stand on." "That's odd. Why would he want a leg to stand on when it is all head work?"

Folled.

"I hear Pete married a girl who is quite an embroidery expert." "And he always declared he would never marry any kind of designing female."

A BUSINESS MAN

"How much do you usually get for marrying people?" "Five dollars." "Anything off for cash?"

Avoided Mistakes.

There was a man who feared the show that trivial error makes. He never did a thing, and so avoided all mistakes.

The Wisdom of George.

"Do you believe George Washington never told a lie?" "Well, he didn't after he married the widow anyhow; he knew he'd never get away with it."—Boston Transcript.

Expectations.

"Mr. Wampum, five years ago I did you out of $10. I hope you don't feel resentful." "Not at all. How much are you going to do me for this time?"

They All Do.

"I've just been told that I'm not doing the right thing by my family." "Who dared to say such a thing to you?" "A life insurance agent."

Certain Ways.

"What are some of the quickest ways you know of to get up in the world?" "Get a job with an aviator or hit a mule on the off hind leg."

Co-respondents.

"My wife's affections have been hopelessly alienated." "By whom?" "By all of the handsome movie actors she sees."—Film Fun.

Fitting Food.

"That girl has a complexion like peaches and cream and lips like twin cherries." "Then no wonder they say she is sweet enough to eat."

A Doubtful Question.

"Is your candidate a good man?" "Yes, he's good, all right, but it remains to be seen if he is one of the elect."

Natural Register.

"Why do you ask me if the famous singing dog selects nautical songs?" "Because it is natural to think his bark is on the C's."

Nothing Like It.

"Is he your bete noir?" "No, indeed; on the contrary, I simply can't abide him or anything he does."

Publicity.

"All you need for success in business is persistent publicity." "I can't agree to that," replied Mr. Cumrox. "If publicity were the only requisite, the 'Suwanee River' everybody has been singing about would have had one real estate boom after another."

Accounting for It.

"I hear young Flyer is going to reform. They say he is dead broke." "I suppose that is the reason he wants to mend."

MORTGAGEE'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Joseph Carion, of Weymouth, County of Norfolk and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, to John W. Hedden, of said Weymouth, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, Book 1447, Page 494, will be sold at public auction at the office of Russell B. Worster, Washington Square, Weymouth, Mass., on Saturday, March 5, 1921,

at ten o'clock in the forenoon for breach of conditions contained in said mortgage, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, namely:

A certain lot of land with the buildings thereon situated in Weymouth aforesaid, being lot numbered 10 on a plan of Lake Shore Park, Russell H. Whiting, C. E., dated September 11, 1916, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, Book 82, Plan 3977, said lot being bounded and described as follows: Northerly by Whitman's Pond, as shown on said plan, fifty and four-tenths (50.4) feet; Easterly by Lot numbered 11, one hundred and seven (107) feet; Southerly by Lake Shore Drive proposed, fifty (50) feet; Westerly by Lot numbered 9, one hundred and nine (109) feet.

Containing 5400 square feet of land more or less and being all of said measurements, areas and boundaries, more or less, according to said plan. Said conveyance was made with the right to said grantee, his heirs and assigns, to use the roads and streets shown on said plan on the east side of Middle street for all purposes for which streets are commonly used. Subject to the restrictions that no building erected or placed thereon shall be less than fifteen (15) feet from the street line. Said premises will be sold subject to a mortgage of eight hundred dollars ($800) held by the Hingham Cooperative Bank, and subject to taxes and any and all incumbrances of record. Two hundred dollars ($200) will be required to be paid in cash at the time and place of said sale, and the balance to be paid at the time of delivery of the deed.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

CAT'S BOARD NO "NECESSITY"

Montclair Judge Rules Out Woman's Claim Against Landlord.

A cat's board, under certain conditions, is not a necessity. In the opinion of Judge Harry N. Reeves of the District court at Montclair, N. J. Miss Mary F. Apperson, a worker in the Newark public library, brought suit against Alphonso Dreyfus, owner of an apartment house in Newark, to recover damages for failing to allow her possession of an apartment which she had rented from May 1 last. On that day Miss Apperson moved her personal belongings to the house, but she avers that Dreyfus refused to permit her to put in her furniture until May 15.

At a hotel in Newark, where Miss Apperson spent the time between May 1 and 15, she was not permitted to keep her cat, and therefore was compelled to pay board for Tabby, which cost her $3 a week. Her suit was for $31, including for the first moving $20; hotel bill, $35; cat's board, $6. The judge awarded damages for her claim, less the cat's board bill.

Hearing that the popular prince was here, the people gathered about the palace and when Herr Varetzch appeared after his interview with the president, gave an enthusiastic demonstration, believing he was the prince.

The new diplomat appeared highly gratified at the cordial reception so unexpectedly given him by the enemy of yesterday, and probably has telegraphed the pleasing fact to his government. Residents of Lisbon who have learned the facts are smiling over the incident.

PHILADELPHIA POLICE IN AUTOS MAKING WAR ON BANDIT TERROR

Radical police action to check holdups, robberies, assaults and killings, which it is said, have reached a dangerous stage, has been taken by the Philadelphia police department in the formation of a heavily-armed motor corps. The cars, manned by expert riflemen, patrol all parts of the city, day and night. The plan has already been tried with unequalled success at Abington, a suburb of Philadelphia. Chief of Police H. S. Lever of Abington, has a well-equipped squad of motor riflemen who have done splendid work in keeping the territory under his control free from automobile bandits. This photograph shows a number of the cars of the Philadelphia motor police corps.

AUTOS PUNISHED ON STEEP HILLS

It Is Not Necessary to Take All of Difficult Grades While "in High Gear."

DONE SOLELY FOR BOASTING

Practice Imposes Hardest Kind of Work on Engine and Every Other Part of Car—Low Gears Should Be Employed.

The high gear hill climber is first cousin to the scorcher, and both are bound to become wiser as time goes on, says R. O. Allen, writing in American Motorist on the folly of driving motorcars up steep hills in high gear solely for boasting purposes.

Continuing Mr. Allen says: "I fully understand that the modern automobile is made to climb almost anything but trees. But I wish to demonstrate that to climb a steep hill on the high gear imposes the hardest kind of work not only on the engine, but also on every other part of the car. The low gear ratios are provided for hill climbing and they should be used for it."

Work of Automobiles. "It may be well here to consider a little more carefully the amount of work performed by an automobile climbing a gradient on, say, a gear ratio of three to one. A ratio of three to one means that one revolution of the rear wheels is produced by three revolutions of the engine shaft. With the lower gear ratio, the intermediate and the low, the number of engine revolutions becomes still greater as compared to the number of road-wheel revolutions.

"It is not so difficult to compute with exactness the distance which a car is propelled by one explosion in the engine cylinder and the power consumed in hill climbing. The circumference of a 32-inch wheel is approximately 100 inches, and in covering one mile as fast as the road wheels, it will require 1,800 revolutions of the gear shaft to propel the car one mile. Thus, if such a car should proceed at the rate of 30 miles per hour approximately 950 engine revolutions per minute are required. With two power strokes at every revolution there are 1,900 revolutions per mile and each explosion propels the car one foot and four and a half inches.

Resistance Added. "This estimate assumes that the car be propelled over level ground. To mount a hill simply means that grade resistance is added to the various frictional and other stresses. An automobile weighing 2,000 pounds climbing a hill 200 feet high (measured vertically) simply performs the task of overcoming the action of gravity or lifting, and the calculation of the power required to do this must involve the factors from which the horsepower unit is derived. To lift 2,000 pounds 200 feet high in one minute is the same thing as lifting 2,000 times 200 or 400,000 pounds one foot high in one minute. Theoretically, then, the lifting of 2,000 pounds 200 feet high requires 400,000 divided by 33,000 equals 12.12 horsepower, and the losses through friction, air resistance, etc., consume the remainder of the theoretical horsepower output.

"From all of this it must become apparent that rushing up a steep hill on the high gear must subject any car to enormous stresses, which are likely to affect the life and service of the car to a considerable degree."

Adjusting Steering Gears. In adjusting the steering gear for lost motion great care must be observed lest the parts be set so close together as to bind.

Fire Brick Fitted Into Container and Packed With Nonconducting Material Will Add Greatly to Driver's Comfort.

The accompanying illustration shows a simple but efficient foot-warmer that may be used in a carriage or automobile. It is constructed on the principle of the fireless cooker. A brick is used as the carrier of the heat, and torn paper as the nonconducting material between the metal brick container and the sides of the box.

To make one, simply take an old box about 12 inches long, 8 inches wide and 6 inches deep. Take a piece of sheet metal, and cut and fit it to the size of a large fire-brick, leaving enough metal so that when the form is set in the center of the box the edges of the metal will come to the edge of the box, as shown in the sketch. Fill the space underneath and around the metal with torn paper, and nail the metal to the box.—Harvey Mead in Popular Science Monthly.

WEYMOUTH AND BRAINTREE

The superintendent and teachers of the primary department of the Baptist church held a Valentine party Saturday afternoon, Feb. 12, for the children of their department; 34 children were present. Valentines were exchanged, games were played and a story about Abraham Lincoln was read. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served, and a very enjoyable time was spent.

Rev. Fr. Condon Dalton of Somerville has been spending a few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. A. Dalton.

Dr. Franklin P. Virgin has been confined to his home for a few days with a strained back sustained while cranking his automobile.

Miss Helen Crehan has taken the position of bookkeeper at I. Bloom & Son's store.

J. B. Denbroeder is offering Columbia paints direct from the makers at low prices.—Advertisement.

Alfred Chicoine spent the week-end with his brother in Lowell.

James Tirrell, a pharmacist in the U. S. Medical Corps at the Naval Hospital, Brooklyn, N. Y., has been home for a few days visit to his sister, Edward Fraser.

Edward Fraser, at 2.30, Feb. 22, at Bates Hotel, Bryant Washburn in "The House of the Living Dead."

William H. Cowing of the Board of Selectmen and Overseers of the Poor, who has been confined to his home by illness for the past two weeks, is now rapidly regaining his health and will be able to be about in a few days.

Cornelius White, who recently recovered from a serious illness of pneumonia, was taken ill Sunday with kidney trouble and is reported as a very sick man.

Are you one of the many in East Braintree who are enjoying the excellent modern service of the South Braintree Wet Wash Laundry? Their motto is: "Test Us."

A social gathering was held at the vestry Monday evening to rehearse for the Braintree meet to be held this evening in that town. Rev. C. W. Allen, scoutmaster, was in charge. At 8 o'clock Orin Steele, fish and game warden of Norfolk county, gave a stereoscopic lecture on "The Wild Life of the Surrounding Country."

Deputy Internal Revenue Inspector Dennis Slattery will be at the store in the Tufts library building Wednesday, Feb. 23, from 10 A. M. to 5 P. M. to give information regarding income tax reports.

A peeping Tom is making himself busy in this part of the town. Sunday night he was seen peering in windows in the vicinity of Lincoln Square. The police were notified, but a careful search failed to discover the offender.

"No Trespassing" play in three acts by Evelyn Gray Whiting will be presented by the Y. P. C. U. of the First Universalist church, Friday, Feb. 18, in Lincoln hall. Tickets 35 cents.—Advertisement, 2t, 6.7.

CLUB and SOCIAL

—At Melrose last week the State Federation of Women's Clubs discussed the merits and demerits of the various legislative measures for which their interest and support is asked. Voting strength of the convention was 420, but the discussion on the bills was not confined to this group, but was open to all who wished to question or make a statement. The state bill for maternity benefits and for state censorship of motion pictures held the greatest interest for the delegates, and both were ultimately strongly indorsed, in fact the censorship bill had 357 for indorsement and but 63 in opposition. This was the only measure upon which a voice vote was not acceptable. State control for county prisons was overwhelmingly indorsed, likewise the prohibition code. The physical training bill was re-indorsed at the Springfield convention last May.

A social evening, with vocal and instrumental music was enjoyed. A salad supper was served by the hostess. Mrs. Bowles was the recipient of many birthday gifts.

COLUMBIA-PRATT

The residence of Chief of Police and Mrs. Arthur H. Pratt at 434 East street was the scene of a pretty wedding on Tuesday evening, which interested a large circle of friends, when their daughter, Miss Daisy N. Pratt, became the bride of Emory N. Colburn of Westwood. Mr. Colburn is a civil engineer of the department of public works, division of highways, State House, Boston, and the bride has been the Boston manager of the Globe Phone Manufacturing Company.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Rev. Frank Kingston of the First Methodist Episcopal church officiated and the single ring service was used.

The bride was gowned in white satin charmesuse with rose point lace and pearl trimmings and carried a shower bouquet of lilacs of the valley and bride roses. The bride is a graduate of the local schools.

A reception followed the ceremony from 7.30 to 10.30 P. M., largely attended by townspeople and out of town friends. The couple were assisted in receiving by the parents of the bride and the brother and sister of the groom. The ushers were well known young men, Marshall T. Tirrell, Charles L. Gibson, G. Ralph Young and Raymond Young. There was music by an orchestra, and refreshment was served.

The couple received many beautiful presents and guests were present from Boston, Brookline, Worcester, Westwood, Weymouth and surrounding towns.

Mr. and Mrs. Colburn will go to Bermuda on their wedding trip, and will be at home to friends at 55 Magazine street, Cambridge, after March 1.

VALENTINE PARTY

The Young Men's Forum of the Union Congregational Society held a very attractive costume party Friday evening, Feb. 11, in the banquet hall of the church. Despite the storm the young people began to appear in their pretty valentine costumes about 8 o'clock.

There was a young man in real English hunter's pink coat and riding togs, several young ladies in white gowns all covered with red hearts, a gypsy maid, two small boys with overalls on which were sewed red hearts, a dainty little girl in a festive pink paper costume, a real knight of old in green velvet and all made merry. An orchestra of three pieces enlivened the whole affair, and all who attended can pass the good word along that they played real dance music. Ice cream and cake were served at intermission.

The matrons were: Mrs. Edga Bolles, Mrs. John Williams and Mrs. Charles G. Jordan. The hall was very prettily decorated with red and white and a very attractive corner was arranged for the matrons. Much credit is due to the young men who had the affair in charge.

QUINCY IN THE MOVIES

Manager C. R. Black of the Quincy Theatre announces that "Quincy in moving pictures" will be taken and shown on the Quincy Theatre screen. Special preparations have been going on to give to theater-goers a rare treat in the form of showing the entire city of Quincy in moving pictures. The camera-man is now on the ground and has started to take the picture of the town. Backed by the Quincy Theatre the camera-man was secured from The Marston Amusement Co. of Boston. Mr. France, experienced in this line for the past 13 years, is considered one of the best camera-men in the country in this line of work.

To begin with the camera-man will start out to take the 6000 school children of Quincy. The Mayor and many important officials of the city will also be taken for the event.

The fire department will be taken in action going to a fire and if possible a fire scene will be shown of a real local event. The police department will also be shown in pictures, as well as many of the principal streets of Quincy.

The picture will also show many of the beautiful residences of well known people in conjunction with many historical events pertaining to the history of the city. Plans are also made to take the Fore River Ship Yards and the granite quarries, as well as thousands of local people. Many of the well known churches will be shown in pictures, as well as public buildings. Manager Black is to be complimented on securing such an event that Quincy will be proud of. The slogan of the picture is a boost for publicity for Quincy and the pictures will be entitled: Quincy in Moving Pictures—Co-operation Makes Quincy Grow—Boost for bigger and greater Quincy.

The Chamber of Commerce will also be taken in the picture and will show to Quincy what a new energetic body can do for the City of Quincy. A little comedy will also be given, which will add a touch to the amusement side of the picture. Thousands of dollars will be spent in order to secure as good a picture of Quincy as possible.

A ten percent out went into effect at the Fore River shipyard on Monday. The result of the ballot of the employees is unknown.

MRS. ALICE T. ASH

Mrs. Alice T. Ash died at her home in Quincy Feb. 9, after an illness of several weeks. She was born in Weymouth and was a graduate of our High school. His talk was illustrated by colored pictures and he gave most interesting history of the Telephone Company from its very beginning to the present time. Its various workings, extent of its operations, which proved very enjoyable and it was voted by the men as one of the most enjoyable evenings held.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE

History repeats itself! It is only natural for the Thomas H. Ince who has given to the screen "Civilization," "The Flame of the Yukon," "Hell's Hinges," "Behind the Door," and a score of other cinema epics, to continue his dynamic energy and original and powerful creative ability.

The clever producer, who is a regular machine gun when it comes to repeating dramatic triumphs, has "gone and done it again," the latest bulls-eye being registered by "Lying Lips," his second special for the Associated Producers, which will be presented at the Alhambra Theatre beginning Thursday, Feb. 24, for a run of three days only.

House Peters, in the co-starred leading role of Blair Cornwall, a young Canadian ranchman, gives one of the most brilliant characterizations of his career, a career punctuated with star roles and triumphant successes. Peters is sincere at all times, equally convincing as the uncouth Canadian and the sophisticated Londoner, and rises to truly impressive dramatic heights.

Florence Vidor, who is firmly established as one of the most beautiful women before the public, demonstrates that she can do considerably more than look beautiful and, in the role of Nance Abbott, a scion of British aristocracy, shares equal honors in the dramatic moments of "Lying Lips."

Joseph Kilgour, in a leading character role, Margaret Livingston, as the jealous little Canadian cousin, Edith Yorke, Margaret Campbell, and several others comprise a practically perfect all-star cast.

—If Nature happens to favor a girl with a good shape the girl goes around acting like she did it herself.—Delphi (Ind.) Citizen-Times.

—Monday evening Miss Florence B. Nash entertained at her home on King Oak hill the officers of Clark C. E. Union. After an hour of business the remainder of the evening was spent in merriment. Appropriate Valentine games were indulged in, after which all adjourned to the dining room, where the table with its artistic decorations, was a pleasing sight to all. Ice cream, cakes, fancy crackers and candies were served. Each one received a valentine, also an attractive little favor and the evening for all the guests was both a profitable and enjoyable one.

—The Christmas club which met at the home of Mrs. Rufus Bates Monday evening observed Valentine's day by indulging in a jolly program of games. Refreshments of ice cream, cakes and candies were served, and the paper hats presented to each one, added much to the occasion.

—Watch the first page every week for special sales by the J. H. Murray Hardware Co., Inc. This week Kid-die Kars, $1.69.—Advertisement.

—A very enjoyable time was held at the home of Mrs. Clarence Pratt on Wednesday afternoon, when the Neighborhood Whist club held their weekly meeting. The first prize taken by Mrs. A. J. Gold, and consolation by Mrs. Wheaton. Refreshments were served.

—The annual business meeting and election of officers of the First church Sunday school will be held at the home of Miss Addie J. Taylor on Saturday evening at 7.45.

—Tuesday evening in the First Church chapel a Valentine social, under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E. was given, Miss Ruth Freeman being in charge of same. The chapel was most appropriately decorated, the color scheme being red. A splendid program of games as planned and as the party was uniquely divided into groups, which competed against each other; it made fun for all, and there was much enthusiasm and interest. Refreshments of ice cream and cakes were served.

K. O. C. TOURNAMENT

At the clubhouse of Weymouth council, Knights of Columbus, on Monday evening, members were matched against Braintree council in the inter-council tournament. Weymouth won at pool and cribbage, while Braintree carried off the honors at whist, pitch, forty-five and checkers.

At West Quincy, Aver Marie council defeated Quincy council at whist, pitch, pool and checkers, while Quincy won at cribbage and pool.

CLUB and SOCIAL

—At Melrose last week the State Federation of Women's Clubs discussed the merits and demerits of the various legislative measures for which their interest and support is asked. Voting strength of the convention was 420, but the discussion on the bills was not confined to this group, but was open to all who wished to question or make a statement. The state bill for maternity benefits and for state censorship of motion pictures held the greatest interest for the delegates, and both were ultimately strongly indorsed, in fact the censorship bill had 357 for indorsement and but 63 in opposition. This was the only measure upon which a voice vote was not acceptable. State control for county prisons was overwhelmingly indorsed, likewise the prohibition code. The physical training bill was re-indorsed at the Springfield convention last May.

—At the meeting of the Monday Club next Monday, Nathan Howard Gist will give his lecture "The Wise and Otherwise." Miss Lillian F. Curtis will be the hostess.

—Miss Louise Kitteridge of Shaw street entertained her Sunday School class at a Valentine party on Monday evening. Games of all kind were played and refreshments served by the hostess. The following young ladies enjoyed the pleasant affair: Ruth and Ruby Leighton, Olive Williams, Hortense Wilder, Viola Sherman, Dorothy Blackwell and Rosemond Garfield.

—Mrs. Ene K. Henry, formerly of 46 Grove street, is on an extended trip through the South. She will be in Washington, D. C., with her husband for the inauguration.

—Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Quilty have returned from their wedding trip and are at home in Hingham.

—Miss Florence B. Nash attended a banquet and meeting of the officers of the Massachusetts State C. E. Union held at Christian Endeavor headquarters at Boston last Friday evening.

—Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Sampson of Shaw street entertained Mr. and Mrs. J. Herbert Libbey, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Torrey and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Seabury at whist on Saturday evening.

—The Village Study club held an open meeting in the Fogg Library Monday evening with President Howard H. Joy presiding. Under the direction of Mrs. Helen Morse an illustrated lecture on "The Boston Museum of Fine Arts" was given. Papers were read on "The History of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts" by Mrs. Arthur Taylor, "What the Museum Means to the Public" by Mrs. Frank Fernald, and "Paintings by the Old Masters" by Mrs. Freeman Putney Jr. Rev. Ora A. Price had charge of the lantern slides. The meeting was well attended and the subject was of unusual interest.

—Mrs. John Tower and Miss Mae Carter entertained the Senior Christian Endeavor of the Pilgrim church on Tuesday evening of this week at their home on North street. After a short business meeting a social evening with games and music was enjoyed.

—Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Clark of Hobomac road announce the birth of a daughter at the Cambridge hospital on Monday.

—Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Whittemore entertained a party of friends at a Valentine party on Monday evening at their home on Fogg road. The rooms were prettily decorated for the occasion with Valentine decorations and each guest received a favor. During the social evening, appropriate games and dancing were provided for entertainment. Among the guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. Thompson of Milton, Mr. and Mrs. Miller and Mr. and Mrs. Spiller of Dorchester, Mrs. Keene of Stoneham, Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy of Roxbury and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Gridley. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

—Frank Sibley of Boston is to be the speaker at the next meeting of the Old Colony club to be held Thursday Feb. 24. The subject is to be "Citizenship Service" and it is to be an open meeting.

Mrs. Peyton is the royal matron of the new court of the Order of the Amaranth and a past matron of Mayflower chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, and her friends are anxious for her speedy recovery.

—Miss Helen Bates, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Franklin Bates, and Nathaniel Fryer surprised their friends Saturday by journeying to Salem, where they were married. Both the young people are well known, the groom being a World War veteran.

—Miss Mary Frances Hoffman, a junior at Weymouth High school, observed her 15th birthday on Wednesday evening by entertaining the members of her class at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Hoffman, 621 Broad street, East Weymouth. The program included vocal and instrumental music, games and dancing. Favors were presented.

—Mrs. Frank McNeil of Moulton avenue entertained a party of friends last week Thursday in honor of the birthday anniversary of her sister, Mrs. Bowles. A social evening, with vocal and instrumental music was enjoyed. A salad supper was served by the hostess. Mrs. Bowles was the recipient of many birthday gifts.

COLUMBIA-PRATT

The residence of Chief of Police and Mrs. Arthur H. Pratt at 434 East street was the scene of a pretty wedding on Tuesday evening, which interested a large circle of friends, when their daughter, Miss Daisy N. Pratt, became the bride of Emory N. Colburn of Westwood. Mr. Colburn is a civil engineer of the department of public works, division of highways, State House, Boston, and the bride has been the Boston manager of the Globe Phone Manufacturing Company.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Rev. Frank Kingston of the First Methodist Episcopal church officiated and the single ring service was used.

The bride was gowned in white satin charmeuse with rose point lace and pearl trimmings and carried a shower bouquet of lilacs of the valley and bride roses. The bride is a graduate of the local schools.

A reception followed the ceremony from 7.30 to 10.30 P. M., largely attended by townspeople and out of town friends. The couple were assisted in receiving by the parents of the bride and the brother and sister of the groom. The ushers were well known young men, Marshall T. Tirrell, Charles L. Gibson, G. Ralph Young and Raymond Young. There was music by an orchestra, and refreshment was served.

The couple received many beautiful presents and guests were present from Boston, Brookline, Worcester, Westwood, Weymouth and surrounding towns.

Mr. and Mrs. Colburn will go to Bermuda on their wedding trip, and will be at home to friends at 55 Magazine street, Cambridge, after March 1.

VALENTINE PARTY

The Young Men's Forum of the Union Congregational Society held a very attractive costume party Friday evening, Feb. 11, in the banquet hall of the church. Despite the storm the young people began to appear in their pretty valentine costumes about 8 o'clock.

There was a young man in real English hunter's pink coat and riding togs, several young ladies in white gowns all covered with red hearts, a gypsy maid, two small boys with overalls on which were sewed red hearts, a dainty little girl in a festive pink paper costume, a real knight of old in green velvet and all made merry. An orchestra of three pieces enlivened the whole affair, and all who attended can pass the good word along that they played real dance music. Ice cream and cake were served at intermission.

The matrons were: Mrs. Edga Bolles, Mrs. John Williams and Mrs. Charles G. Jordan. The hall was very prettily decorated with red and white and a very attractive corner was arranged for the matrons. Much credit is due to the young men who had the affair in charge.

QUINCY IN THE MOVIES

Manager C. R. Black of the Quincy Theatre announces that "Quincy in moving pictures" will be taken and shown on the Quincy Theatre screen. Special preparations have been going on to give to theater-goers a rare treat in the form of showing the entire city of Quincy in moving pictures. The camera-man is now on the ground and has started to take the picture of the town. Backed by the Quincy Theatre the camera-man was secured from The Marston Amusement Co. of Boston. Mr. France, experienced in this line for the past 13 years, is considered one of the best camera-men in the country in this line of work.

To begin with the camera-man will start out to take the 6000 school children of Quincy. The Mayor and many important officials of the city will also be taken for the event.

The fire department will be taken in action going to a fire and if possible a fire scene will be shown of a real local event. The police department will also be shown in pictures, as well as many of the principal streets of Quincy.

The picture will also show many of the beautiful residences of well known people in conjunction with many historical events pertaining to the history of the city. Plans are also made to take the Fore River Ship Yard and the granite quarries, as well as thousands of local people. Many of the well known churches will be shown in pictures, as well as public buildings. Manager Black is to be complimented on securing such an event that Quincy will be proud of. The slogan of the picture is a boost for publicity for Quincy and the pictures will be entitled: Quincy in Moving Pictures—Co-operation Makes Quincy Grow—Boost for bigger and greater Quincy.

The Chamber of Commerce will also be taken in the picture and will show to Quincy what a new energetic body can do for the City of Quincy.

A little comedy will also be given, which will add a touch to the amusement side of the picture. Thousands of dollars will be spent in order to secure as good a picture of Quincy as possible.

A ten percent out went into effect at the Fore River shipyard on Monday. The result of the ballot of the employees is unknown.

MRS. ALICE T. ASH

Mrs. Alice T. Ash died at her home in Quincy Feb. 9, after an illness of several weeks. She was born in Weymouth and was a graduate of our High school. Since her marriage she has been a resident of Quincy. She leaves her husband, Dr. John H. Ash, one of the best known physicians of Quincy and seven children to mourn the loss of a devoted wife and mother also her mother, Mrs. Alice M. Keohan; two sisters and a brother of this town. Her only son, Dr. Richard M. Ash of Quincy Point is a World War veteran, having served overseas as a surgeon in the United States Army. Her eldest daughter, Miss Alice T. Ash is a teacher in Quincy. Mrs. Ash was a past chief ranger of St. Ambrose court, M. C. O. F.

Her funeral took place Saturday morning from St. John's church. A solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated by the pastor, Rev. Michael J. Owens, with Rev. John J. Casey as deacon, and Rev. James J. McMorris as sub-deacon. Seated within the sanctuary were Rev. James F. Kelly, pastor of the Church of the Most Blessed Sacrament, Houghs Neck, and Rev. Francis X. Sallaway of St. Mary's, West Quincy. The Gregorian chant was sung by the choir under the direction of John Mahon, Joseph Ecker of Boston sang the Pie Jesu. The burial service of the Forrester was conducted at the grave.

In the mourning assemblage were a number of medical men and delegations from organizations. The floral tributes from societies, relatives and friends were many and beautiful.

S. O. V. AUXILIARY

P. P. Mary Mahoney and Press Cor respondent Jennie L. Keene attended a meeting of the headquarters aids yesterday. There were a large number present.

UNION CHURCH MEN'S CLUB

A largely attended and very interesting meeting was held at the Union Church chapel Wednesday night by the Men's club. An appetizing supper of roast shoulder and all its fixings was served and was greatly enjoyed by some 60 men.

After supper singing by the men and a concert by Charles Latham, the noted Fore River drummer, who gave a solo on the trap drum with its various attachments.

The address of the evening was by John F. Scott, commercial manager of the Telephone Company at Quincy. His talk was illustrated by colored pictures and he gave most interesting history of the Telephone Company from its very beginning to the present time. Its various workings, extent of its operations, which proved very enjoyable and it was voted by the men as one of the most enjoyable evenings held.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE

History repeats itself! It is only natural for the Thomas H. Ince who has given to the screen "Civilization," "The Flame of the Yukon," "Hell's Hinges," "Behind the Door," and a score of other cinema epics, to continue his dynamic energy and original and powerful creative ability.

The clever producer, who is a regular machine gun when it comes to repeating dramatic triumphs, has "gone and done it again," the latest bulls-eye being registered by "Lying Lips," his second special for the Associated Producers, which will be presented at the Alhambra Theatre beginning Thursday, Feb. 24, for a run of three days only.

House Peters, in the co-starred leading role of Blair Cornwall, a young Canadian ranchman, gives one of the most brilliant characterizations of his career, a career punctuated with star roles and triumphant successes. Peters is sincere at all times, equally convincing as the uncouth Canadian and the sophisticated Londoner, and rises to truly impressive dramatic heights.

Florence Vidor, who is firmly established as one of the most beautiful women before the public, demonstrates that she can do considerably more than look beautiful and, in the role of Nance Abbott, a scion of British aristocracy, shares equal honors in the dramatic moments of "Lying Lips."

Joseph Kilgour, in a leading character role, Margaret Livingston, as the jealous little Canadian cousin, Edith York, Margaret Campbell, and several others comprise a practically perfect all-star cast.

For Spring One May Be Suited Or Not

YOUR choice for spring may fall upon a suit—or upon a one-piece frock or a coat dress that lures you away from your old allegiance to skirt and coat. Each is as smart as the other for street wear, as ingeniously designed and as well tailored. It is almost necessary to issue a questionnaire in order to know which is which, for in general outlines they are much alike. There are almost no severely plain models and the demand for decoration has brought out a great deal that is novel and handsome.

In the picture above, both a suit and a coat dress are reproduced, the suit at the left depending on its novel decoration more than anything else to distinguish it. It is made of a dark blue twill and has a plain skirt pulled into a plain band about the bottom. This band is studded with jet cabochons. The straight coat is a little drawn in at the waist line by a cord and finished at the bottom by a band corresponding with that on the skirt. Flaring sleeves and standing collar are notes in the spring modes which this coat repeats and they are both embellished with cabochons which finish their good work by dotting the front with bright points.

The dress at the right is built on chemise lines, of cloth combined with satin in a contrasting color. Four satin-lined panels accent its unbroken lines with the satin glimpsed along their edges. The satin makes also an ample vestee and narrow collar, crossed at the front, and appears again in undersleeves, visible through slashes in the forearm. This touch on the sleeves is something new.

Gems in Sparkling Millinery

NO MATTER what the times may bring to other business, that of the milliner goes merrily forward as Easter draws nearer. A good many concessions may be made to economy for this spring, but what ever else she does—or does without—fair woman simply cannot afford to live without a new spring hat. Last year's suit may be furnished up or last year's frock renovated, but last year's hat is very ancient history.

Millinery shops are beginning to hum with women in quest of spring headwear. Their many convenient mirrors reflect the picturesque and sparkling hats that are to make this a memorable season, on heads that find their charms enhanced by them. There is a shape for every face, and all one has to do is to put the old millinery axiom into practice when a selection is made. "A woman should look better with her hat than without it" is the golden rule for success in choosing a hat.

A group of five hats shown above merits study. It portrays many points in the new styles that are commanding attention, and the first is that hats are medium in size, also that they sparkle with cellophane, that veils and faces must not be overlooked and that flowers and fruits contribute their wonderful colors. Lines are graceful and subtle—each hat must be seen on the head in order to be properly valued.

The turban at the upper left of the group has a sparkling cellophane crown and a coronet that combines satin and cellophane. A very generous sweep of aigrettes attests to the vogue of picturesque millinery. A wide-brimmed black hat of fine straw braid is one of many that are draped with long scarfs of lace and very often their crowns are encircled with flowers. A simpler hat at the lower left is covered with crepe de chine and embroidered with beads. Its companion at the right is a modified poke bonnet covered with silk petals with a cluster of cherries dangling from the side. At the bottom of the group an intricate shape sparkles with black cellophane on a henna silk ground and boasts a richly embroidered silk veil in black for its life companion.

MARKET BASKETS MORE NUMEROUS

Number of Women Carrying Home Food Supplies Have Increased Considerably.

PLAN IS QUITE ECONOMICAL

Housewives Becoming Convinced That Those Who Carry Their Purchases Can Save Money—Free Delivery Misnomer.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Styles change in marketing, too. Fifty years ago few stores delivered any articles. They were in the selling, not in the trucking business, they doubtless would have told anyone who suggested such an idea. But, in time, as the number of stores increased and competition grew keener, some of the merchants, to attract customers to their stores, offered to deliver purchases.

This innovation proved very popular with the public, and soon other stores were forced to adopt the custom. At the start the idea was to deliver articles which could not be carried conveniently by the customers. But as time went on and the public flocked to the stores which delivered packages of any size, practically all merchants fell into line and gave the same service. A yeast cake, a spool of thread, or a handkerchief were some of the articles bought for which a delivery was asked by the unthinking public. The

The popularity of these nonservice stores is due in part to the campaign which has been carried on by many agencies to educate the people to the fact that those who are willing to carry home their purchases can save money. One of the forces at work to cut down the cost of marketing, so the producer can obtain better returns and the consumer pay less than he does for his commodities, is the bureau of markets of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Free Delivery a Misnomer.
This bureau points out that it is an absolute truism that there is no such thing as free delivery. It may be free in the sense that the customer does not make a separate payment for that item, but each delivery costs the merchant a definite sum, and to cover this cost he must put a higher price on his commodities, and the customer pays, though indirectly, for the service.

Market baskets are in style nowadays, and it is one of the wholesome signs of the age that people are breaking away from the idea that a perfect lady or gentleman never carried a package. Now, they are carrying home not only food supplies but other articles as well. Where the cost of delivery has been eliminated from the stores' prices, persons so situated that they can take advantage of the fact and perform their own delivery services can often make appreciable savings.

COWPEAS QUITE GOOD AS MEAT SUBSTITUTE

Possess High Nutritive Value and Pleasing Flavor.

As Peas Are Apt to Ferment They Should Be Placed in a Cool Place While Soaking—Some Most Excellent Recipes.

After a Tour of Markets Hag Been Made.

demand for this sort of service grew greater, and although merchants realized that the cost of their delivery system was getting out of all proportion, there seemed no way of remedying the matter.

Cash-and-Carry Stores.

About ten years ago a group of grocers broke away from the orthodox plan and started what were known as cash-and-carry stores. Prices which were cheaper than those in the regular stores attracted considerable trade, but not until the war upset the world and raised the cost of all commodities did the rank and file throng to these stores. Within recent years another type of store started, called the self-serve, in which the customer waits on himself as well as carries home his purchases.

Cowpeas have a pleasing flavor as well as a high nutritive value. Dried cowpeas used for cooking should be soaked for 12 hours. As they are apt to ferment they should be kept in a cool place during the soaking period.

The following recipes for their use are recommended by the home economics kitchen of the United States Department of Agriculture:

Cream of Cowpea Soup.

1 tablespoonful but- 1 cupful cooked cow-ter. peas (green or 2 cupfuls milk. dried).
1 tablespoonful A few drops onion flour. juice.

Melt the butter, add the flour, and cook thoroughly, being careful not to brown it. Add the milk and bring the mixture to the boiling point. Put the peas through a sieve; add peas and seasonings to the milk and reheat. If too thick, add milk or water. Serve with croutons made by heating buttered bread in the oven until it is brown, and cutting it into small pieces.

Hopping John.

Soak 1 quart of dried cowpeas over night in water enough to cover. Cook until they are tender with one-half pound of salt pork sliced thin; add more water if necessary, and several slices of onion toward the close of the cooking process. Cook a pint of rice in three pints of water, mix the two, season with 2 tablespoonfuls of butter and 2 teaspoonfuls of salt. A beef bone may be used instead of the salt pork, but in that case the salt must be doubled and 4 tablespoonfuls of butter may be added.

Baked Cowpeas and Cheese.

1 tablespoonful but-1 tablespoonful fine-
ter. ly chopped sweet
1 tablespoonful fine- green pepper.
ly chopped onion. 2 cupfuls cooked 1 cupful grated cowpeas.
cheese.

Press the peas through a sieve to remove the skins, and mix with the cheese. Cook the onion and pepper in the butter, being careful not to brown, and add them to the peas and cheese. Form the mixture into a roll, place on a buttered earthenware dish and cook in a moderate oven until brown, basting occasionally with butter and water. Serve hot or cold as a substitute for meat.

For the Spring Sewing-Fest

AFEW weeks before Lent the shop windows blossom out with spring clothes for children, household linens, undermuslins and house dresses, by way of reminding housewives that they must settle down to their annual spring sewing fest. Clothes for every member of the family become the absorbing matter of interest and the shops stand ready to furnish the wherewithal to make them. Their display windows are cheerful with gay spring cottons, checked and plaid gingham, plain chambrays and novelty weaves along with sheer organza and other fine wash fabrics. This season they are showing exceptionally good-looking house dresses, crisp and practical, made of plaid, checked and plain materials. They invite the seamstress to consider what may be done with a few yards of gingham or other wash fabric in the hands of clever designers.

Checked gingham for both grown-ups and children are as sure of a welcome as daffodils, and they are duly on hand in the new displays. Pink and white combinations appear to be favored, followed by lavender and white with other colors answering the roll call in pleasing tones. Then there are plain colored cottons, alone and in combination with white, as shown in the picture, with many attractive plaids and a few stripes.

The noteworthy feature in spring house dresses is not novelty of materials, but cleverness of designs. Many of the plaid gingham are piped with a plain color and plain colors are ingeniously finished with white as in the dress shown at the right of the picture. A plain chambray is used for this model with vestee and collar of white lawn. The short sleeves are ornamented with folds of the lawn and there are deep cuffs made of it in double thickness.

Another chambray is shown at the left, with narrow-tucked panels inserted in the skirt at each side headed by small tabs ornamented with needlework in white. The collar is edged with embroidery and there is a pretty finish of simple needlework on the bodice.

Adding Color to Street Dress

THE blouse has endeared itself to women for many reasons and has been developed in such great variety that the theme is endless. Starting with the tailored blouse of wash materials—the direct descendant of the shirtwaist—it runs through many dainty developments in lingerie blouses of sheer cottons or linen, hand-made or otherwise, that commend themselves because of their perpetual freshness. It is fashioned in styles that give it the flavor of the sport suit, the tailored suit, the separate skirt—for morning or afternoon—and comes through its frequent tubbing as good as new. Blouses of georgette are even more desired, because of the beauty of this fabric and its additional charm of color. And besides these two great favorites, there are blouses of satin, of net, lace and various silks to be reckoned with. Altogether they are a new story all the time.

Two of the simplest designs among those that make up spring displays, as shown in the picture, will interest the woman who undertakes the making of blouses at home. They are intended for wear with suits or skirts and are both washable, fulfilling the mission of the lingerie blouse and adding a color to the sedate street suit or tailored skirt. In each of them a feature of the new designs appears in the obliteration of a girder or belt. Blouses are extended below the waist, in the front at least, and there is a vague definition of the waist line in them, but they are often shaped to form a short sash at the back. The satin blouse at the left of the picture is a slip-over model with a little braid trimming and that at the right is of georgette, having the new three-quarter length, flaring sleeves. An apron panel at the front, displays a bit of embroidery and hemstitching provides the finished, careful workmanship that is the chief asset of blouses for wear with suits.

AUTO ACCIDENT

What came near being a very serious accident happened Tuesday evening on Broad street near Broad Street place, when an auto driven by Earl Higgins of Scituate lost the rear wheel in front of the home of Michael Sheehy and crashed through a fence and turned on its side in the yard of the Misses Griffin. Riding with Mr. Higgins were Miss Helen Kennison of Middle street and Irving Tirrell of Laurel street, who are clerks in the Weymouth Savings bank in Weymouth. Miss Kennison was hurled through the windshield, and received numerous abrasions and a severe cut on the upper lip. Owing to the breaking of the steering wheel, Higgins the driver, was only slightly shaken as likewise was Mr. Tirrell, who sat in the rear seat. The party was picked up by Officer Phillips, who was passing at the time and taken to the residence of Miss Kennison, where Dr. F. L. Doucette was summoned and rendered first aid. The auto was nearly a complete wreck and was removed Wednesday afternoon.

Big Year for Births and Marriages in Weymouth

Town Clerk Merchant reports for the year 1920 that he recorded 292 births, 169 marriages and 217 deaths. A comparison for 15 years is given below:

	Births	Marriages	Deaths
Year 1920	292	169	217
Year 1919	285	177	210
Year 1918	307	151	297
Year 1917	204	134	217
Year 1916	252	136	234
Year 1915	243	143	198
Year 1914	292	147	208
Year 1913	254	147	208
Year 1912	257	150	195
Year 1911	245	118	229
Year 1910	258	115	228
Year 1909	250	120	194
Year 1908	253	117	199
Year 1907	267	118	256
Year 1906	284	129	216

The comparison shows that with one exception there were more births in 1920 than for many years. The same is true with marriages as 1919 and 1920 were away above the average. The number of deaths in 1920 was below many years, less in fact than in 1907, 1910, 1911, 1914, 1916 and 1918.

The Town Clerk gives additional statistics below:
Of the total number of births recorded 292, 144 males and 148 females.

The percentage of the children was as follows: Born in the United States 265; born in foreign countries 198; born in Weymouth, either party, 118. Number of births in each quarter of the year 84, 63, 71, 74.

Of the total number of marriages recorded 169, there were married in Weymouth 101; in other places 68. Either party born in Weymouth 89; born in the United States 185; born in foreign countries 63.

Residents of Weymouth either party 199; of other places 130. First marriage, either party, 306; second marriage, either party, 31; third marriage, either party, 1. Old or groom was 68 and the youngest 18 years of age. Oldest bride was 57 and the youngest 16 years of age.

Number of marriages in each quarter of the year 18, 57, 52, 42.

Of the total number of deaths 208 were males and 109 females. Of the total 91 were born in Weymouth, 83 were born in the United States, 37 were born in foreign countries and 6 were born in places that cannot be learned. Residents of Weymouth but died elsewhere 45; number married 90; widowers 24; widows 33; single 70. The oldest was 97 years plus. Number of deaths in each quarter of the year was 54, 41, 53, 69.

The Village Store At Jackson Square

ABOUT 1850 TO 1860

Across the street from the Bicknell shed where is now the bulletin board of the White church was a two-story building housing the "general store" of Henry Loud on the ground floor, and above was the shoe factory of Albert Humphrey, its owner.

This factory (we called it a shop) was the manufactory of the present day about what an old-time blacksmith shop is to a modern automobile plant. Little was done there beside the cutting of uppers and sole leather, and as the sewing machine was only slowly coming into use, boot and shoe uppers were sewed by hand, mostly by women at their homes, and the bottoming (hand-sewed, pegged or nailed) by individuals or small gangs in the 10x10 shops scattered about the village. Of the few remaining, one may be seen on the premises of Mrs. Jacob Loud of Commercial street, near Union avenue. Mr. Humphrey was burned out a little later and engaged in the leather business in Boston for many years. His residence is now the paragon of the White church.

Henry Loud, who ran the store below, was the son of Ebenezer Loud who lived in the farmhouse nearly opposite Zion Hill chapel. The hill, at that time was known as "Eb Loud's hill." Mr. Loud, then from 40 to 45, was a typical country storekeeper; enterprising, energetic and liked by everyone, and having practically the whole trade of the village. He carried groceries, drygoods, hardware, clothing; West India goods, as sugar, molasses and similar goods were then called; also flour and grain. The few things called that he didn't carry he would get for his customers in Boston. Here we got daily papers, and here, too, was the postoffice, Z. L. Bicknell, postmaster, who was also in the employ of Mr. Loud.

Mr. Bicknell later became prominent in town affairs; one of the Weymouth "War Board" of Selectmen during the Civil War; represented the town in the Legislature and held other town offices; a valued and honored citizen, well remembered by many now living.

With him also at that time were M. E. Hawes, late owner and editor of the Gazette, and Edmond G. (Ned) Bates, a brother-in-law of Mr. Loud's, afterward for many years in the drygoods business on Broad street.

All were popular with us boys. "Ned" especially, as we agreed that he gave the biggest handful of peanuts for a cent. A list of those in Mr. Loud's employ at different times would be of interest. Among them were John A. Raymond, late town clerk; Charles Harrington, George T. Wildes, for many years Holbrook's town clerk, where he still carries on business; Col. B. S. Lovell, Jacob N. L. Bicknell, Leavitt Bates, John W. Bates, Edwin A. Lincoln and Ellery C. Crocker. The last two mentioned and Mr. Wilde are all that are now living. That so many of these became successful business men and honored citizens shows their employer to have been an excellent judge of men, so far as their ability and integrity was concerned.

About 1860 his business having outgrown its quarters Henry Loud, with Z. L. Bicknell and Cyrus Washburn built the building now occupied by the Ford Furniture Co., the first of the line now backing up to the meadow. The lower or basement floor was for groceries and grain; next above on the left front the dry goods; the right front, a drugstore; the postoffice and clothing in the rear. The lodge and banquet rooms of Orphans Hope lodge of Masons occupied the upper floor.

In 1861, the year following the election of Lincoln, the Republican party came into power and Z. L. Bicknell, being a Democrat, he must be removed and a Republican put in his place. Mr. Loud was a Republican, and he applied for the position, received the appointment and Mr. Bicknell continued to conduct the office as before. Very much like, and just as easy, as pulling a stocking off one foot and putting it on the other. Everybody was made happy and the nation was saved.

WEYMOUTH MEN INTERESTED

A number of Weymouth men will take part in the big ceremonial of Abou Ben Adhem Temple, Knights of Khorassan, at Brockton, Washington's birthday. The "playground of Pythianism" is rapidly growing in popularity in this section and it is expected that a large number of tyros will walk the hot sands at this first ceremonial to be held outside of Boston by the temple which now has nearly 800 members. Andrew T. Moore, who has recently become an officer in the organization, Luther S. Files, William H. Gifford, Irving J. Nightingale, John G. Nelson and Thorwald Hanson are among the Weymouth members of the organization.

Free Maintenance Service

Finding some of our consumers are unaware of our maintenance service, we give below a brief outline of this benefit to you.

Without charge, we will adjust or regulate any gas appliance upon request. This includes not only gas lights and gas ranges but also water heaters, room heaters, and in fact any gas burning appliance. In case any new parts are needed, the cost of this material alone will be charged.

Many of our customers have had their lights so long that they are now out of date. In many cases it will be cheaper to buy a new light than try to repair an old one. In order to give our customers an opportunity to secure more modern lights, we will allow 50c for your old light wherever a new light is purchased. Some of our consumers having other means of lighting, have allowed their gas lights to get in a condition where it would be impossible to use them when they are needed. We would like to make a suggestion that these gas lights be put in order and used regularly to insure being ready when needed.

Just explain what you need and it will receive immediate attention.

"TONY, LITTLE TONY!"

Synopsis.—Lonely and friendless, Tonnibel Devon, living on a canal boat with a brutal father and a worn-out, discouraged mother, wanders into a Salvation army hall at Ithaca, N. Y. There she meets a young Salvation army captain, Philip MacCauley. Uriah Devon, Tony's father, announces he has arranged for Tony to marry Reginald Brown, a worthless companion. Mrs. Devon objects, and Uriah beats her. Their quarrel reveals that there is a secret between them in which Tony is the central figure. Tony refuses to marry Reginald and escapes a beating by jumping into the lake. She finds a baby's picture with offer of reward for its delivery to a Doctor Pendlehaven. With the Pendlehavens, a family of wealth, live Mrs. Curtis, a cousin, her daughter and son, Katherine Curtis and Reginald Brown. Katherine is deeply in love with Philip MacCauley. Tonnibel returns the picture to Doctor John, and learns it belongs to his brother, Dr. Paul Pendlehaven. It is a portrait of Doctor Paul's child, stolen in infancy. Doctor John goes with Tony to the canal boat. Mrs. Devon is deeply agitated and makes Tony swear she will never tell of Devon's brutality. The older Devons disappear and Tony again visits the Pendlehavens. She is taken into the house as a companion to Doctor Paul. Philip fights with Reginald and saves Tony. Uriah appears.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued.

"Where's mummy?" she demanded, and again came a sharper "Where's my mother?" Roughly shoving her aside, Uriah walked across the boat deck, his sunken eyes fixed on MacCauley.

"What you mussin' about my boat for, mister?" he demanded. "And what happened to that young feller crawlin' to the beach there?"

"I swung him in the lake," said Philip fiercely. "The pup was—was—" he made a gesture toward Tony as Devon's interruption belched forth: "Was it any of your business what happened to my girl?"

Uriah took another step toward the young captain.

"That's your canoe, ain't it, roped to my dock?" he demanded fiercely. "Well, hop in and get away if you don't want a broken skull!"

Philip sent a flashing glance to the silent, white girl. There was such terror marked on her face that his teeth came together tensely.

"He can't go till my mother comes," she broke out abruptly. "I won't stay if he don't."

Uriah's hand went back to his hip. "I guess he'll go if I tell 'im to," said he. "Just hop into your boat, kid, before I fill you up to your teeth with little bits of hot lead."

Tonnibel had witnessed scenes like this before. She knew but a tiny pressure of her father's finger on the gun he held would kill her sweetheart. "Go along," she managed to get out between her chattering teeth. "I'll be worse for both of us if you don't!"

Devon was forcing Philip backward toward the end of the dock, and by this time Reginald had crawled to the shore and had lain down upon it.

"Don't lag, mister," cried Tony to Philip. "Go along to Ithaca."

MacCauley stepped into his canoe, and Devon sullenly unfastened the rope and threw it into the bow of the craft.

"Don't come back here if you don't want a taste of this," he snapped, touching his gun. "Get out and stay out, mister."

With the end of the revolver he gave the canoe a shove, and Tony saw the paddle dip into the water and the boy move away.

Uriah stood a moment and looked off to the hills. Then locking Tony in the cabin he went to where Reggie lay on the shore and helped him back to the boat.

CHAPTER IX.

The Face in the Window.

By ten o'clock a heavy rain and wind had settled over the Storm Country with such force that the waves were rolling southward like ivory-crested mountains. Once in a while a heavy thud of thunder reverberated over the lake from the north, losing its roar back of the Cornell buildings on the university campus.

Devon's canal boat was following the little tug which was hugging the western shore northward. Tonnibel, in the little room back of the cabin, was searching through the darkness from the small window. But the only thing she could see was the dark bank along which they crept and which once in a while was lit up by a vivid streak of lightning.

Suddenly the engine stopped, and as if she imagined Gussie could help her she gathered her into her arms.

In a vivid streak of lightning she saw they were anchored close to Crowbar point, which protected them somewhat from the wind. She crouched low when the little door opened and Uriah called her name.

"Come out here, Tonnibel," he commanded roughly, and Tony, with Gussie in her arms, crept into the cabin, where Reggie was seated on a bunk, looking pale and sullen.

"Set down on the floor, brat," commanded Uriah, and Tonnibel dropped down. "Now listen to me, Tony," went on Devon. "Ever since you've been knee high to a grasshopper you been as mean as the devil. You always got in behind Ede when she was here, but now there ain't no skirts to shove me off. You hear?"

Every vestige of blood left the wan young face.

"Where is mummy?" she said, lifting imploring eyes to his.

"Dead," said Devon brutally, "as dead as a door nail. Here, my lady, if you holler I'll rap you one on the gob."

"Dead!" cried Tonnibel. "Pop, you're lying to me—I know you are!"

"Have it your own way, kid," replied Uriah, with an insolent laugh, "but one thing's sure—Ede ain't here to buck against me now. What I want to get into your thick noodle is you're goin' to get married as soon as we get to Auburn. See?"

The girl's eyes remained centered on his face, horror deep seated in their gray depths.

"Here's Reggie wantin' to marry you," continued Devon, with a wide wave at the limp young man. "And when I say you've got to I mean it."

"I won't," fell from Tony's lips, but the awful expression on her face didn't change nor did she drop her eyes.

Devon took a quick step toward her, with an upraised arm, and as he had beaten his wife so he laid the blows about the girl's head and shoulders. The pig fell from Tony's arms in her desperate efforts to protect herself.

"Oh, daddy, don't, don't, any more!" she screamed.

Reggie Brown was watching the brutal scene dully as if it interested him but little. At the girl's fearful plea Devon stepped back and glared at her.

"Will you do what I bid you, miss?" he demanded hoarsely. "I'd as soon kill you as take a wink."

Tonnibel made no answer save to weep more wildly, and, because she did not make ready reply, Uriah struck her again. Then suddenly Reginald stood up.

"Don't hit 'er any more, Dev," he drawled. "Shut 'er up a while and keep 'er without grub, and she'll come to time. Give 'er a night to think it over. God, but you've walloped her black and blue as 'tis."

In answer to this Devon picked Tony up and threw her into the back cabin. Then he kicked Gussie over the threshold, slammed the door and locked it.

Philip MacCauley had paddled away from the Dirty Mary with a dull, sick fear for the girl he had had to leave behind. To fight single-handed a drunken man with a gun was foolhardy and would do little Tony no good.

When he reached the corner of the lake he ran his craft ashore and sat for a long time thinking. Suddenly he saw through the dusk that the canal boat had left its moorings and was moving slowly northward in the teeth of the rising wind. With an ejaculation he shoved off and was out in the boiling surf. Wherever that boat went he decided to go, too.

As he paddled carefully along, he could see the shadows of two men in the glimmer of the little light in the small pilot house. Then Reggie was there with Devon, but where was Tony?

One small window in the canal boat gave forth a dim light. He felt within him that she was there where that light was, alone and suffering. What had she thought of his allowing himself to be forced away from her when she needed him most? His teeth came together sharply. He was no coward, this Philip MacCauley, this captain of the Salvation army.

Suddenly he caught sight of a passing shadow in the cabin, and his heart leapt up within him. 'Twas the shadow of a girl walking up and down. Grimly his teeth set into his under lip and with one deep thrust of the paddle into the water, he sent the canoe headlong toward the canal boat. Then it was that a girl's face came to the window.

The canoe almost crashed against the side of the bigger boat as it came alongside of it, and Philip caught at it desperately. Slowly lifting himself up he thrust his face close to Tony's. She was staring at him blankly as if his ghost had suddenly risen out of the storm-tossed lake.

"Don't do that, darling," he whispered as she drew back in terror. "I'm going to take you away."

Then she realized who it was, and reached out and clutched at him, breathlessly.

"Climb through," undertoned Philip. "Quick, climb through, and when I tell you to drop, do it, but not before."

By holding his body rigidly erect, he managed to keep the canoe upright. Then he waited, but not for long. Almost immediately a girl's bare arm shot through the window. Something wriggled in her clutching fingers. Philip almost lost his hold on the boat as Gussie came against his face. He snatched the pig and dropped it at his feet. Then a pair of bare legs followed and Tony's body began to wriggle through the narrow aperture.

Once or twice Philip muttered an ejaculation as a streak of lightning crossed the sky only to die and leave the water as dark as before. It was taking the girl an interminable time to squeeze herself through that opening. Suddenly her shoulders were through, and she was hanging on by her hands.

Just at that moment the tug ahead became silent, and Philip heard the two men walking back along its roof. They were coming aboard the canal boat, and if—He crushed the canoe nearer, lifted one hand and jerked the hanging figure of the girl away from the window. She flopped face downward into the bottom of the canoe, and Philip left her there limp without a word. Then he let go his hold of the canal boat, and a great wave lifted his slender craft upon its crest and they shot away toward the bank.

It took a shorter time than it takes to tell it for the canoe to reach the shore. Under the overhanging trees where they were shielded from the wind, Philip turned and looked back. A man's face was thrust through the window which had just yielded up the quiet little figure at his feet. Then two forms appeared upon the stern deck. From the hand of one of the men hung a lantern. Philip remained very still. He knew they could not see him hidden away there in the darkness.

For a long time, through which Tonnibel never moved, Philip waited. The men on the canal boat seemed filled with terror. They ran from one end of it to the other. He heard them calling to and fro, and once in a while an oath escaped from Devon as he screamed his daughter's name loudly.

It was not until he saw one of them climb upon the tug and heard the sudden clang of the engine that the boy took up his paddle and moved slowly along the shore southward, and, as he was going with the wind, Philip made rapid progress toward the head of the lake.

In a little cove he drew the canoe to the shore and, springing out, dragged it its length from the water.

Then he called softly: "Tony—little Tony."

The girl stirred and lifted her head. "Yep," she sighed. "I'm here."

"Come out," said Philip, leaning over and taking hold of her arm. "There! Child, don't shake so. You're safe here with me, and I suppose they think you're drowned by this time. Can't you step out, dear?"

She was trembling, so he had to pick her up and lift her out in his arms. Then he carried her under an overhanging rock and placed her on the sand.

Through many sobs and tears, she told him all that had happened on the canal boat, and that her father had said her mother was dead. And so touched was Philip MacCauley, he felt the tears rim his own lashes. For a long time, in fact until the rain ceased to beat upon the rocks and shore, they stayed under cover. Most of the time they were silent, most of the time Philip held the curly head against his breast. When the dawn began to break Tonnibel roused herself.

"I'm goin' away now," she said. "I've got to go to my friends. And I can't tell you just how much I'm thankful you."

"But if I let you go," protested Philip, "I'll never see you again. Oh, don't do that. Tony, I couldn't stand it now!"

"I couldn't, either," she said under her breath. "I'll be comin' back here to this hole some day."

"I can't tell. Please don't ask me."

Appreciation.

"Has your wife a sense of humor?" "I think so," replied Mr. Meekton. "The funnier a gown looks the more she is willing to pay for it."

THE GUEST'S STORY.

"When I was out walking along the road this morning," said Mrs. Get-the-Most-Out-of-Life to the girl and boy who were going adventuring, "I said to myself:

"Shall I hurry to the village and get some meat for tomorrow? And then I decided I wouldn't. For we don't need meat for tomorrow, and it would be wasted; whereas, with other things it's different, as you know."

The boy and girl nodded their heads, though they didn't know much about food and which kind was more easily wasted than another. They knew about food mostly in a more pleasurable than housekeeping fashion.

"So I thought," continued Mrs. Get-the-Most-Out-of-Life, "that I would take a walk and see something new, perhaps. One doesn't always want everything the same. And then I saw Mrs. Wood Elf, here, having a breakfast party, and I stayed around when I heard her tell you that I was coming to explain something."

"She did say that, I believe, and she knew that I'd be glad to tell you why sometimes you can take your time and not miss anything, but rather, gain a lot."

"I'm Mrs. Wood Elf's guest, and the guest is going to tell her story."

"May I Have a Drink?"

"You see," Mrs. Get-the-Most-Out-of-Life continued, "I was a little timid at first. That is why I talked first to Mrs. Wood Elf—did you hear me? I'm sure you did. I do hope you don't think I was rude."

"Oh, no," said the girl. "We are glad to meet you," said the boy, "for we want to meet everyone we can."

"I'll tell you a little family history," said Mrs. Get-the-Most-Out-of-Life. "By the way, Mrs. Wood Elf, may I have a drink of water? Have you any dew water left?"

"Just a little. I'll get it for you," said Mrs. Wood Elf.

"I hope," said Mrs. Get-the-Most-Out-of-Life, "that you won't mind a little history. There is nothing in it about kings or queens, and there are no dates to be remembered. It's a very delightful history."

"It sounds rather nice," said the girl.

"And like a quite new kind," said the boy.

"I was afraid that you wouldn't like my name. I was afraid it sounded a bit too preachy and fine—just as though I were going around and saying that I was such a splendid woman, I did everything the right way, and so got everything that was useful and beautiful and good."

"Well, that isn't what I mean you to think of me. I am named after my mother and father. My father greatly admired my mother and wanted me to be named after her. My mother admired my father and wanted me to be named after him. So they just named me after both of them."

"What were the names?" asked the boy.

"My father's name was Hurry and my mother's name was Take-Your-Time."

"But your name isn't made up of those names," said the girl.

"Oh, yes it is. You see, my father was always hurrying. He was a great creature for bustling and rushing and doing so much in such a short time."

"My mother, on the other hand, always took her time. She did things very carefully and very well and very thoroughly."

"My father did things very brilliantly and quickly, though sometimes they were done in rather a slap-dash fashion and sometimes my mother's ways were too slow."

"But my mother thought my father's quick, brilliant ways were wonderful, and my father thought my mother's careful, thorough ways were greatly to be envied."

"So I was named after both of them. And now I live up to my name. You see, in our family we're all like our names. It was the same with my grandfather—the oldest grandfather anyone has."

"Grandfather Time?" asked the boy.

"Right," said Mrs. Get-the-Most-Out-of-Life. "I take after both my parents. I don't want to hurry so fast that I miss everything I pass by. So I hurry and yet not so fast as to keep from enjoying things. I'm not conceited to say this as it is all because of my wonderful father and mother."

"They gave me these combined gifts!"

EXPERIMENTS IN MAGNETISM.

Iron and steel are the principal substances attracted by magnets, and for experimental work we will use tacks, brads and needles. By dipping the ends of the magnet (termed North Pole and South Pole) into a pile of tacks or brads, a bunch will adhere to the poles (Fig. 1).

A bar magnet, or straight magnet, can be made of a needle by drawing it several times across the pole of a magnet as shown in Fig. 2. Draw the needle one way only, from end to end, and in returning raise the needle about an inch above the pole (see dotted lines). You will find that the needle has now become a magnet, with a pole at each end (Fig. 3). Try the horseshoe-magnet upon the needle ends. You will discover that like poles repel each other and unlike poles attract each other.

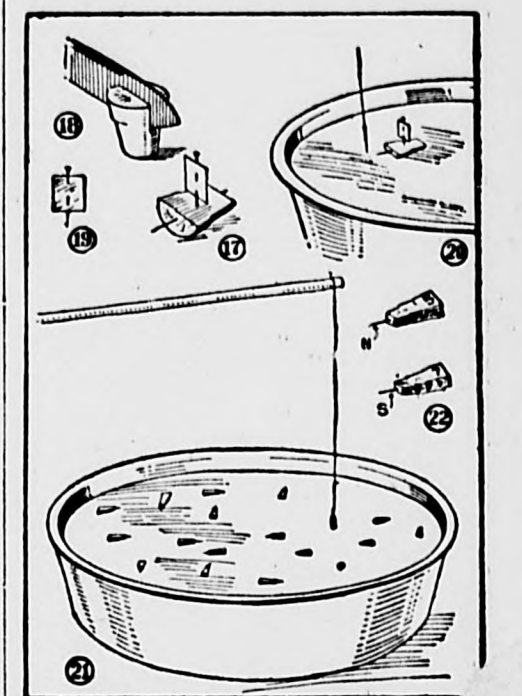

Magnetize two needles, stick the north pole of one, and the south pole of the other, into a cork (Fig. 6), and a small horseshoe-magnet will be formed. Split open a pencil, remove a piece of its lead at the point (Fig. 7), fasten a magnetized needle in its corks (Fig. 18), with paper sails and pin masts (Fig. 19), and run a magnetized needle from end to end, through bow and stern. Then with a magnetized needle you can make your fleet go through all sorts of maneuvers.

The game of magnetic fish-pond is lots of fun for two players (Fig. 21). Make two dozen fish of small pieces of cork, with a short length of a magnetized needle stuck in one end of each (Fig. 22), half with north poles projecting, the other half with south poles projecting. Number each set of fish from 1 to 12. Then prepare two fishing-poles, each with a thread line and a magnetized-needle hook—one hook north pole, the other a south pole. With this arrangement each boy hook only his own fish. The player who first catches fish that score a total of 50 points is winner.

PAPER TUBE TOYS.

With newspaper or lightweight wrapping paper, and a bottle of paste, at hand, it requires only a few minutes to make the building tubes, and when the paste has dried, you will find them as strong as small sticks. Fig. 1 shows how to roll a tube, over a pencil. Enough of the surface should be left dry to wrap once around the pencil; coat the rest of the surface with paste, and finish rolling up the tube.

Fig. 2 shows how the joint connections are made with paper strips. Passe partout paper will answer excellently. Lacking gummed paper, coat strips of paper with paste, as needed. Lap the strips around the members to be joined, as shown, and press tightly against the surfaces until they adhere.

Fig. 3 shows a simple design for a chair. First construct the chair back, as shown in Fig. 4. After cutting back legs, and the cross rails, strap together with the paper strips. Then cut a piece of cardboard for the center panel, and fasten it to the rails. For the chair seat (Fig. 5), first cut a square of cardboard of the right size for the center, then cut the edge strips to fit its edges, and bind to the cardboard as shown. Next, cut the pair of front legs, and strap them to the front corners of the seat. Then strap the seat to the chair back.

For the long table (Fig. 6), construct a pair of end frames similar to that shown in Fig. 7; connect the bottom rails with a shelf made of a narrow strip of cardboard; make the table top of a piece of cardboard, and strap to the top crosspieces of the end frames.

The pedestal table (Fig. 8) has a circular piece of cardboard for its top, and the pedestal is made of one center tube, with eight shorter tubes arranged around the sides in the formation shown—four tubes a trifle less than one-half of the length of the center tube, and four tubes one-half the length of these four. Strap together the tubes securely.

Build the head and foot of the bed (Fig. 9) like the end frames of the table (Fig. 7). Then set in three vertical bars between the corner posts, connect head and back with a pair of side rails, and to the top of the rails glue a piece of cardboard.

The paper-tube log-cabin (Fig. 10) is started by crossing four tubes, with ends projecting (Fig. 11). At the point where the door is located, paste two narrow strips of paper. Then lay up the tiers of logs upon this foundation framework, gluing the ends of each log to the ends they cross, and placing the tubes slightly so the logs will fit closer together. Wrap the paper strips around the ends of the logs, at the doorway, also around the ends at the window opening.

Town Clerk's Notice

— TO —

Physicians, Midwives and Parents

Birth Returns

Town Clerk's Office,
Weymouth, Feb. 1, 1921.
Attention is called to the following law in relation of births which was passed by the legislature of 1912.
CLAYTON B. MERCHANT,
Town Clerk.

[CHAP. 280, ACTS OF 1912]
AN ACT RELATIVE TO REPORTS AND RECORDS OF BIRTHS

Be it enacted, etc., as follows:
Section 1. Physicians and midwives shall, within forty-eight hours after the birth of every child in cases of which they were in charge, mail or deliver to the clerk or register of the city or town in which the birth occurred, a notice stating the date and place of the birth, giving the street and number, if any, the number of a ward in a city and the family name. Failure to mail or deliver the said notice shall be punished by a fine not exceeding twenty-five dollars for each offense. The notice required by this section need not be given if the notice required by the following section is given within forty-eight hours after the birth occurs.

Section 2. Physicians and midwives shall make and keep a record of the birth of every child in cases of which they are in charge and shall within fifteen days after the birth; mail or deliver to the clerk or register of the city or town in which the birth occurred, a report of the birth stating the date and place, the name, if any, of the child, its sex and color, and the names, ages, places of birth, occupations and residence of the parents, giving the street number, if there be any and the name of the ward in a city, the name of the physician or midwife attending the birth. If the facts relating to the birth are not stated except in a writing of both the physician or midwife and the mother, the record to be kept by the physician or midwife, as above provided, shall also contain the facts required to be reported to the town clerk.

Section 3. The physician or midwife shall be twenty-five cents for each report, which shall be paid to the city or town where the report is made upon presentation to the town treasurer of a certificate of the city or town clerk that the said birth has been reported to him. The report required by this section shall be made by the physician or midwife, as above provided, if made within forty-eight hours of the birth, the report required by the preceding section shall not be required.

A physician or midwife who neglects to make and keep the record hereby required, or who neglects to report in the manner specified above, each birth within fifteen days thereafter shall for each offense forfeit a sum not exceeding twenty-five dollars. The city or town clerk or register shall file daily with the local board of health a list of all births reported to him giving the following facts: date of birth, sex, color, family name, residence, ward, physician or midwife.

Section 3. Section three of chapter twenty-nine of the Revised Laws, as amended by chapter ninetythree of the acts of the year nineteen hundred and ten is hereby repealed.

RUMOR HAS IT

That some of the new women voters wanted to be heard before the Appropriation Committee on some of the articles in the warrant for Annual Town Meeting.

That they desired to have articles in the warrant, but were too late.

That they cannot understand why the warrant is closed in January.

That others are wondering the same thing.

That more than half the voters have not had an opportunity to read the warrant yet.

That the town meeting in Rockland will be held March 7, but the warrant will not close until Feb. 21.

That the women would like to run a candidate for Selectman.

That there would be more publicity with women on the board.

That the Republican Town Commission has a new chairman and a new secretary.

That the women are also organized that the Quincy Theatre seems to think Weymouth is interested in boosting Quincy.

That the management is showing the local movie houses how to advertise.

That many will go to Quincy to see the pictures of the City of Presidents.

That they will also want to see Eddie Polo in "The King of the Circus" at the Odd Fellows Opera House,

"The Silver Horde" at the New Orpheum and the good shows at the Bates Opera House and the Fogg
Opera House.

That Braintree is having another kind of publicity.

That it is getting unsafe there for women, either outdoors or indoors.

That it is about time some of the ruffians were rounded up.

That a large number have been drawn as jurors for the trial of the alleged South Braintree bandits.

That South Braintree had another shooting Sunday night and a big fire
Saturday night.

That sometimes it is a good thing to be near Quincy.

That Braintree secured "valuable" assistance from the Quincy fire department Saturday night.

That the town is now talking the necessity of purchasing a pumping engine.

That Weymouth should also have one.

That one man experimented with the formulas for waterproofing shoes as suggested in the Gazette and Transcript last week.

That during the snow and slush it was a good time to make the test.

That one must have a good shoe to start with.

That the formulas work admirably and rubbers will not be needed.

That automobile operators are getting some good points from the auto department on page 3 of the Gazette and Transcript.

That there is good variety in the 16-page Gazette.

NO. 8091 Commonwealth of Massachusetts LAND COURT

To the Edison Electric Illuminating Company, a duly existing corporation having an usual place of business in Boston, in the County of Suffolk and said Commonwealth; Emma Alexanderson of Weymouth, in the County of Norfolk and said Commonwealth;
Cynthia Bates and Ann Weston, now or formerly of said Weymouth, or their heirs, devisees or legal representatives; and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Harold Brooks of said Weymouth, to register and confirm his title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situate in said Weymouth, bounded and described as follows:
Southwesterly by Bridge street five hundred thirty three and 70/100
(533.70) feet; Northwesterly by land of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company; Northerly by extreme low water mark in Weymouth Fore River; and Southeasterly by land of said
Edison Electric Illuminating Company, formerly of Emma Alexander-son.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition and all boundary lines are claimed to be location on the ground as shown on said plan.

You are hereby cited to appear at the Land Court to be held at Boston, in the County of Suffolk, on the seventh day of March, A. D. 1921, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be recorded, and the said petition will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition, or any decree entered thereon.

NORFOLK CLUB BOWLING

Monday morning only two of the teams in the Boston Pin tournament of the Norfolk Club had won more than 50 percent. Last week Capt. Brackett's team wrestled the lead from Capt. Lord's team, and the standing Monday morning was:

Teams	Won	Lost	Pinfall
7-A. E. Brackett	14	2	5697
5-F. E. Lord	13	3	5789
3-P. Wolfe	8	8	5427
2-A. M. Blanchard	7	9	5489
3-H. D. Baker	6	6	3979
4-F. C. Stone	5	11	5361
1-W. Philbrick	4	12	5264
6-S. W. Robinson	3	9	3997

The daily results last week were:

Monday, Feb. 7, Team 1 rolled Team 6. S. W. Robinson led with a high single 118 and 3-string total 324. Team 6 took three points and Team 1 took one point, the total being 132 to 1270.

Tuesday, Feb. 8, Team 2 rolled Team 5. E. O. Veazie was high man with a single 124 and 3-string total 324. Team 5 took three points and Team 2 took one point, the totals being 1494 to 1391.

Wednesday, Feb. 9, Team 4 rolled Team 7. F. C. Stone was high man with a single string 119. A. E. Brackett rolled highest 3-string total 318. Team 7 took all the points, rolling 1436 to 1325.

Thursday, Feb. 10, Team 3 rolled Team 8. H. D. Baker was high man with a single 122 to 3-string total 328. Team 3 took three points and Team 8 took one point, the totals being 1218 to 1302.

See South Weymouth Briefs for scores this week.

BASKETBALL

The Clapp Memorial Association five went to North Easton on Monday evening and suffered defeat 20 to 11. None of the visitors scored more than two goals.

BRAINTREE FIRE

Braintree had a disastrous fire on Saturday night which destroyed five large buildings at the plant of the Monaquot Rubber Company at South Braintree. But for timely aid from Quincy some of the other four buildings would have been destroyed. Considerable new machinery had recently been installed and the loss was over $100,000. Firemen were at work all night and the greater part of Sunday.

QUINCY 40, WEYMOUTH 37

At the C. M. A. gym last Saturday evening it required an extra period to decide the basketball match of Quincy High and Weymouth High, and the former won 40 to 37, the visitors securing twice as many points as the home team in the extra period.

Fouls were numerous on both teams. Coffey secured most of the goals for Weymouth. On the home team were Dwyer, Fitzgerald, Proctor, Coffey and Gunville, with Rand as a substitute for Fitzgerald.

POSTOFFICE SERVICE

Many of the merchants and others doing business with the Weymouth postoffice have recently received from Supt. Joseph G. Bailey letters similar to the following:

"It is our desire to make the Postal Service as efficient as possible. If your experience with this office recalls any improvement which we can make, I would thank you if you would communicate with me, either orally or by letter, stating in what manner you would be better served. Any helpful suggestion will be thankfully received, and referred to the Postmaster at Boston, with a view to its adoption, as Mr. Baker is very anxious to improve the service."

Many improvements have been made in the Weymouth service since Supt. Bailey assumed the position, including additional help. Few realize that the Weymouth postoffice district is about six miles by two miles and that the letter carriers are required to travel each day on foot from 12 to 18 miles. There are two deliveries each day, one carrier walking as far as Essex street near Weymouth Heights, and another south on Washington and Front streets.

Of course expense is an item, and everything desired cannot be obtained, but nevertheless Supt. Bailey wants suggestions as to delays, hours of delivery, the mail schedule etc.

—A holiday next Tuesday, Washington's Birthday.

TOWN WARRANTS

Editor Gazette-Transcript: I, and many of the citizens agree with you; that all Town Warrants should be printed in the Weymouth paper (or papers, if there are any more). The last special, accidental, someone mentioned to me on my way home from Boston. Others I have met since who said they knew nothing about it.

I hope at our next town meeting that the Selectmen will be instructed to have the warrants printed in the local paper before each meeting.

It is not now like the old days, when all the men around met in the "corner grocery store" and saw and talked over the town warrant.

And while I am on this subject, let me say that the Appropriation Committee notify only the ones who have Articles in the warrant, who are interested parties, and who will undoubtedly give good reason why their wants should be granted, with no chance for the opponents to rebut their arguments. I feel like apologizing to the committee for this criticism, knowing full well the thankless job of the faithful members of that committee. I know some few always have to do the work. Others appear only when they have some local needs to boost; at least that was the way it was for the many years I was on that committee.

Now a word as to our Planning Committee (if we have any). From that committee great things were expected, but alas so far as Weymouth is concerned, they are dead to the world. They allow speculators to come in and buy up our cheap land and cut it up in small lots to city people who want to get away from the crowded city conditions. While the land is open they don't see they are getting into a worse condition; all the city disadvantages, with none of the advantages. See what the town is facing in the near future in the way of sewage and health in these crowded localities, when these speculators will have folded their tents and departed. I am not opposed to the proper developer, rather I would welcome him. But in their cheap back lands they should never be allowed to cut them up in less than one-fourth acre. If we have it, and we should, if we can get it, and we should, around our fresh water ponds, and salt water also, reservations preventing polluting these waters should be insisted on. Planning is not for the day, but for years to come.

Another thing, in a busy community like East Weymouth, if we have not a Planning Committee who will act, is there any public spirit in the village which year after year will put up with the conditions that exist between Weymouth Center and Madison street, without raising their voices, insisting on the widening of Broad street, between these points, in order to make it fairly safe for man and beast travelling that section of street.

Another suggestion: the Clapp Memorial Field will be more and more in use as years roll by, and there is not now near enough room for the auto, coming to the field entertainment. It would be better to provide now whilst it can be done with little cost, by taking a strip 15 or 20 feet wide inside the sidewalk on the north side of the street. The town owns part of the street. I own about 250 feet of the town can have for the filling in, and the rest they should procure, I think at once.

Thank you, Mr. Editor, for the space.

POLL LIST OF WOMEN

Under the newly revised State Laws, the assessors of towns are required to make true lists of every woman in the town 20 years of age or older. The name, street address, age and occupation. This is in addition to the list of men assessed, which has been the law for some years.

Women are asked to help the assessors by being ready to answer the questions propounded by the assessor when he calls, in order that the work may be accomplished with promptness. The listing will be made in a few weeks.

Sec. 4 of Chapter 51—The assessors, assistant assessors, or one or more of them, shall annually, in April or May visit every building in their respective cities or towns and, after diligent inquiry, shall make true lists containing, as nearly as they can ascertain, the name, age, occupation, and residence on April 1 in the current year, and the residence on April 1 in the preceding year, of every male person 20 years of age or older, residing in their respective cities and towns, liable to be assessed for a poll tax, and of soldiers and sailors exempted from the payment of a poll tax under section 5 of chapter 59; and except in Boston, Cambridge, Chelsea and Watertown, shall also make true lists containing the same facts relative to every woman 20 years of age or older residing in their respective cities and towns.

Sec. 6—The assessors of cities, except Boston, Cambridge and Chelsea, on or before June 15, in each year, and the assessors in towns having over 5000 inhabitants, according to the latest national or state census, except Watertown, shall, on or before July 1 in each year, prepare street lists containing the names of all persons listed by them under section 4.

TOWN BRIEFS

—When the dark clouds came up Monday afternoon many had dread of a tornado like the one at South Weymouth in 1920.

—Sunrise today at 6:37; sunset 5:21.

—Antonio Dasterio of South Braintree, who was shot Sunday night while walking on Pond street, died early the next morning. The police are searching for Rocco Regillo.

—Brocton coal dealers were grilled for four hours at the State House on Monday relative to their charges for coal.

Sibley Writes of Weymouth Post, A. L.

An interesting series of articles, which treats a single post of the American Legion each day, is being printed in the Boston Globe, written by Frank P. Sibley. One day this week was devoted to the Weymouth Post, with pictures of Commander Leonard and Adjutant Santacrose, and is reproduced below:

"No finer tribute was paid to any man in the A. E. F. than when his buddies hailed him habitually as 'Wop!' or 'Jew!'" It meant that he was accepted as one of them.

"The Italians and Poles and Jewish boys who formed actual 'foreign legions' in the hearts of various regiments of the American forces attending to the rest of the record, writing their names high on the lists of men decorated for valor, and often giving wonderful lessons in Americanism to native-born Yankees.

"Lucky the post that has a large element of foreign blood in it. The Italians especially make fine comrades. Lucky is Weymouth Post No. 79 on this very count; led by Louis A. Cipullo, a fine band of 24 pieces, practically all Italians, has sprung into existence. Mr. Cipullo played with the Headquarters Band of the 303d Infantry in France, and is a fine musician, besides being a fine soldier. One of his brothers, Ralph Cipullo, also a member of the Post, is a member of the Boston Globe staff.

"The adjutant of the post, Pasquale Santacrose, is an Italian. He is the only adjutant the post has had since the beginning. He was in K Company of the 302d Infantry in the 76th Division when he first enlisted, and because of his clerical ability he became company clerk. He became a sergeant while in France and then, when the regiment was broken up, was assigned to Brest base headquarters, under Maj. Gen. Helmick, and was on the work of preparation for sending the troops home.

"Santacrose had a pretty experience. He got 17 days leave in February, 1919, and used it to go to Italy and to the little village of Calazzo, near Caserta. The village was the home of Santacrose's family before they came to the United States and he found his grandmother still living there. He was the first American soldier the inhabitants had ever seen and he was made royally welcome.

"He saw Rome and Naples before he came back to his duty. He also found when he got back to the States that Blah & Stearns, the wool firm for which he worked, had held his job open for him—another experience which was all too rare to the returning soldiers.

"Santacrose, a member of Giuseppe Verdi lodge, Sons of Italy, and of Weymouth council, Knights of Columbus.

"Weymouth Post has shown dislike of changing its officers. It has had only one adjutant, only two commanders. The first one, William A. Connell, was the man principally responsible for getting the boys together to form the post. He was chairman of the organization meeting, June 27, 1919, and a week later was elected commander.

"He was a 76th Division man, later transferred to M Company of the 61st Infantry, in the 5th Division. They went across in April, 1918, a first saw the line away up in the Vosges sector.

"Connell was seen at once to be officer material; he had his sergeant's stripes. He was sent to school at Langres, was commissioned and sent to the 3d Division, where he was put into H Company of the 30th Infantry, taking the command.

"His company was in the line just to the left of Montfaucon in the Argonne, and there Lieut. Connell found a machine gun bullet with his name on it. In the morning attack of Oct. 11. He got it in the shoulder; was in hospital a month, rejoined his outfit in Luxembourg, and hiked to the Rhine, where he stayed on bridge-head service four months. He is manager of a grocery in Weymouth.

"Bryan Leonard, present commander of Weymouth Post, enlisted in B Battery of the old 2d Mass. Field Artillery, which later became F. Battery of the 102d Artillery. He became a sergeant in the outfit. While in training in France Mr. Leonard was hurt. He never got out of the hospital until May, 1918, and was then transferred to the Gas Service. He was first sergeant for the group of Advanced Gas Dumps operating in the St. Mihiel sector for the 1st Gas Regiment. This work kept him right up to Armistice Day.

"He started for home in January, 1919. He had been well known as an athlete in the Weymouth High school, Thayer Academy and the Lowell Textile school. He is now superintendent of a wool scouring plant at East Weymouth.

"The post has four women members, one of them, Kathryn Bowles Howley, is historian of the post. Asked her present occupation, she said: 'Mortal's greatest job—mothering J. Walter Howley Jr.' She was chief yeoman (P) in the Naval Overseas Transport Service.

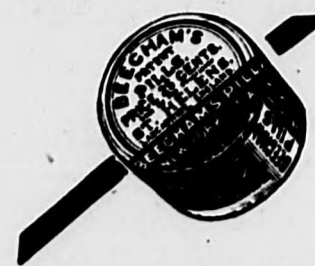

"George Herbert Rand, who wrote 'The Marquis Dilemma', a show that was produced in camps all over France is a member of Weymouth Post. He is now with a Western newspaper.

"Myron G. Bettencourt, who was injured when the Mt. Vernon was torpedoed, is also a member. So are Drs. Somers and Archie Fraser, major and captain, and of the 'fighting' Frasers. They are both former Harvard football and hockey players and were both attached to Base Hospital 7 in France. They are now practicing in Boston.

"Basil S. Warren, chaplain of the post, was the runner-up in wrestling for the Olympic team; the man chosen was a man he had thrown.

"Ralph Talbot, a Weymouth boy who was killed in the aviation, has been awarded posthumously the Navy Medal of Honor. He was a schoolmate of Connie Condrick, the sergeant-at-arms of the post, who saw him when he was falling. Condrick was 19 when he went into the service to go to the Mexican border. He is now a pitcher and has just signed up with Augusta, Ga.

"The post has 465 members out of the 700 boys who went to war from Weymouth. It meets in G. A. R. hall, the older veterans having shown an immense interest in the younger boys. Maj. Bicknell, invincible the legion officers to G. A. R. affairs, has said: 'Our hearts are big enough to include you all. If our rooms are not.'

The Girl in the Car

By LULU LANGDON

(© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Harkins hurried out of the office building, found his car in the customary spot, disconnected the locking device with his key, and in a moment was threading his way among the north-bound vehicles; out on the Parkway he speeded, for the night was cold and clear, and the tang of early autumn was in the air.

In Westchester, a cozy bachelor dinner awaited him, then an easy chair, a pipe and book by the log fire. Why marry? he asked himself doubtfully, as he swung around a curve into a lonely stretch of road.

Something cold and hard touched his right ear. He did not move his head. He knew that some one was holding a gun. "What do you want?" he called back.

"Stop!" It was a soft feminine voice, but very firm.

"The female of the species?" he ejaculated, bringing the car to an abrupt stop.

"Turn around and drive back to 220 Broadway," commanded the voice. "On the way!" called Harkins cheerily. "Anything else, ma'am?"

No answer, but the something cold and hard still irritated his ear. He hoped she knew what she was about—he didn't; but he obediently swung the car about and headed for his office. He had a great respect for firearms; he had served in France and he knew how short tempered a gun could be. At Columbus Circle he stopped.

"I'm going to look around," he announced.

The gun left his ear, but when he stiffly turned his aching neck he found "Turn Around and Drive Back."

the rear of the car in shadow and only the gleam of the still menacing weapon.

"Miss Hold-Up, put down that gun or I shall call a policeman," he threatened.

"You? Call an officer?" She was contemptuous. "Drive on, please, before I turn you over to the police for stealing my car."

"Your car?" he blurted, but the policeman's whistle ordered them to move with the traffic. "Your car?" he repeated over his shoulder.

"Certainly, or my father's car. You are very daring—but please go back to 220 Broadway."

In amazed silence he did drive back to the office building, but it was dark and deserted save for scattered lights. "What shall I do now?" he asked patiently.

There was a silence, then in a wavering voice she answered helplessly. "I don't know! I never arrested a man before!"

"Neither have I," he confessed, "but perhaps this officer on the corner can straighten things out."

Patrolman Ditty listened to their tales. The girl spoke in a low, cultivated voice, saying that she had driven the car downtown that afternoon to her father's office, had locked it with the safety device and taken the elevator to his private office. Finding him in conference with a client she had gone back to the car, settled herself in the tonneau and in the gloom of the raised top had napped a little. "I woke up out on the Parkway," she ended, "and so I groped and found the place where my father keeps his pistol—and I made the thief turn and drive back here."

"See your license, miss," growled the officer.

She produced it and also repeated the car number.

The officer poked around the machine with a searchlight. "Wrong dope on that miss," he came back to report. "This is the same make but a different number. Now, young fellow," he growled at Harkins.

"Something funny about this?" he decided presently. "Think I'll lock you up, young man." He took the girl's name and address, put her in a taxi-cab and then commanded Harkins to drive to the police station.

"Why did you let the girl go?" asked Harkins, peevishly. "She had my car."

"She's J. B. Porter's daughter—she's all right."

Harkins slid down in his seat and smiled feebly. "Show me how to get to Mulberry street," he said humbly.

At the station house he was permitted to use a telephone.

"Nervy guy," muttered Patrolman

Ditty, as he went back to his beat, after making his report.

Harkins had called J. B. Porter's New Jersey home, but the lawyer was not there. "One of the family will do," he said, but he was advised to call later. This he did and a clear, sweet voice responded: "I am sorry, but my father is not at home. Any message?"

"This is Harkins, Mr. Porter's legal associate. I am in the Tombs."

"The Tombs?" she gasped. "I am so sorry."

"Thank you," he grinned into the transmitter. "My automobile was stolen—or taken by mistake and here I am!"

"Oh! How strange—you were arrested because some one stole your car?"

"Well—she said my car was her car—and with the evidence all against her she got away," he sighed deeply.

"Got away?" came the faint echo.

"Because she mentioned her father's name—and they won't let me talk any more—say I'm talking too much."

"Coming right over," he heard before an officer elbowed him away from the instrument.

"Who do you think you are? A guest of the city—walking into jail as if you owned the whole shootin' match!" growled the policeman.

"Must own some of it—taxpayer—guest of the city! I rather like that," chuckled Harkins. "Can I stay down here—somebody coming along to bail me out?"

Then came J. B. Porter, shaking with laughter, and a lovely girl who clung to her father and begged Harkins' forgiveness for her blunder. J. B. Porter bailed his future son-in-law (none of them knew the fact just then) out of jail, and all went happily thereafter.

Harkins says the pleasantest hours of his life were spent in the Tombs' prison, and as for a bachelor home in Westchester—why, a New Jersey home, a log fire, two easy chairs and no book at all is much to be preferred.

DARKEY WAS NOT IMPRESSED

His Opinion of the Chief Justice of United States Supreme Court Decidedly Not High.

John Marshall was a great man and, like many great men, he became at times very much absorbed with his thoughts. Riding along the bad roads of North Carolina one day in a gig the chief justice of the United States Supreme court was revolving a point of law in his mind and not paying a great deal of attention to the road. His horse turned out of its own accord and the gig ran over a sapling and tilted so sharply that the judge was aroused from his reverie. It seemed to him that he was hung up on the sapling, for he could turn neither to the right or left. An old negro happened along, scratched his head a moment and said:

"Marose, whut fer you-all don' back yo' horse offen that saplin'?"

"That's so," replied Marshall, who had not thought of that simple solution, and promptly backed away from the obstruction. He thanked the old man and was about to reward him, but found he had no money in his pocket.

"Never mind, uncle," he said as he drove away. "I'll stop at the tavern and leave something for you."

The old negro was not impressed, but for fear he might overlook a bet stopped at the tavern and there the landlord gave him a dollar, which Marshall had left for him.

"What did you think of him?" the landlord asked.

"Well," answered the negro. "Well, he was a gen'lman, sho' nuff, but, and he patted his forehead significantly, 'pears to this darky like they ain't much o' nuthin' in that man's bald.'"

Song Values.

The value of songs, in most instances, lies with the artist, the interpreter, because it is the artist who gives a song life and reality.

It is very interesting to observe the various songs spoken of by artists as beautiful, dramatic, thrilling and so on. Each one has an entirely different idea as to value. One will select a song because it happens to suit his own voice, while someone else makes a selection because of the strikingly melodic theme. Others like a song of weird exotic harmonizations or because of original character of form.

When it comes to the subject some prefer sea songs, others dramatic or timely war songs of the declamatory style, while people with different natures lean toward mood or atmospheric songs.

St. Nicholas Doll.

Russia in the old days had its own type of doll, namely, the St. Nicholas doll. There the Christmas holiday is celebrated 11 days after the celebration in other countries, in accordance with the calendar of the Greek Catholic church.

The St. Nicholas doll was clad almost always in woolly white material and sported fierce mustachios and whiskers. He represented the patron saint of the children, who punished or rewarded by the amount of gifts he bestowed.

If Only True.

The 8A class of a North side school was having a history lesson. The Civil war was the topic. "The South said 'cotton is king.'" One of the older boys of the class was called on to discuss the subject. In conclusion he said: "The South sent the raw cotton to England and there it was manufactured into woolen cloth."—Indianapolis News.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. It is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

READY FOR THAT PROSPERITY

Mrs. — Was in Something of a Hurry to See Husband Make Good His Promises.

Now, Mr. M. — is a strong Republican, and Mrs. M. — just as strong a Democrat. Before the election each tried to influence the other. Mr. M. — talked of Republican prosperity and Mrs. M. — of Democratic peace.

Eagerly on election day they both watched the election reports. And as one after the other came in Mrs. M. — was visibly disappointed. But she said nothing, and went quietly to bed.

The next morning she was up early, cheerful, smiling and dressed in her Sunday best. Mr. M. — was plainly surprised. "Why, mother, all dolled up," he exclaimed. "What does this mean?"

"Oh, nothing," was her calm reply, "except that I'm getting ready to enjoy Republican prosperity with my husband."—Indianapolis News.

"Then it must have been the spotted fever."

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. Catarrhal Deafness requires constitutional treatment. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced, your hearing may be destroyed forever. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system, thus reducing the inflammation and restoring normal conditions.

A LITTLE COURAGE

By GRACE CANFIELD.

(© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Charlie Wetherbee," remarked that young man to his own reflection as he tugged at a colorful tie, "do you realize that you are twenty-one today—a rising business man, and yet you haven't got a girl? You poor boob! Ardeth Appel doesn't even know that you exist. Are you never going to forget her and go hunt up a wife?"

The blue eyes glared back at him for a moment, then twinkled irrepressibly.

"Yes, by gum, I am," replied the other Charlie. "And I'm going to begin today! I appoint myself a committee of one to declare a holiday."

The fates had been preparing a little joke on Charlie Wetherbee. Here was a girl, beautiful, rich, and full of the love of adventure, who, unknown to herself, had been adored for years by a youth strong, active and poor, but also loving adventure.

Ardeth Appel did not know Charlie at all—or she had not until the fates took a hand.

Charlie smiled blithely as he swung down the street to the station on his way to New York on his search for a wife. But every step took him away from her, and by the time he bought his ticket, his smile had faded a little.

"Wonderful weather," he remarked to himself enthusiastically, and forced a large, artificial smile. He wondered if, after all, he wanted a wife, when he couldn't have Ardeth. He propped up the fast-fading grin with two fingers.

"Why grieve so hard? asked an old gentleman.

"I beg your pardon?" stammered Charlie.

Charlie looked at him earnestly, seized with a sudden desire to confide in someone.

"I am sad," he confessed, "and so would you be if you had loved a girl for five years without ever meeting her."

"But why don't you meet her?"

"Can't. I am only a poor working boy, and her father is a millionaire—more or less. She sure is a winner, though," in a musing tone.

Charlie's smile was gone now, and it had been his undoing. If he had not been so busy trying to hold on to it he would have seen Ardeth Appel get in at the other end of the car. She, too, had felt the urge of adventure that morning, and had slipped out of the house before her father could stop her.

Now as Charlie Wetherbee told his sorrows to the kind gentleman, something strange happened to him. He had just said: "It's pretty hopeless, I guess," when he suddenly felt that it couldn't be—it mustn't be hopeless! Unaware that the train had stopped, and that the passengers were filing out, he said in a loud, determined voice, looking straight ahead:

"No, it is not! Some day," he continued with conviction, "I am going to marry that girl!" And as he spoke he looked right into the eyes of the girl herself! The Fates chuckled with glee.

Ardeth, at first inclined to feel insulted, was suddenly amused. Looking calmly back into the clear, honest eyes of the stranger she answered:

"You may consider yourself accepted."

Before the astonished young man could follow she was speeding away in the luxurious limousine of a school friend.

It was two years before the Fates gave him the opportunity. The morning was perfect, and Charlie quite looked the successful young business man as he boarded the train—bound for a conference in New York. The train was crowded and when Charlie saw that he must share the seat with Ardeth Appel or stand up, he felt that the moment was indeed his.

He settled himself beside Ardeth with a polite, impersonal bow, and began to read a story.

"Things like this just don't happen, you know," he broke the silence casually. Ardeth, startled, looked a question.

"Like this story," he went on. "Man loved a girl for years without her knowing it. He sees her on the train one day and, throwing all caution to the winds, proposes to her."

"How improbable!" But the girl's cheeks were suddenly flushed.

"She calls his bluff, though," he continued in the same impersonal tone, "and accepts him."

"You say he has always loved her?" The girl's voice was faint.

"Since he was a kid. But her father had no use for him. Good chap, too," he added, brazenly.

The girl recognized him suddenly, and an overpowering embarrassment seized her. What would this terrible young man say next?

Then Charlie Wetherbee took his life in his hands and leaned forward.

"What do you think the fellow's chances would be?" he asked.

Ardeth could not but admire the courage which had prompted these words, and her tone was not too angry as she replied:

"I should say—with as much poise as she could summon—"that the young man ought to go to her and beg her pardon."

"And would she give him another chance, perhaps?" he whispered.

"One never knows until he tries," answered Ardeth Appel, composedly

HOW WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

May Escape the Dreaded Sufferings of that Period by Taking Mrs. Block's Advice

Hopkins, Minn.—"During Change of Life I had hot flashes and suffered for Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound advertised in the paper and got good results from taking it. I recommend my medicine to my friends and you may publish this fact as a testimonial."—Mrs. ROBERT BLOCK, Box 542, Hopkins, Minn.

It has been said that not one woman in a thousand passes this perfectly natural change without experiencing a train of very annoying and sometimes painful symptoms. Those dreadful hot flashes, sinking spells, spots before the eyes, dizzy spells, nervousness, are only a few of the symptoms. Every woman at this age should profit by Mrs. Block's advice and try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., about your health. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

NOW A DIFFERENT WOMAN

Earnestly Praises Eatonio

"My wife was a great sufferer from acid stomach for 10 years," writes H. D. Crippen, "but is a different woman since taking Eatonio."

Sufferers from acid stomach—let Eatonio help you also. It quickly takes up and carries out the excess acidity and gases and makes the stomach cool and comfortable. You digest easily, get the full strength from your food, feel well and strong, free from bloating, belching, food repeating, etc. Big box costs only a trifle with your druggist's guarantee.

Strength Compels Admiration

A Man is just as Young and Strong as his Blood

No man can fight the battles of life and hold his own if his blood is not pure, for rich red blood is what strength is based upon. When you see a strong, vigorous man, you never know when he is ill, and may wonder that such a man can be so strong through his veins.

Many people have thin, pale blood. They are weak, tire easily, become discouraged quickly, and sometimes feel like giving up the struggle. Such folks need Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, made without alcohol, and sold by druggists in liquid or tablet form.

Back Given Out?

There's surely some reason for that lame, aching back. Likely it's your kidneys. A cold or strain oftentimes congests the kidneys and slows them up. That may be the reason for that nagging backache, those sharp pains, that tired, worn-out feeling. You may have headaches and dizzy spells, too, with annoying bladder irregularity. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. They have helped thousands. Ask your neighbor.

When I raised up quickly, a stitch took me in my back. I had to get up often at night to pass the kidney secretions and they were highly colored and burned. I had headaches and dizzy spells. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and two boxes entirely cured me of kidney trouble."

BIG RECEPTION TO BE GIVEN AMERICAN TENNIS CHAMPIONS

Uncle Sam is to pay a royal tribute to the two tennis aces of America upon their return from Australia, where they won the Davis cup, emblematic of the world's championship in the great outdoor game.

William M. Johnston hails from San Francisco, where a wonderful reception has been planned in honor of the "native son" of California. William T. Tilden II lives at Philadelphia, Pa., and has hosts of friends and admirers who are arranging a "welcome home" that will rival that of anything ever accorded a citizen of this country.

HOPPE'S EXCELLENCE AS BALKLINE PLAYER

Clearly Demonstrates Superiority in Recent Match.

In All-Important Position Play Champion Far Outclassed Welker Cochran, and Jake Schaefer, His Two Great Rivals.

Willie Hoppe's superiority as a master of balkline billiards was never more clearly demonstrated than during the final round of the national championship tournament at the Hotel Astor. In the past he has invariably far outclassed his rivals and in so doing showed that he was in a class by himself, but the contrast between the finesse of play has not been as forcefully outlined.

In ball-to-ball billiards, or, in other words, as a shot maker, Welker Cochran and Jake Schaefer, the players who opposed him, proved almost the equal of Hoppe, but that is not the real foundation of balkline playing. It was in position play that the contrast was greatest. In this all-important essential Hoppe far outclassed his two rivals. Hoppe was always looking ahead, as a balkliner should. He knew with an impressive degree of accuracy where the two object balls would rest when he had finished making the point immediately before him. He knew, too, whether he would then be in a position to get the balls out of balk and still continue scoring.

To accomplish these things as Hoppe did, second ball play was a leading factor. It is simple enough to stroke the first object ball so that the player will know where it is going to come to a stop, but it is quite another matter to figure to hit the second object ball, whether it will be on the inside or the outside and with what speed. Hoppe's second ball playing was almost perfect, and had it not been for the adverse atmospheric conditions that prevailed throughout most of the matches, there is little doubt that his runs and his averages would have been greater. These conditions militated against the best billiards being played and, of course, seriously affected the playing of Cochran and Schaefer as well.

The contrast in delicate work was particularly marked in the control the players were able to exercise over the balls when they were in the corners. In the open Cochran and Schaefer played just as brilliantly as did the champion, but when it came to the extremely fine work required in governing the action of the ivories in close manipulation there was no comparison. Hoppe proved in this work that he is in a class by himself.

Years ago Hoppe so far outclassed all other players in this country at 18.1 balkline that the game virtually became a dead one in the United States. Few balkline players were willing to match their skill against Hoppe's at this style of play. They realized it was a useless task. A similar condition is rapidly developing at the somewhat easier game of 18.2.

Norval Baptie, who retired undefeated in 1918, after challenging Lamy, Wood and McLean, without success, easily defeated Don Baker, the Brooklyn crack, in the one-quarter and one-mile events of the greatest skating match ever held in the Metropolitan district, at the One Hundred and Thirty-first street ice palace, New York.

WELL TO DO FARMER GAINED 20 POUNDS

H. W. Boring Says He Is In Better General Health Than He Has Been In Years Since Taking Tanlac.

H. W. BORING of Overland Park, Kansas

"Since Tanlac has overcome my troubles I have gained twenty pounds in weight and am in better general health than for years past," was the straight-forward statement made a few days ago by H. W. Boring, a prominent and well-to-do farmer living at Overland Park, Kans.

"During the two years I suffered I tried everything I knew of to get relief, but nothing seemed to reach my case until I tried Tanlac. My appetite was poor and my digestion was so bad I could hardly retain my food. Nothing agreed with me; in fact I was almost a confirmed dyspeptic. My whole system seemed to be out of shape. I would have pains across the small of my back so bad at times I could hardly move around."

"My nerves were all unstrung and I would become up-set at the least little thing. I seldom slept well at night and, finally, became so weak and run-down that I lost weight rapidly. I was also troubled a great deal with catarrh and of mornings had to spend a half hour or more clearing up my head."

"This is just the condition I was in when I began taking Tanlac and it certainly has been a blessing to me. It just seemed to be made especially for my case. I improved from the very first. My digestion now is perfect and regardless of what I eat I never suffer any bad after effects."

"The pains across my back have entirely disappeared. The catarrh has left me, too, and my head is perfectly clear. I am no longer nervous and rest well every night. I have regained my lost weight and am feeling better and stronger than I have in years. I am going to keep Tanlac in my house so it will be handy at all times."

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—Adv.

GHOSTLY LOVERS ON WATCH

Legend of the City of Mexico That Makes Peculiar Appeal to Superstitious Residents.

One of the strange legends of the City of Mexico has to do with the Calle de los Parados (Street of the Two Idlers). According to the story there was a beautiful girl, Dona Maria Yabel de Vallejo y Vezca, who lived on the street and was beloved by two men, one a young officer and the other a young merchant. After the custom of the land at that period (about 1650) they indicated their love by standing, one at each corner of the block, until the dona appeared.

A plague fell upon the city about this time and the girl died without it becoming known to her lovers. She was taken out and buried by night, also unbeknown to the suitors. The next day they stood at their respective posts waiting in vain. The day after they stood and the day after that, week after week, month after month and year after year. They at last died, still on their posts, and their ghosts are said to still stand at night, cloaked and ghostly, in the darkest shadows of the streets.

When a man is in too great a hurry to acquire wisdom he is apt to make a fool of himself.

Next. Cigarettes colored to match gowns, are reported to be the latest feminine fad in New York city. Soon the lovely ladies will be wanting to blow pink smoke through their delicate noses.

Constipation, indigestion, sick-headache and bilious conditions are overcome by a course of Garfield Tea.—Adv.

MADE RAG FIGURES POPULAR

Russian Princess Instrumental in Causing a Return to Pastime That Was in Favor Long Ago.

It was the fashion a little time ago to think scornfully of the woolwork screens, the paper flowers or the wax figures made by the women of the past, but now they are eagerly sought and added to collections of articles illustrating home life.

History repeats itself, and to this busy athletic age has come a wave of the old finger-work fashion. Lately it was pictures made with feathers, now it is little figures made from rags. These last were the idea of Mme. Wolkoff, nee Princess Troubetskoy, formerly of the Russian Imperial court, when at Petrograd, where the little figures were sold for the benefit of Russian soldiers. Since Mme. Wolkoff has been in England she has modeled little statuettes of well-known people, all in characteristic attitude and lifelike appearance. Odd pieces of rag have been manipulated to make these charming little figures, which vie with the paper modeling and the wax groups of the past.

WILL TOUR STATE OF FLORIDA

The National Editorial Association, will hold its 36th annual meeting at St. Augustine, Florida, and for nearly a month will be the guests of the guests of the Florida Press Association. The editor of the Gazette and Transcript is one of the delegates from the Massachusetts Press Association and will be accompanied by Mrs. Prescott, leaving Boston March 3. They will be pleased to meet Weymouth and Massachusetts people who may be in the land of sunshine.

The itinerary is an extensive one, and includes all parts of the Peninsular state and other states as well. The place of rendezvous in the South is Birmingham, Alabama, on Saturday, March 5, that delegates from the East and the West, the Middle and Southern States may go by special train to Montgomery, the State capital, having accepted an invitation to be guests of the city on Sunday.

Following the reception at Montgomery, the editors will visit the famous Normal and Industrial Institute, founded by Booker T. Washington, known as the Tuskegee Institute. The party will spend March 7 at Pensacola, the extreme western end of Florida, some 300 miles from the Atlantic. On the 8th we breakfast at Panama City and lunch at Marianna, reaching Tallahassee in time for the evening banquet at the capital.

A day will be enjoyed at Jacksonville and the longest stay will be at St. Augustine, the convention city, March 10, 11 and 12.

Sunday night a special train will be provided by the Florida Press Association for an extended trip. The party will visit Palatka and Gainesville, leaving at night for Lake County, where Leesburg, Traversa, Mt. Dora and Eustis will be visited and Lakeland, where a banquet will be served.

Arriving at Bradenton the morning of the 15th the editors will be taken by auto through the truck farms and citrus groves of Manatee county, and will visit the cities of Palmetto, Manatee and Sarasota.

The excursionists will leave by boat for St. Petersburg, where a banquet is scheduled and Clearwater and Tarpon will probably be visited.

Tampa will be reached in the evening. At or near Bartow one of the world's greatest phosphate mines will be inspected and a day spent in enjoying the "Scenic Highlands" in Polk and De Soto counties, where some of the finest grape fruit and orange groves on earth will be seen. From this section, which includes Winter Haven, Lake Wales and Avon Park, the tourists will go to Kissimmee and Orlando.

At the latter place the special train will be dismissed and the trip from there will be by auto. Included in the itinerary down the East coast of Florida are Sanford, DeLand, Daytona, Cocoa, Fort Pierce, Palm Beach, Fort Lauderdale and Miami, the end of the journey.

Those who wish may take a trip to Cuba or Bimini.

The Florida Press Association has raised a fund of $50,000 to provide the special train and other entertainment, and the cities to be visited will expend about as much more to welcome the National Editorial Association, which will represent every State in the Union.

On the return trip Mr. and Mrs. Prescott will make stops at Savannah, Charleston, Richmond, Washington, Bethlehem and New York.

—The first of a series of community whist parties, which are to be given under the auspices of the Ladies Auxiliary to the Pond Plain Improvement Association, will be held in the Pond Street hall Saturday evening, Feb. 19.

—Sunday, Feb. 20, by special arrangement there will be an exchange of preachers between the Old South Union church in South Weymouth and the South church in Brockton. Dr. S. K. Tompkins of the South church will preach in the Old South Union church, South Weymouth. Everyone should hear him. He is an eloquent speaker, an earnest, sincere and effective preacher.

PERFECT CONFIDENCE

Weymouth people have good reason for complete reliance.

Do you know how—
To find relief from backache;
To correct distressing urinary ills;
To assist weak kidneys?

Many people in this vicinity know the way.

Have used Doan's Kidney Pills;

Have proved their worth in many tests. Ask your neighbor!

Here's East Braintree testimony.

Mrs. Emma Howes, nurse, 179 Commercial street, East Braintree, Mass., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills for years and recommend them to many of my patients. I never heard of anyone not getting excellent results. I have used them when my back has been lame and the results could not have been better. I have great faith in Doan's Kidney Pills and am always pleased to recommend them."

Price 60c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Howes had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv. 2t.7.8

The last date for filing nomination papers with the town clerk is March 3, but caucus nominations must be filed March 2. To date there have been no withdrawals or additions to the caucus nominations.

The Home Rule Committee of Weymouth has secured quite a reduction in one zone fares, as the 13-ride tickets may be used for one zone, one punch.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT

Charles Schirmer, driver of a truck for Leavitt Coal Co. of East Weymouth, was dragged 50 feet by an express train that hit his truck at the West Hingham crossing yesterday afternoon. The crossing is obscured from view to some extent, owing to the abrupt curve.

Patrick Cleary, who is employed at Hingham Magazine and lives near Leavitt's coal office, said that he was waiting for a train at the West Hingham depot to take him home, when Schirmer invited him to ride with him. He got into the cablike seat with Schirmer and when about to cross the railroad tracks, the gates of which were not down, the men saw to their horror that the express from Boston was thundering down the track and almost upon them. The front of the truck was about a foot over the first rail when brought to a stop and both men leaped for their lives. Cleary to one side into a snowbank, and Schirmer to the other. At that instant the crash came and it was found that Schirmer had not jumped clear of the rail and the train dragged him about 50 feet, before it was brought to a stop. The injured man was rushed to Massachusetts General hospital.

Schirmer is spoken well of by his employers as a good and careful driver. He resides with his wife and four children on High street, East Weymouth.

K. OF P. DEBATE

The Thursday evening meeting of Delphi lodge, K. of P., took the form of a debate on the question: "Shall the State take over control of Penal Institutions from the several counties?" It proved a very enjoyable and profitable evening to many members, who exercised this opportunity to hear both sides of a timely question presented.

The speakers were well posted on their subject with an excellent array of figures, gave many interesting comparisons and possibilities for and against any change of the present method.

That they were keenly followed was clearly manifested by the vital questions advanced later by the lodge members, who regretted that the principals found it necessary to leave rather early to make train connections.

C. A. Parker presented the affirmative side and the negative was taken by Sheriff Capen of Dedham and County Commissioner Merrill of Quincy. Each speaker in his anxiety to fully present his side would run over his time limit on the discussion that followed was keen and lively.

Following the debate the lodge enjoyed a brief social hour. Refreshments were served, interspersed by songs and remarks from visiting Knights.

Close Contests For Republican Nominations

The only real contest at the Republican town caucus last Saturday evening was for the nomination for tax collector. Although Harry E. Bearce publicly declined to be a candidate, he was renominated in Ward Two. Ward One nominated H. O. Tutty, and Wards Four and Five nominated Frank W. Holbrook. It looked like a three-cornered fight, but at the town caucus Mr. Holbrook withdrew. The result of the ballot was:

TUTTY	24
BEARCE	21

And Mr. Tutty was declared the nominee.

WARD CONTESTS
In Ward One at North Weymouth there was a three-cornered fight for Selectman to succeed George L. Newton, who resigned, the vote being as follows:

WILLIAM H. DASHA	151
CHARLES BAILEY	77
RUFUS BATES	53
GEORGE NASH	1

It will be seen that Mr. Dasha received more than a majority of the 282 votes cast, and he was nominated. Several women voted.

In Ward Two at East Weymouth took place the closest contest for Selectman, and the present incumbent, Frederick Humphrey, had a close call. The vote was:

FREDERICK HUMPHREY	51
HERBERT K. CUSHING	53

Mr. Humphrey was renominated by two votes.

Ward One also had a candidate against Joseph Kelley for park commissioner in Mr. McGill, but Mr. Kelley won.

All the other ward nominations were ratified at the general caucus and the nominees are:

Town Clerk.—Clayton B. Merchant.
Town Treasurer.—John H. Stetson.
Five Selectmen.—William H. Dasha, Frederick Humphrey, William H. Cowing, Theron L. Tirrell, Alfred W. Hastings.

Five Overseers of Poor.—William B. Dasha, Frederick Humphrey, William H. Cowing, Theron L. Tirrell, Alfred W. Hastings.

Assessor for three years.—Clayton B. Merchant.

Assessor for two years.—Richard Two School for three years.—Frank Halloran.

W. Rea, Prince H. Tirrell.

School Committee to fill vacancy.—John P. Hunt.

Collector of Taxes.—Henry O. Tutty.

Park Commissioner.—Joseph Kelly.

Water Commissioner for three years.—Frank H. Torrey.

Board of Health for three years.—John S. Williams.

Trustees of Tufts Library for three years.—John B. Holland, William F. Hathaway, Kenneth L. Nash.

Auditors.—Wallace L. Whittle, Frank E. Loud, Marshall T. Tirrell.

Tree Warden.—Charles L. Merritt.

Commissioner of Ward Two Schoolhouse Fund.—George W. Perry.

Constables.—Charles W. Baker, Edward F. Butler, James L. Brennan, George W. Conant, Bertie T. Hobart, Thomas Fitzgerald, Arthur H. Pratt, George W. Nash, Fred H. Smith and Willie F. Tirrell.

At the election March 14, voters will also be requested to vote yes or no on two or more questions.

NOTICE TO VOTERS

The Selectmen of Weymouth have delayed issuing the warrants for the annual town meeting until they were reasonably sure that the Act now before the Legislature providing for representative town meetings in this town will have been passed before the date of the meeting.

The Act has been re-drafted by the Committee on Towns and several minor changes made in it with the view of making it a standard Act which can be adopted by any other town wishing to change to a like form of government. A copy of this draft is on file with the Town Clerk.

The official warrant, now ready for posting, calls for a "yes" or "no" vote upon the official election ballot, instead of action in the meeting of March seventh under article 28, as it appears in the warrants printed for general distribution.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

President-Elect Harding Still in Doubt About Three of the Cabinet Places.

WOOD FOR THE PHILIPPINES?

Hyphenates Present List of Independent Demands—Attempt to Impeach Judge Landis—Senate Passes the Emergency Tariff Bill.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

As March 4 draws near interest in the make-up of Mr. Harding's cabinet grows acute. The President-elect is, at this writing, believed to have decided upon seven of his ten advisers, while the men to whom he will entrust the navy, labor and commerce portfolios still are to be definitely selected. Former Governor Lowden of Illinois has refused the place of secretary of the navy.

For secretary of labor four men are being considered. They are James J. Davis of Pennsylvania, former steel worker; T. V. O'Connor of New York, leader of the Longshoremen's union; James Duncan of Massachusetts, who has been an official of the American Federation of Labor and of the Granite Cutters' union, and John I. Nolan of California, member of congress and an iron moulder. Mr. O'Connor was one of Mr. Harding's visitors in St. Augustine last week. It was announced that he would offer with the President-elect's cabinet.

If the southern states are to have a representative in the cabinet—and they are—then the name will be the new secretary of commerce. Many southern states would be fitting in the existing movement for industrial expansion in the South. Three men from below Mason and Dixon's line have been especially recommended to Mr. Harding. They are T. H. Huston and Newell Sanders of Tennessee, and Congressman C. Bascom Sless of Virginia. Many petitions have been sent to St. Augustine asking that either Herbert Hoover or John Hays Hammond be given the commerce portfolio, and among others mentioned for the post is Charles D. Hilles, former chairman of the National Republican committee.

Mr. Harding and those called into conference with him of course have not confined their discussions to cabinet appointments, for the new President will have innumerable diplomatic and other important positions to fill. No formal announcement about any of these places has been made, but it is now taken for granted that Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood will be made governor general of the Philippines to succeed Frederick Burton Harrison. This appointment probably would meet with the approval of all except those who are in favor of giving the islands their independence immediately, regardless of their ability to govern themselves or to protect themselves against the possible encroachments of the Japanese. American prestige in the islands is said to have declined markedly under Governor Harrison and the movement for independence has grown correspondingly. General Wood's ability as a colonial administrator is unquestioned, and doubtless under him American authority in the Philippines would be strengthened and the defenses in the islands would be perfected.

Albert Fletcher, who was one of Mr. Harding's guests during the houseboat cruise in Florida, is slated for appointment as ambassador to Japan. He was a Roosevelt Rough Rider and served as minister to Mexico.

Probably Mr. Harding cannot well refuse to meet delegations of presumably law-abiding citizens that journey to St. Augustine, but many thousands of Americans whose memory of events during the war has not faded read with resentment that the President-elect last week granted an interview to a committee of the "German-American Citizens' league" headed by the notorious George Sylvester Viereck, former editor of the Fatherland. Why cannot this man and his colleagues, who still cling desperately to their hyphen, lie quiet until time and good behavior have somewhat rehabilitated them in the opinion of decent Americans? Here are the demands, requests and opinions which these hyphenates had the effrontery to present to the President-elect:

1. That Americans of German birth should participate equally with their fellow citizens in the government of "our country."
2. Immediate peace with Germany and the rejection of the "infamous" peace of Versailles.
3. A protest against the French annexation of the "ancient German provinces of Alsace-Lorraine."
4. Immediate withdrawal of the American forces from the occupied portions of Germany.
5. Condemnation of British action in Ireland as "in violation of the principles for which American blood was shed and American treasure lavished in defense of the British empire during the World war."
6. Condemnation of the "attempt to embroil this country in a war with Japan for the benefit of Great Britain."
7. Repeal of the Panama canal tolls act, which it has been said would be violation of our treaty with Great Britain.
8. Opposition to entangling alliances, "especially any alliance with Great Britain."
9. Investigation of the government handling of alien property is demanded.
10. Immediate release of Eugene V. Debs.
11. Resentment of attacks against citizens of German descent.
12. Prohibition condemned as "a breeder of death, corruption and contempt for the law."
13. A study of immigration "in a liberal spirit" urged.

Another man, who during the war made himself only a little less obnoxious than Viereck—Oswald Garrison Villard—ran into a hornet's nest when he undertook to deliver a Lincoln birthday address at the Woman's City club in Cincinnati. A great crowd, made up largely of ex-service men and men and women who lost relatives in the war, tried to break up the meeting, and only the intervention of the police saved Villard from possible injury and enabled him to go on with his speech.

Decidedly interesting if not very important is the attempt to impeach United States Judge Keneaw M. Landis of Chicago. The attack on this spectacular jurist, who is both much loved and much feared, came from two sources and was based on two grounds, but the actual move for his impeachment was made by Representative Benjamin Welty of Ohio, who asks the senate to remove the judge from the bench because he accepted the office of supreme arbiter of organized baseball. The house committee on judiciary took up the Welty charge, and also received an opinion from Attorney General Palmer who ruled that Judge Landis had committed no offense in holding the two positions. The other attack on the judge was made by Senator N. B. Dial of South Carolina, who was enraged because Landis, in hearing the case of an embezzling bank clerk, criticized the bank directors for paying only $90 a month to a young man who was required to handle large sums. The judge accepted Dial's challenge with glee and said some rather cutting things about the senator's interests in banks, cotton mills and child labor. As Dial has not been an especially influential member of the senate it is not likely his outbreak will have results.

The emergency tariff bill, supposedly designed for the relief of the farmer, was passed by the senate on Wednesday, but with such considerable amendments that the senate and house conferees faced a hard task in trying to complete the measure for submission to the President. Anyhow their labor probably is wasted, for it is assured that Mr. Wilson will veto the bill, and the vote in the senate, indicated that it cannot be passed there over the veto. Party lines among the senators were broken in the voting. Among those who assailed the measure most bitterly were Moses of New Hampshire and Edge of New Jersey, both Republicans, and Reed of Missouri, Democrat. The senate is now going to get through with the 11 big appropriation bills which it has not yet passed and which Mr. Harding has especially requested shall be enacted at this session.

Only an immediate application of the principle of collective bargaining will settle the railway labor controversy and avert a national crisis in the transportation industry, according to B. M. Jewell of the railway employees' department of the American Federation of Labor. He told the railway labor board last week that the fight of the executives on the national agreements was a smoke screen to obscure the fundamental issues, and made these suggestions:

"First, that the board refer the national agreements which are now before it to a joint conference of the representatives of the railroads and of the labor organizations with the recommendation that their agreements be adjusted by negotiations as soon as possible, the board agreeing to pass immediately upon any points of difference which may arise from the negotiations."

"Second, that the board request the representatives of the railroads and representatives of the labor organizations to meet the board in conference to consider the establishment of boards of adjustment as contemplated by the transportation pact."

"Third, that in reply to Mr. Atterbury's notice to the board and his subsequent letter to the chairman advising him that he contemplates filing a flood of individual complaints to reduce the wages of unskilled employees, the board recommend to Mr. Atterbury that he meet in general conference with the representatives of the employees affected so that the existing general agreements will not be impaired and the matter brought to the board in the form of a single complaint."

That dreaded pest, typhus, has invaded the United States through the port of New York and there have been several deaths already. It comes from the infected areas of Europe, and its spread here is being effectually fought by the strictest inspection of all immigrants.

Discoveries made and documents seized by the police of Paris, Barcelona and Milan have revealed a great communist conspiracy to overthrow the governments of France, Spain and Italy, the date set for the revolution being May 1. Funds for the conspirators came from Berlin in the form of checks and were transmitted through an American financial organization that has European headquarters in Paris and branches in Berlin and Vienna. The French police say soviets have been organized throughout France ready to take over the banks, railroads and all civil services.

With the opening of the British parliament last week Premier Lloyd George once more "faced the hardest fight of his career." But he is used to that now, and probably will again emerge victorious over his opponents. To be sure, the opposition is unusually powerful this time, and has been reinforced by the addition of the Cecil brothers, Lord Robert and Lord Hugh, who are quite influential. As soon as King George had delivered the brief address from the throne the fight began in the house of commons, Herbert Asquith, former premier, and J. H. Thomas, labor leader, heading the attack. Naturally, the Irish question supplied their chief ammunition. In reply to questions the premier said, the situation in Ireland had improved greatly in the last six months and that if the British people would have patience order would soon be restored. "Boycotting has completely ceased," he said. "Sinn Fein courts have disappeared, the police are recovering their authority and the magistrates are coming back to the courts."

JUST A LITTLE SMILE

COUNTRY BOY NO FOOL.

A boy sat on a rail fence enclosing a cornfield. A city chap, passing by, said:

"Your corn looks kind of yellow, bub."

"Yep; that's the kind we planted," replied the bub.

"It don't look like you will get more than a half a crop," said the city chap.

"Nope; we don't expect to; the land-lord gets the other half," retorted the youngster.

The stranger hesitated a moment and then ventured:

"You are not very far from a fool, are you, my boy?"

"Nope; not more'n ten feet," said the boy, and the city chap moved on.

Tidings to Be Spread.

"Mrs. Jibway told me Mr. Jibway's salary has been increased $5,000 a year," said Mrs. Dubwaite.

"Well, my dear?" replied Mr. Dubwaite.

"But she told me in the strictest confidence. Would it be wrong for me to tell all the neighbors?"

"If you don't she will never forgive you."

THESE GIRLS

"Reggy did you pick out this present for me yourself?"

"No, I got Vera Jones to help me select it."

"Ah, that explains matters. That girl hates me."

Feminine Unconcern.

"Did the lady say anything when she backed her motorcar through your plate glass window?" asked the investigating policeman.

"She certainly did," said the merchant.

"What was it?"

"She said, 'Oh, dear, I'll be late at the beauty parlor!'"

Misinformation.

"There's a great deal printed that you can't believe."

"There is," assented Uncle Bill Bottletop; "specially on bottles."

Really!

"Your father must have been in an unusually good humor when he gave you a motorcycle."

"Oh, I seized the cycle-logical moment to ask for it."

REDS FAIL TO COLLECT GRAIN

Europe Cannot Expect Cereals or Flax,

Says Anti-Bolshevist Committee.

London.—Hope that Europe may obtain any cereals or flax from soviet Russia is entirely unfounded, says a circular from the Russian liberation committee in London, an anti-Bolshevist organization.

The circular recalls that, according to the food commissariat's plans, roughly 7,250,000 tons of breadstuffs were to be delivered to the soviet government by December 1, but, owing to the breakdown of transportation, the Siberian quota of 2,000,000 tons can only be brought in with the greatest difficulty, while the Caucasian estimated output of 1,750,000 tons cannot be relied upon owing to the military operations in that region.

As regards flax, the circular again quotes Bolshevist figures showing that the area sown in 1920 had shrunk to one-fifth of the pre-war area.

OLD MOONSHINER IN AGAIN

"Wild Bill" Has Spent Nearly Third of His Life in the Penitentiary.

Macon, Ga.—Charley Williams, better known as "Wild Bill," who has served practically 15 years of his life in the penitentiary for making moonshine whisky, and who only finished his last sentence two months ago, has again been arrested for playing his old trade. He was caught with a 1,100-gallon still in full operation in a thickly wooded swamp in Jasper county. "Wild Bill" Williams is fifty years of age, and officials of the United States court say, as far back as they can remember, he has been arraigned regularly every year or two. He is the head of a large family.

Authors Form Union.

Berlin.—The Alliance for the Protection of the Interests of German Authors decided at its latest convention to reorganize along the lines of labor unions in order to protect the interests of authors. Royalties have not kept pace with the rapid increase in cost of living, even widely known writers earning less than a skilled mechanic.

RADIATORS NEED CARE IN WINTER

Batteries and Carburetors Also Must Be Given Attention in Cold Weather.

LIGHTER OILS ARE FAVORED

Storage Battery Is Rather Expensive Piece of Equipment and Reasonable Amount of Care Will Keep It in Good Condition.

Freezing weather brings many things that the motorist must remember and take care of if he wishes to avoid trouble and keep his car going without undue expense.

The danger of freezing the cylinders, or causing the radiator to leak is so well understood that the precautions are scarcely needed that antifreeze should be put in the water or that a hood or radiator cover should be provided to retain the heat.

Some people forget that even the radiator cover will not keep the water warm indefinitely. This will be effective only so long as sufficient heat is retained to keep the water temperature above 32 degrees, which will depend on the exposure of the car and the severity of the weather.

In any event not more than two or three hours' protection should be expected of a radiator cover, in the cold weather, and if the car must be left for a longer time without antifreeze in the radiator, the engine should be run for a few minutes at intervals of two or three hours. Much less trouble, of course, results from putting alcohol and sodium chloride or some such solution in the radiator.

Very many people do not realize that a lighter grade of oil is necessary in most engines in the winter, the heavier oils tending to flow so slowly that the bearings may be burned before the viscous oil gets into circulation. To be on the safe side one should put in the lighter oil that the car manufacturer recommends for winter before the cold weather sets in.

Watch Batteries.

Another thing to be borne in mind is that the storage battery is a relatively expensive piece of equipment and if reasonable care will prevent its coming to an untimely end it is worth while taking the trouble to keep watch of the gravity of the electrolyte.

If it gets too low, as indicated by a test with a hydrometer, have the battery removed and charged, but the chances are that the external charging will not be necessary if the battery is not run down by unnecessary cranking.

If it does become necessary to take the battery out of the car be sure that another battery is put in its place or else that the proper thing is done to keep the generator from being burned out. Your instruction book gives the proper directions for grounding or short circuiting the brushes so that damage will not result to the generator. Failure to do this will almost certainly be followed by burning out the windings of the armature or field, or even both. The safest course is never to drive the car without a battery on the line from the generator.

Don't Crank Continuously.

These cold mornings cars are a little hard to start, but instead of standing on the button and keeping the motor turning over, it is much better to crank a second or two at a time, stopping between to change the position of the choke or the spark or gas levers, then crank again, remembering that the engine will not start with too much gas any better than with too little. Several attempts at starting of a few seconds' duration each do not so seriously drain the battery as cranking for a long period continuously.

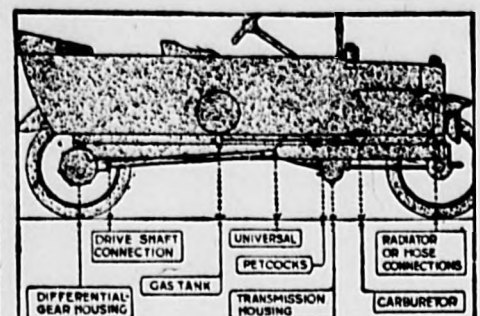

Whatever happens that indicates something unusual about the car, if you cannot understand it yourself, drop into a service station. "A stitch in time saves nine" and large repair bills are avoided by early attention to small signs of trouble.

GARAGE FLOOR MAKES GOOD TROUBLE GUIDE

Leaks or Stains Made Overnight Give Evidence.

Small Puddle of Water, Oil or Grease Would Indicate That Something Was Wrong With Radiator or Carburetor.

The car owner will find it a good plan to watch the garage floor for evidence of leakage, whether of grease, oil, gasoline, or water. A small puddle of water found on the floor in the morning, after the car has been standing overnight, may indicate a leak in the pump packing, radiator hose, or some other part of the cooling system; but the loss is not likely to be of much consequence, unless an antifreeze solution is used. A leak in the carburetor or fuel pipe is of more importance, and can generally be located by inspecting the floor before moving the car. Oil leakage from a loose petcock, defective gasket, or felt washer can generally be detected in the same way, and the cause remedied. Grease beneath the transmission, differential housing, or a universal joint, is often caused by loosened bolts in these parts. When the evidence is observed on the floor, the loose bolts can be tightened before they get a chance to come out entirely and cause serious trouble.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

AUTOMOBILE GOSSIP

The first automobile to enter the Garden of Eden was an American-made car.

During the first six months of 1920, 1,302 motorists were killed at grade crossings in the United States.

Alabama, Arkansas, Nevada, South Dakota and Oklahoma have one motor vehicle for every mile of road.

The average fee collected for each passenger or commercial vehicle in the United States in 1919 was $8.54.

American-made automobiles are operated in more than 100 countries, colonies and islands throughout the world.

Motor license plates in Connecticut for 1921 are larger in size than any other state. The plates measure nearly twenty inches in length.

Five hundred thousand freight cars are needed each year in the United States to carry automobiles, trucks, and finished parts, exclusive of tires and unfinished materials.

Municipally owned motor vehicles, including fire and police cars, and trucks of all kinds, must be registered in Wisconsin, the same as privately owned cars, and at the same rate of fee.

A national automobile show is to be held in Mexico City in March, and the committee in charge announces that every automobile manufacturer of prominence, having distributing agencies in Mexico, will be represented.

HOW CLEVER THIEF STEALS CARS

This unique set of photographs shows four of the methods used by automobile thieves in making away with a car.

1. Cutting hole in glass of locked sedan door—the rest is easy.
2. Hitting tow line to car with locked ignition.
3. Picking ignition lock with skeleton keys.
4. Changing bodies to prevent identification.

CLUB and SOCIAL

—Mr. and Mrs. Marshall R. Wright attended an informal reception given to Mrs. Anna B. Bowditch at her home in Plymouth on the holiday, the occasion of her eightieth birthday. Mrs. Bowditch, the only living sister of Mr. Wright, was formerly a teacher in the Weymouth public schools. She received flowers and messages from a host of friends, many of whom called upon her during the day. Blessed with unusual good health Mrs. Bowditch keeps actively identified with Universalist church at Plymouth, where she is a member. She enjoyed an automobile ride to Weymouth last Thursday and spent several pleasant hours with Mrs. Cecil Bond on Commercial street, to whom she is related.

—A very pretty dinner party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. Lewis French of Cain avenue on Sunday. The house was prettily decorated with the National colors. Owing to the severity of the storm, several of the guests were unable to go to their home and so the party was extended to the following holiday, and took the form of a Washington party. Appropriate games were enjoyed and the festivities closed with the singing of the National anthem on Tuesday evening.

—The Tufts chapter, D. A. R., held a regular meeting next Monday at the Old Ship church. Rev. Houghton Page, the pastor of that church is to speak on "Old Ship" and kindly invited the members to meet in this church. Members will be the 1.19 train from Weymouth station 1.26 from East Weymouth.

—Mr. and Mrs. William Nash of North Union street, Rockland, are the happy parents of a baby girl born Thursday, February 18. Mrs. Nash was formerly Miss Augusta Mullen of White street, South Weymouth.

—Mr. and Mrs. Myron Blanchard, formerly of South Weymouth, but now residents of Rockland, are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son Wednesday, February 23. Mrs. Blanchard was, before her marriage, Miss Alice Horgan.

—An informal party was given by Stanley Blenis of Mill street in the assembly hall of the Engine House at Nash's Corner on Monday evening. About 30 guests attended and enjoyed a social evening with games and music. A feature of the program was a "mock wedding" with Miss Olive Bennett and Master Philip Horgan as bridesmaid. Master William McLaughlin is the "parson" and Miss Marion and Master Joseph Coleman acting as the "bridal couple." Miss Flora Blenis presided at the piano. Music for dancing was furnished by Miss Blenis, pianist, and Master Lester Tower traps. Cake and ice cream were served. The matrons were Mrs. Morrison and Mrs. Price.

—Mrs. William P. Price Jr., of Prospect street has just returned from three weeks visit in Baltimore, Md.

—Miss Grace Shaw entertained a party of friends at a luncheon given at the home of her sister, Mrs. B. A. Bennett on Union street Tuesday. The table was prettily decorated with red, white and blue colors and potted flowers. Miss Shaw and Miss May Wall, who assisted were dressed in corresponding colors. Seated at the table were: Mrs. H. T. Anglin of Brockton, Mrs. George Burroll, Mrs. W. S. Whitten, Mrs. Eliza Bartlett of Plymouth, Mrs. George Shaw, Mrs. Albert W. Shaw, Miss Mae Wall, Mrs. Frank E. Loud, Miss Minnie Thayer, Miss Helen Reed, Miss Agnes Holbrook, Mrs. Christopher Sennett, Mrs. P. L. Bicknell, Mrs. Arthur B. Tirrell, Mrs. Ritchie T. Howe, Mrs. Mary L. Tirrell, Mrs. Lena Thomas, Mrs. Bertha Maxfield of Fairhaven, Mrs. George L. Barnes, Mrs. Thomas Nash, Miss Nancy Torrey, Miss Ruth Tower. Following the luncheon the guests enjoyed a social hour with games and music. Miss Shaw was presented with a bouquet of sweet peas.

—Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gould of Quincy, formerly of North Weymouth, announce the engagement of their daughter, Eleanor Miriam, to Richard Woodworth Arms of Tinguaro, Cuba.

—A miscellaneous shower in honor of her engagement, which was announced a short time ago, to Miss Katherine Dowling, the local visiting nurse was turned into a wedding reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James D. Bosworth of Broad street Thursday evening, February 17. Miss Dowling was married to Lyman F. Pratt at Mattapan on the same afternoon.

—Cards have been received in town from Mr. and Mrs. Louis F. Bates, who are sojourning for a few weeks at St. Petersburg, Florida.

—The Neighborhood Whist club met with Mrs. Henry G. Marden of Union street last week Thursday, Mrs. Warnick making the highest score.

—The Wednesday Afternoon Whist club met with Mrs. Louis P. Carlin on Pond street Feb. 16. The honors were taken by Mrs. Gay and Mrs. Brabston.

—Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Fryer are home from their wedding trip and have taken up their residence on Washington street.

—About 25 friends of Mildred Everett called at her home at King Cove last Friday evening and gave her a surprise. A pleasant evening with games and music was enjoyed. Refreshments were served. Miss Everett was presented with a camera by her friends.

—Mr. and Mrs. George W. Ferry of Hillcrest road celebrated the tenth anniversary of their marriage the latter part of last week. There were many present who were guests at their wedding. A delightful luncheon was served. Music, games and dancing were enjoyed. They received many remembrances.

—Yesterday afternoon at the residence of Martin Coyne of Chard street, Miss Katherine Lonergan entertained at a children's party in honor of Miss Dorothy Wilder of Lebanon, Penn., being assisted by Mrs. F. L. Doucette and Mrs. J. A. Delorey. Games, dancing and refreshments were enjoyed. Among those present were: Anna Morton, Betty Alden, Barbara Alden, Dorothy Alden, Mary Lonergan, Alice Lebossiere, Mary Leary, Eleanor Sullivan, Helen Sullivan, Ruth Nolan, Dorothea Whitcomb, Dorothy Sullivan, Frances Bicknell, Lillian Bicknell, Edith Tirrell, Natalie Doucette, Dorothy Bearce and John C. Reese.

—The meeting of Monday, the 21st, was a wonderful meeting in everything but numbers and of course the storm was a serious barrier for the small attendance. It was hard traveling for most of the members, but some walked from Weymouth Heights and said they felt well repaid for the trip.

The president, Mrs. Jewell, told of the mid-winter meeting of the State Federation, which she attended as a delegate, and Mrs. Jennie B. Worster, also a delegate, gave such a report of the meeting, that the members caught real feeling of the gathering and sensed the spirit of the speeches.

At this meeting equally good speakers took opposite sides on the maternity bill, State control of county institutions and censorship of moving pictures.

After listening to all points made on both sides the Federation endorsed all of the above measures, as well as prohibition, and the Monday Club voted its endorsement of each and all the bills.

Miss Corinon was to have given a paper in regard to these legislative matters, but was unable to be present on account of the storm.

After the routine business came the speaker of the afternoon, Nathan Howard Gist, who spoke in regard to "The Wise and Otherwise."

The talk was forceful, ringing and convincing. It showed the use of education in its broadest sense, the mistakes of the book-worm type, and war glorification instead, of the wonders of peace; the need of more education to help in understanding the complex problems of today and the little use of a merely "class-room" education. But most of all Mr. Gist emphasized the part of education in service!

Service was the height to which education led its followers, and he cited Roosevelt as an example of the highest in education and service.

Making a local application, the speaker suggested that women's clubs though formed for social purposes should fall in line with the best and help every good cause with their support.

Owing to the storm there was no singing and the social was also omitted.

The next meeting, March 7, will have something entertaining which is not even in the program for the meeting, but will be announced in next week's Monday Club notes.

LADIES NIGHT, K. T.

Those fortunate to attend the annual Ladies night of the South Shore Commandery, K. T., enjoyed one of the pleasantest times that has yet been held.

The affair opened with greetings to the officers of the body: Harry J. Beck, commander; Henry P. Tilden, generalissimo; Charles H. Locke, captain general; W. Edward Gutterson, treasurer; and Eben H. Cain, recorder and their ladies, the reception committee being: Em. Sir Harry J. Beck, the commander, Gardner R. P. Barker, Frank W. Bates, Francis A. Bicknell, Arthur W. Burr, Eben H. Cain, T. John Evans, Charles G. Jordan, Josiah B. Reed and William S. Wallace. The ushers were Henry P. Tilden, W. Edward Gutterson and Frederick Langhorst.

Over 200 sat down to a splendid banquet, for which considerable credit is due the committee, Eben H. Cain, Charles H. Locke and Walter B. Skinner for their good work.

The entertainment of the evening consisted of music and readings by Harry P. Pierce. The sweet solos by the boy soprano, Winslow Rouse were fine; as were the violin solos of Miss Read, and those on the harp rendered by Miss Perkins.

Dancing then followed with Walter R. Howland as floor director, assisted by Ernest M. Alexander, John L. Bicknell, Newland H. Holmes, Ralph C. Stoddard and Roy Wheaton as aids.

Fear to Tell Own Name.
Among the Kayans, a tribe of the Philippines, it is a breach of manners to ask a man what his name is. If a white man does so through ignorance the man will turn to a bystander and ask that the stranger, who does not know the customs, may be informed. If a man tells his own name the evil spirits will hear him and can more readily do him harm.

The AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

VETERANS' WAR MEMORIAL

Fighting Men of Three Wars Identified With Home Erected in Hoquiam, Washington.

With the recent completion of the American Veterans' building, a war memorial to fighting men of all American wars, the city of Hoquiam, Wash., has added to its architectural attractions a well-constructed and artistic edifice. The erection of the home was made possible by the activities of members of the American Legion, United Spanish War Veterans and Grand Army of the Republic.

The building is a three-story structure, in the downtown district. The ground floor will be occupied by a bank and on the other floors are a large rest room, a lodge and ball-room and a ladies' rest room.

Among the speakers at the formal dedication of the memorial was Robert A. LeRoux, field organizer of national headquarters of the Legion.

LEGION MEMBERS AID POLICE

Former Service Men in Various Cities Lend Assistance in Combating Crime Wave.

In conformity with the stand for law and order which the American Legion takes, thousands of Legionnaires are assisting the police in combating the crime wave, which has menaced life and property in larger cities all over the country, according to reports received at Legion national headquarters.

New York department headquarters promptly offered to put 5,000 veterans on the streets to assist the police when the orgy of murder and robbery was at its height, while during the Christmas season a number of Legion members aided in eliminating holdups in the shopping district by serving as guards in large retail stores and wholesale houses.

Five hundred St. Louis Legionnaires assisted the police in patrolling the city and rounding up suspicious characters. At St. Paul, Minn., the services of Legion members were volunteered in the formation of a series of network patrols.

Legion leaders explained that their organization in volunteering the services of its members for maintaining law and order did not imply that the police were inefficient, but that there was recognition that an abnormal situation existed under which the Legion was pledged to act if it wished to live up to the principles of its constitution.

IS LEADER IN AMERICANISM

Philip R. Bangs of Grand Forks, N. D., Also Vice Commander of His State Department.

One of the leaders in Americanism in the Northwest is Philip R. Bangs of Grand Forks, N. D., who was elected vice commander of the North Dakota department of the American Legion. As a doughboy and a scout in the Intelligence section of the Thirty-fifth division, Mr. Bangs served overseas. He was wounded by shell fire in the right shoulder during the Argonne-Meuse offensive.

Mr. Bangs was adjutant of the Legion post at Grand Forks, state chairman of the Americanism committee, and a member of the national Americanism commission of the Legion. A graduate of the law department of the University of North Dakota, Mr. Bangs is now engaged in the practice of law in Grand Forks.

Proposed Oregon Law.
The option of a $2,000 farm or home loan or cash compensation at the rate of $15 a month of service for Oregon veterans of the World war will be granted, if a bill sponsored by the Legion in the state legislature is passed.

KANSAS MEN CHOOSE FLOYD

Arkansas City Man Selected as Chairman of State Americanization Committee.

Kansas members of the American Legion have selected as chairman of their state Americanization committee John R. Floyd of Arkansas City, a prominent insurance man and third vice president of the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Floyd was commissioned a first lieutenant at the second officers' training camp at Fort Sheridan. He served at Camp Grant, Ill., Jefferson Barracks, Mo., and Camp Dodge, Ia., with the Eighty-sixth division and at various times as insurance, signal, ordnance and athletic officer and as judge advocate.

In 1913, Mr. Floyd was appointed district manager for a well known insurance company with headquarters at Arkansas City and in the year following his discharge from the service wrote the largest number of applications ever written in his state in one year for his company, and ranked first in the United States. He has served in various offices in Arkansas City post and as a member at large of the Legion state executive committee.

WHEN TO WEAR THE UNIFORM

Former Service Men Inclined to Be Too Modest in Appearing in Army Togs.

Former service men are too modest to appear in uniform on special occasions, according to a letter from a member of the American Legion.

The letter follows:

"Armistice day brought with it some new revelations of viewpoint on the wearing of the uniform at ceremonies and celebrations, and, inasmuch as in the future we must confront the problem time after time, I believe the question should be settled now, one way or the other. I am neutral on the subject and am willing to do as the 'bunch' does."

"Since their discharge the majority of both officers and enlisted men have shown more than a little hesitancy in putting the uniform back on for special occasions. The true spirit of the Legion is not manifest in any parade when the majority of the men appear in civilian clothes and a handful march in uniform. On such occasions the uniformed man is in an embarrassing position, and he vows: 'Never again!' I think modesty is responsible for most men's preference for 'civvies' on formal occasions, but I know that some argue that they do not want to be in uniform with a bunch of men wearing officers' uniforms and insignia."

"I am sure there is not an ex-officer in the Legion who would not willingly discard his insignia if it operated as a barrier to harmony. But let's have a standard rule—either civvies or uniforms."

PUT ON PAYING POST SHOW

Fred W. Dralle, Casper, Wyo., Successfully Served as General Manager of "Stampede."

Fred W. Dralle of Casper, Wyo., chairman of the state executive committee of the American Legion, gained national recognition for his home-town post of the Legion, as general manager of "Stampede" which cost $20,000 to stage and which added $3,000 to the post treasury. Mr. Dralle taught school at Butte, Mont., and later was superintendent of schools at Roundup, Mont. He served for a term as clerk and recorder of Musselshell county, Mont., and is now an officer in the Standard Refinery of Casper.

Although he was 36 years old when the United States entered the war, Mr. Dralle enlisted in the Central Machine Gun Officers' Training school and was stationed at Camp Hancock, Ga.

VERY FEW WILL BE DROPPED

Legionnaires Are Rushing to Pay 1921 Post Dues; Many New Members Being Added.

The 10,000 post adjutants of the American Legion, according to reports reaching national headquarters from all over the country, are finding themselves now in the busiest weeks of the years as regards work.

The rush of Legionnaires to get in their 1921 post dues within the time limit set, with the penalty of being dropped from membership, if delinquent after that date, piled necessary clerical and other detail work onto the shoulders of post adjutants in an unprecedented manner.

To judge by the returns thus far available, the list of men to be dropped from membership for non-payment of their 1921 post dues within the specified time will be only a small fraction of the Legion and will be more than offset by the thousands of new members already obtained in the membership drives of various departments.

SENATE TO HAVE MANY NEW FACES

CAMERON OF ARIZONA SUCCEEDS SMITH, WHO GOES ON THE BOUNDARY COMMISSION.

LATTER LONG IN WASHINGTON

Weller, New Republican Senator From Maryland, Was a Bunkie of Weeks in the Navy—Harrell Displaces Gore, the Blind Statesman.

By EDWARD B. CLARK.

Washington.—When President-elect Harding walks into the senate chamber on March 4 to witness the induction into office of Calvin Coolidge as Vice President of the United States, he will see the faces of many new senators who have just taken the oath of allegiance and the oath of office.

Taking the list of states alphabetically, there is a change almost at the outset. Ralph H. Cameron of Arizona succeeds Marcus Aurelius Smith, Democrat, who has been in congress, either as a delegate from the territory of Arizona or as a senator from the newly created state, since the first days of the Fiftyeth congress, which had its beginning more than thirty-two years ago.

Senator Smith recently was appointed by the President as a member of the international boundary commission, an office which he will take as soon as his term as senator expires. The senate unanimously confirmed his nomination for the place.

Arkansas sends a new senator to congress, a Democrat, in the person of Thaddeus H. Caraway, who succeeds William F. Kirby. California has displaced a Democrat, James D. Phelan, with a Republican, Samuel M. Shortridge. Colorado has returned a Republican, Samuel D. Nicholson, to take the place of Charles S. Thomas.

Weller Was Sailor With Weeks.

It is not necessary to go through the whole list of changes, because doubtless the country generally knows who is to be who if not "what is to be what" in the next senate of the United States, but there are one or two of the passing ones, as well as one or two of the incoming ones, about whose departure and incoming there is something of special interest.

Ovington E. Weller is a new Republican senator from Maryland, and now that state is represented by two men of the same party faith for the first time in a great many years. Weller in his time has been a sailor, having graduated from the United States Naval academy in 1881. During the last campaign John W. Weeks, former United States senator from Massachusetts, was one of the managers of the Republican presidential campaign, with headquarters in New York city. Mr. Weeks, it soon was discovered, took a strong personal interest in the campaign of Mr. Weller. The Massachusetts man, of course, was interested in the success of all Republicans, but his concern in the Weller case was marked. Later the interest was explained. Weeks and Weller were classmates at Annapolis and sailed together, both as academy midshipmen on the training ship of the school and later as ensigns on the warships of their country.

There is interest in all circles in Washington in the incoming of the newly-elected senator from Oklahoma, a Republican, J. W. Harrell, who will displace the blind senator, Thomas Pryor Gore. Mr. Gore has been in Washington a good many years, and for reasons other than his blindness he has been a well known figure.

Norbeck Was a Wood Supporter. Peter Norbeck will be a new Republican senator from South Dakota. He has just finished a term as governor of his state and it was he who made a picturesque canvass of South Dakota last winter in behalf of the cause of Leonard Wood, who was seeking endorsement for his candidacy for the Republican nomination for the Presidency.

There are other changes to come and several men who have been strong personal favorites with the remaining senators, irrespective of party, will sever their connection with public life in Washington at noon on March 4 next. In the senate, while party feeling frequently runs high, there are strong personal friendships always existing between some of the Republicans and some of the Democrats. For instance, while New England and South Carolina seldom "hitch up" politically, there was once upon a time a tie of personal friendship between Benjamin Tillman of South Carolina and William E. Chandler of New Hampshire. Other cases of like kind could be cited. The blood of friendship frequently is thicker than the water of politics.

Cox's Visit to Washington. James M. Cox came to Washington, saw the President and a score of his party leaders, secured passports for himself and Mrs. Cox, and made other preparations for his departure for Europe, where he will present letters from the President of the United States and other officials of government, and will see everything that he wants to see under the most favorable official auspices.

The visit of Mr. Cox to Washington was of deep interest to party men. With some of the leaders he went over the whole situation, and plans were laid for a vigorous campaign for what perhaps not invidiously may be called the resuscitation of Democracy in the land from the effects of the recent defeat. It can be said that if there was any inward feeling of despair over the situation on the part of Mr. Cox, or any of the Democrats with whom he conferred, it was not apparent. They all said that political parties had been seemingly down and out before this day; that the Republicans, like the Democrats, had had their experiences, and that revival always had come.

The Democratic national committee already has started its work for the next campaign. Its high desire is to cut down the Republican representation in congress at the election one year from next November. Already the field has been looked over, the "soft places" noted and the tactics and the strategy of the fight to come have been given due consideration.

The Republicans, like the Democrats, already are at work. No one knows yet whether Will H. Hays, chairman of the Republican national committee, will continue as such after he has taken the place in Mr. Harding's cabinet which it is generally believed he is to be offered.

Think Cox Will Remain Leader.

The Republican committee has taken note of the activities of the Democratic national committee, and its members watched with interest the results of the conferences which Mr. Cox had with his party committeemen. It seems generally to be believed in Washington that James M. Cox will continue to be the recognized leader of Democratic endeavor and Democratic ambition in the country until the next campaign, or until possible events shall remove him from the field and put some other Democrat in his place.

The members of the Republican national committee have just appointed a subcommittee to consider the question of party organization in the South, and the, to them, great question of the chance of securing in the future Republican success in some of the southern states. The results in Tennessee, Oklahoma and some border states at the last election gave an additional fillip to the hope of the Republican national committeemen that the party may make further inroads in the southern states at the next election.

Republicans See Chances in South.

Some Republicans have been digging into the history of comparatively recent elections in the southern states. One thing which they have turned up and which has attracted some attention is that when William H. Taft ran for the presidency in 1908 and was elected by such a great majority, he carried three congressional districts in Georgia by substantial majorities. In not one of these districts was there a Republican candidate for congress, the advance feeling being that there was no possibility that the party could carry the districts. After the election was over and the Republicans looked on the Taft majorities in these three Georgia districts, they were sorry they had not put candidates in the field for election to congress.

The Democrats declare that the Republicans are hunting something more elusive than will-o'-the-wisps in the South, but there is an evident determination on the part of the national committeemen to go ahead and to see if their party cannot be made a real election factor in every state in the Union. A committee has been appointed with C. Bascom Slemp, Republican representative in congress from Virginia, to undertake a study of the Southern situation and to report to the national committee.

Mr. and Mrs. Harding Both Baptists.

For the first time since McKinley's day a President of the United States has been elected who is a member of the church to which his wife belongs. Mr. and Mrs. Warren G. Harding are Baptists. Roosevelt belonged to the Dutch Reformed church, and his wife was an Episcopalian; Taft is a Unitarian and his wife an Episcopalian; and Wilson is a Presbyterian and his wife is an Episcopalian.

There is curiosity in Washington to know with what particular Baptist congregation Mr. and Mrs. Harding will elect to worship. There are several large Baptist churches in Washington and a few small inconspicuous ones. It may be that the Hardings will choose one of the larger churches, but if they should prefer to go to one of the smaller places of worship they will be doing a certain kind of up-building missionary work, for the attendance of a President of the United States at any church means its prosperity for the time being at any rate, and generally the impetus which it gets from such attendance enables it to maintain in the years to come a wider field of influence.

The First Baptist church of Washington has a handsome house of worship at the present time. It began its existence in the year 1802, and its first house of worship after having been sold was later converted into Ford's theater, the building in which President Lincoln was assassinated.

Calvary Baptist, it is said, has one of the largest Sunday schools in the world. It is an institutional church, hard-working and noted for its religious effort. Neither this nor the First church ever has been regularly attended by a President of the United States, for the fact is that Mr. Harding is the first Baptist ever elected to the office.

Adopting Suggestions.

Wife—Dear, I want you to buy me a pearl necklace.

Husband—But pearls, my love, are signs of tears.

Wife—All right; I'll cry till I get it.

Fear to Tell Own Name.
Among the Kayans, a tribe of the Philippines, it is a breach of manners to ask a man what his name is. If a white man does so through ignorance the man will turn to a bystander and ask that the stranger, who does not know the customs, may be informed. If a man tells his own name the evil spirits will hear him and can more readily do him harm.

Van Buren's Attar of Roses.
The jar of attar of roses which was presented Martin Van Buren when he was President and which was for a time on exhibition in the patent office was stolen within a few years of being placed there. The exact date of the theft is not known, but it was probably between 1850 and 1860.

Fashion Note.
"Who made you?" said the bishop, stopping to pat a little darling on her head of golden curls. "God," came the prompt answer, to be swiftly followed by the further information, "and he made me asked."—London Morning Post.

VETERANS' WAR MEMORIAL

Fighting Men of Three Wars Identified With Home Erected in Hoquiam, Washington.

With the recent completion of the American Veterans' building, a war memorial to fighting men of all American wars, the city of Hoquiam, Wash., has added to its architectural attractions a well-constructed and artistic edifice. The erection of the home was made possible by the activities of members of the American Legion, United Spanish War Veterans and Grand Army of the Republic.

The building is a three-story structure, in the downtown district. The ground floor will be occupied by a bank and on the other floors are a large rest room, a lodge and ball-room and a ladies' rest room.

Among the speakers at the formal dedication of the memorial was Robert A. LeRoux, field organizer of national headquarters of the Legion.

LEGION MEMBERS AID POLICE

Former Service Men in Various Cities Lend Assistance in Combating Crime Wave.

In conformity with the stand for law and order which the American Legion takes, thousands of Legionnaires are assisting the police in combating the crime wave, which has menaced life and property in larger cities all over the country, according to reports received at Legion national headquarters.

New York department headquarters promptly offered to put 5,000 veterans on the streets to assist the police when the orgy of murder and robbery was at its height, while during the Christmas season a number of Legion members aided in eliminating holdups in the shopping district by serving as guards in large retail stores and wholesale houses.

Five hundred St. Louis Legionnaires assisted the police in patrolling the city and rounding up suspicious characters. At St. Paul, Minn., the services of Legion members were volunteered in the formation of a series of network patrols.

Legion leaders explained that their organization in volunteering the services of its members for maintaining law and order did not imply that the police were inefficient, but that there was recognition that an abnormal situation existed under which the Legion was pledged to act if it wished to live up to the principles of its constitution.

IS LEADER IN AMERICANISM

Philip R. Bangs of Grand Forks, N. D., Also Vice Commander of His State Department.

One of the leaders in Americanism in the Northwest is Philip R. Bangs of Grand Forks, N. D., who was elected vice commander of the North Dakota department of the American Legion. As a doughboy and a scout in the intelligence section of the Thirty-fifth division, Mr. Bangs served overseas. He was wounded by shell fire in the right shoulder during the Argonne-Meuse offensive.

Mr. Bangs was adjutant of the Legion post at Grand Forks, state chairman of the Americanism committee, and a member of the national Americanism commission of the Legion. A graduate of the law department of the University of North Dakota, Mr. Bangs is now engaged in the practice of law in Grand Forks.

Proposed Oregon Law.
The option of a $2,000 farm or home loan or cash compensation at the rate of $15 a month of service for Oregon veterans of the World war will be granted, if a bill sponsored by the Legion in the state legislature is passed.

KANSAS MEN CHOOSE FLOYD

Arkansas City Man Selected as Chairman of State Americanization Committee.

Kansas members of the American Legion have selected as chairman of their state Americanization committee John R. Floyd of Arkansas City, a prominent insurance man and third vice president of the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Floyd was commissioned a first lieutenant at the second officers' training camp at Fort Sheridan. He served at Camp Grant, Ill., Jefferson Barracks, Mo., and Camp Dodge, Ia., with the Eighty-sixth division and at various times as insurance, signal, ordnance and athletic officer and as judge advocate.

In 1918, Mr. Floyd was appointed district manager for a well known insurance company with headquarters at Arkansas City and in the year following his discharge from the service wrote the largest number of applications ever written in his state in one year for his company, and ranked fifth in the United States. He has served in various offices in Arkansas City post and as a member at large of the Legion state executive committee.

WHEN TO WEAR THE UNIFORM

Former Service Men Inclined to Be Too Modest in Appearing in Army Togs.

Former service men are too modest to appear in uniform on special occasions, according to a letter from a member of the American Legion.

The letter follows:

"Armistice day brought with it some new revelations of viewpoint on the wearing of the uniform at ceremonies and celebrations, and, inasmuch as in the future we must confront the problem time after time, I believe the question should be settled now, one way or the other. I am neutral on the subject and am willing to do as the 'bunch' does."

"Since their discharge the majority of both officers and enlisted men have shown more than a little hesitancy in putting the uniform back on for special occasions. The true spirit of the Legion is not manifest in any parade when the majority of the men appear in civilian clothes and a handful march in uniform. On such occasions the uniformed man is in an embarrassing position, and he vows: 'Never again!' I think modesty is responsible for most men's preference for 'civvies' on formal occasions, but I know that some argue that they do not want to be in uniform with a bunch of men wearing officers' uniforms and insignia."

"I am sure there is not an ex-officer in the Legion who would not willingly discard his insignia if it operated as a barrier to harmony. But let's have a standard rule—either civvies or uniforms."

PUT ON PAYING POST SHOW

Fred W. Dralle, Casper, Wyo., Successfully Served as General Manager of "Stampede."

Fred W. Dralle of Casper, Wyo., chairman of the state executive committee of the American Legion, gained national recognition for his home-town post of the Legion, as general manager of "Stampede" which cost $20,000 to stage and which added $3,000 to the post treasury.

Mr. Dralle taught school at Butte, Mont., and later was superintendent of schools at Roundup, Mont. He served for a term as clerk and recorder of Musselshell county, Mont., and is now an officer in the Standard Refinery of Casper.

Although he was 36 years old when the United States entered the war, Mr. Dralle enlisted in the Central Machine Gun Officers' Training school and was stationed at Camp Hancock, Ga.

VERY FEW WILL BE DROPPED

Legionnaires Are Rushing to Pay 1921 Post Dues; Many New Members Being Added.

The 10,000 post adjutants of the American Legion, according to reports reaching national headquarters from all over the country, are finding themselves now in the busiest weeks of the years as regards work.

The rush of Legionnaires to get in their 1921 post dues within the time limit set, with the penalty of being dropped from membership, if delinquent after that date, piled necessary clerical and other detail work onto the shoulders of post adjutants in an unprecedented manner.

To judge by the returns thus far available, the list of men to be dropped from membership for non-payment of their 1921 post dues within the specified time will be only a small fraction of the Legion and will be more than offset by the thousands of new members already obtained in the membership drives of various departments.

SENATE TO HAVE MANY NEW FACES

CAMERON OF ARIZONA SUCCEEDS SMITH, WHO GOES ON THE BOUNDARY COMMISSION.

LATTER LONG IN WASHINGTON

Weller, New Republican Senator From Maryland, Was a Bunkie of Weeks in the Navy—Harrell Displaces Gore, the Blind Statesman.

By EDWARD B. CLARK.

Washington.—When President-elect Harding walks into the senate chamber on March 4 to witness the induction into office of Calvin Coolidge as Vice President of the United States, he will see the faces of many new senators who have just taken the oath of allegiance and the oath of office.

Taking the list of states alphabetically, there is a change almost at the outset. Ralph H. Cameron of Arizona succeeds Marcus Aurelius Smith, Democrat, who has been in congress, either as a delegate from the territory of Arizona or as a senator from the newly created state, since the first days of the Fiftieth congress, which had its beginning more than thirty-two years ago.

Senator Smith recently was appointed by the President as a member of the international boundary commission, an office which he will take as soon as his term as senator expires. The senate unanimously confirmed his nomination for the place.

Arkansas sends a new senator to congress, a Democrat, in the person of Thaddeus H. Curaway, who succeeds William F. Kirby. California has displaced a Democrat, James D. Phelan, with a Republican, Samuel M. Shortridge. Colorado has returned a Republican, Samuel D. Nicholson, to take the place of Charles S. Thomas.

Weller Was Sailor With Weeks.

It is not necessary to go through the whole list of changes, because doubtless the country generally knows who is to be who if not "what is to be what" in the next senate of the United States, but there are one or two of the passing ones, as well as one or two of the incoming ones, about whose departure and incoming there is something of special interest.

Ovington E. Weller is a new Republican senator from Maryland, and now that state is represented by two men of the same party faith for the first time in a great many years. Weller in his time has been a sailor, having graduated from the United States Naval academy in 1881. During the last campaign John W. Weeks, former United States senator from Massachusetts, was one of the managers of the Republican presidential campaign, with headquarters in New York city. Mr. Weeks, it soon was discovered, took a strong personal interest in the campaign of Mr. Weller. The Massachusetts man, of course, was interested in the success of all Republicans, but his concern in the Weller case was explained. Weeks and Weller were classmates at Annapolis and sailed together, both as academy midshipmen on the training ship of the school and later as ensigns on the warships of their country.

There is interest in all circles in Washington in the incoming of the newly-elected senator from Oklahoma, a Republican, J. W. Harrell, who will displace the blind senator, Thomas Pryor Gore. Mr. Gore has been in Washington a good many years, and for reasons other than his blindness he has been a well known figure.

Norbeck Was a Wood Supporter. Peter Norbeck will be a new Republican senator from South Dakota. He has just finished a term as governor of his state and it was he who made a picturesque canvass of South Dakota last winter in behalf of the cause of Leonard Wood, who was seeking endorsement for his candidacy for the Republican nomination for the Presidency.

There are other changes to come and several men who have been strong personal favorites with the remaining senators, irrespective of party, will sever their connection with public life in Washington at noon on March 4 next. In the senate, while party feeling frequently runs high, there are strong personal friendships always existing between some of the Republicans and some of the Democrats. For instance, while New England and South Carolina seldom "hitch up" politically, there was once upon a time a tie of personal friendship between Benjamin Tillman of South Carolina and William E. Chandler of New Hampshire. Other cases of like kind could be cited. The blood of friendship frequently is thicker than the water of politics.

Cox's Visit to Washington. James M. Cox came to Washington, saw the President and a score of his party leaders, secured passports for himself and Mrs. Cox, and made other preparations for his departure for Europe, where he will present letters from the President of the United States and other officials of government, and will see everything that he wants to see under the most favorable official auspices.

The visit of Mr. Cox to Washington was of deep interest to party men. With some of the leaders he went over the whole situation, and plans were laid for a vigorous campaign for what perhaps not invidiously may be called the resuscitation of Democracy in the land from the effects of the recent defeat. It can be said that if there was any inward feeling of despair over the situation on the part of Mr. Cox, or any of the Democrats with whom he conferred, it was not apparent. They all said that political parties had been seemingly down and out before this day; that the Republicans, like the Democrats, had had their experiences, and that revival always had come.

The Democratic national committee already has started its work for the next campaign. Its high desire is to cut down the Republican representation in congress at the election one year from next November. Already the field has been looked over, the "soft places" noted and the tactics and the strategy of the fight to come have been given due consideration.

The Republicans, like the Democrats, already are at work. No one knows yet whether Will H. Hays, chairman of the Republican national committee, will continue as such after he has taken the place in Mr. Harding's cabinet which it is generally believed he is to be offered.

Think Cox Will Remain Leader. The Republican committee has taken note of the activities of the Democratic national committee, and its members watched with interest the results of the conferences which Mr. Cox had with his party committeemen. It seems generally to be believed in Washington that James M. Cox will continue to be the recognized leader of Democratic endeavor and Democratic ambition in the country until the next campaign, or until possible events shall remove him from the field and put some other Democrat in his place.

The members of the Republican national committee have just appointed a subcommittee to consider the question of party organization in the South, and the, to them, great question of the chance of securing in the future Republican success in some of the southern states. The results in Tennessee, Oklahoma and some border states at the last election gave an additional fillip to the hope of the Republican national committeemen that the party may make further inroads in the southern states at the next election.

Republicans See Chances in South. Some Republicans have been digging into the history of comparatively recent elections in the southern states. One thing which they have turned up and which has attracted some attention is that when William H. Taft ran for the presidency in 1908 and was elected by such a great majority, he carried three congressional districts in Georgia by substantial majorities. In not one of these districts was there a Republican candidate for congress, the advance feeling being that there was no possibility that the party could carry the districts. After the election was over and the Republicans looked on the Taft majorities in these three Georgia districts, they were sorry they had not put candidates in the field for election to congress.

The Democrats declare that the Republicans are hunting something more elusive than will-o'-the-wisps in the South, but there is an evident determination on the part of the national committeemen to go ahead and to see if their party cannot be made a real election factor in every state in the Union. A committee has been appointed with C. Bascom Slemm, Republican representative in congress from Virginia, to undertake a study of the Southern situation and to report to the national committee.

Mr. and Mrs. Harding Both Baptists. For the first time since McKinley's day a President of the United States has been elected who is a member of the church to which his wife belongs. Mr. and Mrs. Warren G. Harding are Baptists. Roosevelt belonged to the Dutch Reformed church, and his wife was an Episcopalian; Taft is a Unitarian and his wife an Episcopalian; and Wilson is a Presbyterian and his wife is an Episcopalian.

There is curiosity in Washington to know with what particular Baptist congregation Mr. and Mrs. Harding will elect to worship. There are several large Baptist churches in Washington and a few small inconspicuous ones. It may be that the Hardings will choose one of the larger churches, but if they should prefer to go to one of the smaller places of worship they will be doing a certain kind of up-building missionary work, for the attendance of a President of the United States at any church means its prosperity for the time being at any rate, and generally the impetus which it gets from such attendance enables it to maintain in the years to come a wider field of influence.

The First Baptist church of Washington has a handsome house of worship at the present time. It began its existence in the year 1802, and its first house of worship after having been sold was later converted into Ford's theater, the building in which President Lincoln was assassinated.

Calvary Baptist, it is said, has one of the largest Sunday schools in the world. It is an institutional church, hard-working and noted for its religious effort. Neither this nor the First church ever has been regularly attended by a President of the United States, for the fact is that Mr. Harding is the first Baptist ever elected to the office.

Adopting Suggestions. Wife—Dear, I want you to buy me a pearl necklace. Husband—But pearls, my love, are signs of tears. Wife—All right; I'll cry till I get it.

Blouses Play Many Roles

IN BLouses in suits, it appears that they are in a gracious mood. They have been generous in giving us a variety of styles, developed in the use of materials or crepe de chine, silk and satins. To the blouse, either plain or changed, has been added, providing the blouse with the charm of novelty. But nothing will be so beautiful and dainty georgette, the affections of women, except those sheer cotton fabrics that make it.

The story of spring blouses therefore opens with those made of georgette, followed by lingerie blouses of voile, batiste, lawn or similar cottons and closes with a chapter on various other materials and styles. This is a brief summing up of a long story, for there is so much variety in the development of blouses that everyday presents something new in details for consideration. Lingerie blouses employ fine tucks, drawn work and other needlework for their decoration together with the lingerie laces, val, cluny, Irish crochet and filet. The best of them are hand made, with a considerable number of tailored styles among them having high necks and long sleeves.

The most notable new feature in georgette blouses is the introduction of the "tie-on" styles. These are blouses that form their own girdle, being cut to extend below the waist line at the front and to form a sash or girdle at the sides and back. The georgette blouse is called upon to give the dress its character, transforming a street suit or separate skirt into a formal costume. The blouse pictured is an excellent model for such a purpose, made with a long peplum and handsomely embroidered. Soft crepe de chine is treated in the same way and both these fabrics provide a wonderful medium for lovely and lively colors, but the long peplum is unusual in the styles—an exception to the rule of short blouses for spring.

Those Frilly Taffeta Frocks

DESIGNERS just cannot keep away from frills when the season brings in a vogue for taffeta—especially when colors are lively. Taffeta is a sprightly fabric that provides most of its own trimming, and when two-toned, or changeable silks are presented, the trimming effects possible with them are not to be resisted. Even in dark colors and black, taffeta and frills remain cheerful and alluring. In the picture above a light, changeable taffeta at the left and a black, embellished with lace at the right, are among the most pleasing of the new afternoon frocks.

Both these dresses are made with plain underskirts and long tunics. The tunic in the light dress is cut in long panels rounded at the bottom, that recall the much-admired petal skirts of last year. The panels are edged with double frills of the taffeta, but there are no frills on the bodice. Its only decoration appears in a little needle work at each side which extends below the waistline and is repeated on each of the panels. This absence of frills on the bodice makes opportunity for lace or net collar and cuffs. The crushed girdle about the waist is made of the taffeta.

Deep cream or ecru nets and laces that are now basking in fashion's smile, find themselves placed to the best advantage on black. The dress

A Party Frock Girdle.

A ribbon and flower girdle, is one of the daintiest of additions to a girl's party dress, and it can be home-made too. Narrow silver or delicately tinted ribbons are used, and dainty artificial flowers are caught on along the edge. The smaller the flowers the better, such as wee rosebuds, daisies, violets and forget-me-nots. The silver ribbons with picot edges in color make attractive girdles of this sort. The color of the edge is brought out again in the flowers scattered over the ribbon.

EVEN ONE HOT DISH WILL MAKE SCHOOL LUNCH MORE ENJOYABLE

The Larger Girls Take Turns in Preparing Soup or Cocoa for the School.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In the small rural school with only one teacher, it is still the common custom for the pupils to bring their lunches. The parents of the children oftentimes are wide-awake to how valuable the hot lunch has been found to be in the city schools, but they cannot see, under the existing circumstances in their school, how such an innovation can be managed.

Experience has proved that the child who has even one hot dish at noon does much better, mentally and physically, than the one who has only cold food, especially in winter weather. The country child has quite as much right to the benefits of the practice as has the city child. Usually when there is a concerted will to provide something of the sort, a way is found.

The situation, however, will require a teacher of ingenuity and of enthusiasm for her work. The simplest equipment includes a large kettle suitable to be used on the stove which heats the schoolhouse, measuring cup and spoons, paring knife, mixing spoon, dish pans, and towels. It will usually be possible for the boys to make a set of shelves for the dishes, using box lumber if no other is available, and for the girls to make curtains or other coverings for protection from dust. The pupils will, as a rule, be found willing to bring plates, cups, bowls, and spoons from home, if this is necessary, in order to keep down expenses. A fireless cooker can easily be made by the pupils as a class exercise. In this a hot dish for lunch can be prepared before school. The fireless cooker is convenient for meat stews, meat and bean soups, cereal mushes, and many other dishes that require long cooking.

The recipes for the dishes cooked for lunch may be given to the older girls in school, discussed in class, and tried at home. The special dish for the day, which in winter is usually hot and in summer more often cold, can be prepared and served at noon by the girls in turn, working in groups. It will often be necessary to serve the food to the children at their seats—a practice which is not especially objectionable if the schoolhouse is clean and well ventilated, the desks carefully cleaned before meals, and the building thoroughly screened to keep out flies, which are always dangerous around food, since they can convey to it the bacteria which cause intestinal and other diseases.

Clean Hands Essential.

Clean hands should always be insisted upon, as well as clean spoons, dishes, etc., and individual drinking cups. Furthermore, children should be taught not to drink out of each other's cups or glasses or to use one another's spoons or forks.

It is seldom desirable to prepare more than one dish a day in a small school, and this should, for the sake of variety, differ from day to day. The others can be brought from home. The choice of the dish to be cooked should be determined partly by what it is possible to do in the way of cooking at the school, partly by what purchased or home-grown food is available, and what the school garden or neighboring fields or woods afford, and partly by what the teacher has learned from experience is needed to go with the foods brought from home. The noonday meal as a whole will then be appetizing and will provide the needed nutrients as they are now understood.

BEANS VERY POPULAR AS ECONOMICAL FOOD

They Are One of Cheapest Sources of Protein.

Used Chiefly as a Meat Substitute and a Cupful Equals in Food Value a Quarter of a Pound of Juicy Sirloin Steak.

Beans, though higher in price than they were several years ago, are still among the cheaper foods that can be bought today. They are one of the cheapest sources of protein and may be used to help supply this valuable food constituent in the diet, according to United States Department of Agriculture specialists. They are known chiefly as a meat substitute dish. A cup of baked beans, in which a third of a cup of dried beans are used, furnishes as much protein as a quarter of a pound of sirloin steak. Obviously the third of a cup of dried beans is much the cheaper to purchase. A pound of beef as purchased usually has some refuse in the form of skin, bone and gristle, while a pound of beans has practically no refuse. From this standpoint, therefore, as well as the difference in price, the housewife who finds her food allowance growing low will do well to use beans often in place of meat.

The cheaper legumes, beans, peas, etc., should not be depended upon as the sole source of protein for a great length of time. Milk, cheese, eggs, or meat should furnish some of the protein in a week's dietary.

There is little difference in food value among the many common varieties of beans, with the exception of the soy bean, which is richer in protein and in fat than the ordinary beans. All legumes should be thoroughly cooked. Long cooking at moderate heat is best.

A favorite and standard recipe for baking beans is the following: Soak the beans over night, then rinse and boil them until the skins crack when blown upon, but the beans are not quite soft. Use one-half pound of salt pork to one quart of beans. Cut the pork nearly through the rind and add before boiling the beans. After boiling, pour into the bean pot, insert the pork, the cut rind being level with the top of the beans. Add a pint of water used for boiling, having first mixed with the water a teaspoonful of salt and two tablespoons of molasses. The water should come about to the surface of the contents. Bake six to eight hours, adding more water when needed to prevent the top drying or burning. Beans, when done, should be thoroughly softened, but not mushy, and should retain their shape.

Baked-Bean Croquettes.

1 cupful baked beans, 1/2 teaspoonful salt, 1/2 cupful onion pulp, 1/2 teaspoonful pepper, 1 teaspoonful onion juice, 2 tablespoonfuls flour, 1/2 cupful milk, 1 tablespoonful fat.

Melt the fat, stir in the flour, salt, and pepper and mix with the cold milk. Cook until thick and smooth, stirring constantly. Combine this with the beans to which the onion juice has been added. Let stand for two or three hours; then shape as for croquettes. Roll in bread crumbs, then in beaten egg, then in bread crumbs again. Place them in deep fat and cook until nicely browned. Tomato sauce may be served with these croquettes. A recipe for it follows:

Tomato Sauce.

1 cupful tomato juice, 1 sliced onion, 1 tablespoonful fat, 1/2 teaspoonful pepper, 1/2 teaspoonful salt.

Melt the fat and stir in the flour and seasonings. Add the tomato juice and cook until thickened, stirring constantly.

Bean Loaf.

1 pint cold cooked beans, 1 tablespoonful finely chopped onion, 1 egg, 2 tablespoonfuls to 1 cupful bread crumbs, 1/2 cupful salt and pepper.

Combine the ingredients and shape into a loaf. Place strips of bacon on top of loaf. Bake 25 minutes. Tomato sauce may be served with this loaf.

This loaf should be used in place of meat in the menu and may be served with escalloped tomatoes, or onions, or creamed cauliflower.

Kidney-Bean Stew.

1/2 cupful dried kidney beans, 3 small potatoes (diced), 1 onion, 2 pints water, 1/2 teaspoonful salt, 1/2 cupful tomato juice, 1/2 cupful fat.

Soak beans overnight. Add one quart of water and cook until half done. Add the other ingredients and cook slowly until all ingredients are tender. Add more water if necessary.

This dish may be served in place of meat and other cooked vegetables in a meal. A fruit salad or a salad made of green vegetables, such as cucumbers or radishes, may be used in such a menu.

HOUSEHOLD FACTS

Cakes containing no shortening may be baked in ungreased pans.

If you wish your bread to have a soft crust wrap in a clean cloth as soon as it comes from the oven.

THE VERSATILE MODE IN SUITS

THE versatile mode presents us with conflicting silhouettes in suits and a variety of styles to choose from, and leaves us to pronounce our own judgment on them. The straight and the flaring box-coat seem destined to a great success; they are developed with many ingenious variations in lines and trimmings, and have a youthfulness of style that is a great asset. But the box coat has rivals that boast the charm of novelty, in suits that have rippling peplums on their coats, and in others that have the appearance of frocks. A few things are assured; among them the success of the flaring coat sleeve on box coats, the continued use of embroidery, the vogue of slender lines and straight skirts.

Two suits very different from each other in outline, invite comparison, in the picture above. One has a straight box coat and the other a coat with a rippling peplum. The first suit will find many admirers among women who are striving to achieve the appearance of slenderness, and the other will appeal to those who must make up for a lack of curves in figures a little too slender. The woman of normal weight does not have to concern herself with these things, but only to consider which style is most becoming. The suit at the left has a high waistline and is embellished with a little embroidery matching it in color. The coat has a single fastening at the bust line in link buttons, and they form the finish for the plain coat sleeve.

The box coat employs silk braid, edged with a narrow plaiting of ribbon and bone buttons for decoration. A tie at the front of the collar provides a pretty new touch, and the sleeves are relieved from entire plainness by three buttons and buttonholes at the wrists. Neither of these suits accepts the flaring sleeve, but both adopt the straight skirt.

To Spice Up the Wardrobe

HATS have long been conceded the place of first importance in the matter of smart dressing—they do wonders for those who know how to select them—but up-to-date women are inclined to dispute this supremacy. Blouses, smocks and small coats or jackets that will dress one up to any degree of formality are making things interesting for millinery. These brilliant garments rival hats in gay beauty and are the most convenient of belongings, for they are not difficult to make, and they tone up the wardrobe without any great expenditure of time or money.

A lovely example which may be classed as either a coat or a smock appears in the illustration above. Blue and silver are combined in the supple tissue that makes a little coat posed over a blouse of fine net with vest of embroidered georgette and a girdle of blue velvet ribbon. This affair is equal to comparison with any of the brilliant headresses and coiffure ornaments that may bear it company at the theater or dance. It is only one of many fine blouses that may be toned down or toned up by the headwear that is worn with them.

There are other accessories that spice up the toilette. There are myriad strings of beads in all colors—in crystal, ivory, onyx, gold, silver, pearl and all sorts of mock jewels. There are chains and charms from China that cannot be overlooked and an endless variety of necklaces that add color or sparkle or interest to frocks. Bead girdles, and others made of beads and silk cord, find themselves conspicuously placed on afternoon and evening frocks. Fans have reappeared in many varieties to vie with those of ostrich feathers and more familiar accessories—neckwear and handkerchiefs—are growing more complicated with the introduction of color and variety of design.

SUNDAY STORM

The heavy snowfall of Sunday came as a surprise, being the first real snow storm of the winter. All day Sunday the snow fell, and the Weather Bureau is authority for the statement that it was the heaviest single day's snowstorm for the past 30 years as 16 inches fell, in the memorable four days storm last February less than 12 inches fell, but then it was snow upon snow, and this year the ground was bare.

Very few people ventured out Sunday, and some of these had tough experiences.

Early in the day the car line from Weymouth to South Weymouth and Rockland was put out of commission the East Weymouth and Braintree line and also the route from East Weymouth to North Weymouth and Quincy Point, the line to Hingham, and the Quincy avenue line to Quincy. But was kept open, and cars were run nearly on schedule.

The steam trains were also delayed and did not get back to schedule until Monday noon. The Sunday evening train to Boston was over two hours making the trip from East Weymouth.

Supt. Johnson was out early with his snow leveller, and is to be congratulated on keeping the main roads open as well as he did.

Although Monday was pleasant, the no-school signal was sounded, because the travel was so bad. Soon however, the streets were in better condition than some of the surrounding towns. However, it was not much of a day for automobiles and those that ventured out were stalled and in some cases abandoned.

The Weather Bureau predicted on the morning of the holiday another big storm, and marred the pleasures of the day. Fortunately the storm went out to sea.

The bus line on Pleasant street, between East Weymouth and South Weymouth, rendering very good service in spite of the storm. The high temperature of Wednesday carried off the snow rapidly and made the walking horrid in crossing the streets, but fortunately it did not rain.

Free Maintenance Service

Finding some of our consumers are unaware of our maintenance service, we give below a brief outline of this benefit to you.

Without charge, we will adjust or regulate any gas appliance upon request. This includes not only gas lights and gas ranges but also water heaters, room heaters, and in fact any gas burning appliance. In case any new parts are needed, the cost of this material alone will be charged.

Many of our customers have had their lights so long that they are now out of date. In many cases it will be cheaper to buy a new light than try to repair an old one. In order to give our customers an opportunity to secure more modern lights, we will allow 50c for your old light wherever a new light is purchased. Some of our consumers having other means of lighting, have allowed their gas lights to get in a condition where it would be impossible to use them when they are needed. We would like to make a suggestion that these gas lights be put in order and used regularly to insure being ready when needed.

Just explain what you need and it will receive immediate attention.

Hospital Association

Has Balance of $4,996.09

The annual meeting of the Weymouth Hospital Association was held on Monday evening at the Town Offices at East Weymouth. Reports were made by the Trustees, Treasurer and Auditor, which are printed in full below:

TRUSTEES REPORT

Dr. Rudolph Jacoby for the Board of Trustees submitted the following report:

To the Members of Weymouth Hospital Association:
In making a report at this time I will give a brief resume of the events leading up to the present status of this association. Realizing the need of a hospital in the town of Weymouth, the physicians of the town in 1906 under the leadership of Dr. J. C. Fraser, organized and formed an association called the Weymouth Hospital Fund Association, the first meeting being held Jan. 21, 1906.

At this time, committees were formed to investigate the cost of starting a hospital and the Ways and Means Committee was organized to ascertain the cost of maintaining the same. These committees worked diligently and on March 23, 1906, an appeal was made by a committee consisting of Dr. W. F. Hathaway, Dr. G. D. Bullock and Dr. J. C. Fraser to the citizens of the town of Weymouth to make voluntary contributions in order that an hospital might be started. On May 3, 1907, the Weymouth Hospital Association received its charter. At this time a wave of enthusiasm was created and during the next two or three years a few hundred dollars were raised by the holding of fairs and socials by the various women's organizations in the different parts of the town. The sum of money, however, that was raised, seemed to be insufficient to go ahead with and from this time the interest by the citizens of the town seemed to be lacking. For the next few years and until 1919, the corporation was kept intact solely by the efforts of the physicians of the town, this being necessary in order to keep the charter in standing.

As time passed the need of a hospital in the town became more crucial than ever and owing to the fact that the population and the industries in and about the town had increased, a committee was appointed by the association to investigate the question of establishing an hospital. Several locations were investigated, none of which seemed to be suitable. On June 22, 1920, this committee reported that the estate of the late Colonel W. W. Castle, located on Lake street, East Weymouth, could be bought for $12,000 and would be a very suitable location for the hospital. The committee strongly advised the purchasing of the property, in so far as the desirability of the location had been carefully investigated by them. The purchase of this particular property seemed to be imperative in as much as this seemed to be the best possible location in the town, because of its geographical location and the desirable arrangement of its buildings.

At a subsequent meeting of the board of trustees it was voted that this property be purchased at a sum not exceeding $12,000, and further that the president and secretary were authorized to execute and deliver to the First National Bank of Boston trustees, a note of the Weymouth Hospital Association in the sum of $10,000, payable in three years at 6% per annum, together with a mortgage or real estate to be conveyed to the association by said bank and in part payment therefor.

At this time there was in the treasury a sum of approximately $2300. Expending $2000 as an equity in the estate there would be only about $300 left in the treasury. This necessitated a strenuous campaign being conducted in order to raise money. It was therefore necessary to start a drive for the raising of funds for the association. This to be started on July 25 and to continue up to and including July 30.

The trustees were very fortunate in being able to secure the assistance of Dr. Henry W. Pollock, superintendent of the Massachusetts Homeopathic hospital, Boston. Dr. Pollock came to Weymouth bringing with him his chief engineer and plumber, took complete measurements of the buildings and made a general survey of the land. At a later date he again came to Weymouth, bringing with him Mr. Warren S. Hill of Kendall, Taylor Co., hospital architects of Boston. These services were rendered gratis by these unusually competent men. I am incorporating with my report the survey of the proposed hospital by Dr. Pollock.

In anticipation of the raising of a sufficient amount of money to start the hospital in the fall it was voted to proceed in the preparation of the land for farming purposes and to improve the place and grounds generally. A caretaker was hired by the executive committee and she was immediately put to work on the farm. All tillable and was turned over, fertilized and planted, not with the idea of getting a good crop in that season, because of the late date in starting, but it was felt that the land would be ready for the next year, when we expected the hospital would be in operation.

The drive campaign realized as is shown by the treasurer's report, $6726.35 together with a $160 liberty bond and 25 shares of stock, par value $1. This sum was insufficient to start the institution, but the trustees felt that the citizens of the town had been very generous because of the fact that at this time the industries generally began to close and consequently non-employment of the people resulted.

While the result of the drive was not as successful as the trustees had expected, they felt that the citizens under the circumstances had given them much encouragement. With the amount of money raised it did not seem feasible to go any further. It was necessary, however, to paint the buildings and the sum of $750 was expended for painting the house and barn. It was further necessary to make repairs on the outside of the buildings, all of which was done. At the present time the outside of the buildings are in excellent condition and under ordinary conditions should need no more repairing for some time.

It is the earnest desire of the trustees that during this present year the citizens of the town may again be appealed to, that an amount sufficient to start the hospital, may be raised. The cost of material has been constantly dropping and the figures, as detailed in Dr. Pollock's report can be considerably reduced. I would estimate that if the sum of $10,000 could be raised the association would have sufficient funds to equip the hospital in a way which would measure up to high standards and further would give us sufficient capital to make a start. I am firmly convinced that if the hospital was started there would be no difficulty in keeping the place filled with patients and also we would be self-supporting within a reasonably short time. The trustees have not felt that anything further could be done at present owing to the unsettled conditions generally.

I regret very much to mention that on October 5, 1920, the association suffered the loss of its dear and esteemed friend Mr. Albert P. Worthen, who was not only its vice-president and a member of the executive committee, but was also one of the pioneers, who were instrumental in keeping the organization intact for the past 15 years. After laboring to incorporate the association and draw up the by-laws Mr. Worthen in the past has made many generous contributions and has been its legal advisor, always having been willing to render inestimable assistance and counsel.

Respectfully submitted,
RUDOLPH JACOBY,
For the Trustees.

CHARMING, COZY BUNGALOW HOME

Has Five Comfortable Rooms Efficiently Arranged.

IS NOT EXPENSIVE TO BUILD

Exterior Is Distinctive and Very Pleasing—Kitchen So Arranged as to Be a Positive Joy to the Housewife.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 127 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

When buying or building a home, the average man and wife are interested in two things—price and appearance. They know how many rooms they need—if a small family a small house will serve, and vice versa. And as the tendency has seemed to drift toward the smaller family, the smaller house is more popular. When the bungalow first made its appearance on the western coast it was considered more or less of a freak. But the utility of this small attractive dwelling soon became apparent and the bungalow swept the country by storm. It solved the big problem—charm at a reasonable cost.

Today it is as popular in the Middle West as it is out on the coast and hundreds are being built every year. The housewife who cannot afford servants, and the housewife who cannot get them do not want to assume the drudgery involved in the upkeep of a large house. They turn to the small, compact, cozy bungalow as a solution. And it fills the bill admirably.

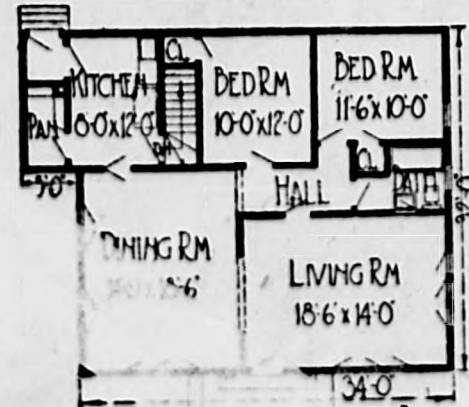

It would be hard to find a more attractive and appealing bungalow home than the one shown here. It represents a wonderful combination of charm and utility, an attractive exterior and well laid out interior. With these two qualities, a home is satisfactory.

Built of frame, painted an immaculate white, the house has a very hospitable entrance, one that beckons the passer-by. A glass-paned door opens the way into the house. It is set in an artistic frame, so to speak, with a quaint hood above, electric light, and delightful terrace, enhanced by two ornamental flower urns. The floor of the terrace is concrete and is set about two feet above the walk. Long casement windows in groups of three furnish the light for the large rooms in the front of the dwelling and also add much to the attractiveness of the picture. The front door leads into the living room, one of those large rambling lounging places that have come to mean so much in the happy home.

It is the center of family life and consequently cannot be overlooked. This one is particularly bright and cheerful because of the double set of windows on front and side. It is 18 feet 6 inches by 14 feet, which is unusually large for such a small home.

Through an open doorway of ample width the dining room is seen, dividing the width of the house with the living room. It is also a commodious, spacious room, 18 feet 6 inches by 14 feet, with seven windows in all, two sets on the side and a set of three in front facing the street.

The dining room affords access to the kitchen at the rear through a single door and to a side hall through an open doorway. This hallway, running parallel to the front of the house, leads to the bathroom at the far end of the house and the two bedrooms, very conveniently grouped with regard to the living quarters. Secluded as they are, they afford members of the family a chance to rest even though some activity is going on in the living room. The bedrooms are small, but do not contain any waste space and for that reason are very satisfactory.

Coming to the kitchen, the visitor finds a small room so designed that it will be a positive joy to the housewife who will have to spend much of her time there. It is small, 8 by 12 feet, but equipped with all the necessities of a kitchen, so arranged that they occupy a minimum of space. In a room of this size a refrigerator, sink, range and cupboard can be very easily accommodated. Adjoining the kitchen is a small pantry.

It goes without saying that the builder has accomplished something very much worth while in constructing a home like this. He has killed "two birds with one stone," as the saying goes, by building a pretty and comfortable home at a very reasonable cost. As an economical type of building the bungalow stands in a class by itself. That perhaps accounts for its great popularity which seems to gain impetus as each day passes.

SPIDER ADEPT IN AVIATION

Insect Manufactures Its Own Balloon and Navigates the Air in Ease and Safety.

Thousands of years before man made a successful balloon a species of spider common to all parts of America had spun a silken airship and gone riding on the winds at will. When the spider desires to take a ride it sets its spinnerets at work, and out pours the silk in liquid form, hardening with contact with the air. In a few moments a dozen silken streamers, 20 feet long, are waving in the air. The spider faces the wind, crouches down and holds tightly to the post or bush, waiting until its judgment tells it that enough silk has been spun to carry it. Then it gives a quick leap upward, and the wind bears it away. It may rise far above the tree tops or float along six feet above the ground.

The spider can govern its flight by the process of drawing in the streamers when it wishes to descend. The silken cord is rolled into a neat ball and held just above its jaws. As the cords shorten the spider sinks, and just before the ground is reached another silken rope is shot out from the rear to catch on any rough object

FARM POULTRY

LICE INJURE LITTLE POULTS

Supposedly Mysterious Trouble Often Proves to Be Nothing More or Less Than Vermin.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Lice are very destructive to turkey poults both when very small and when partly grown. Frequently turkey poults die off from some supposedly mysterious trouble, which when properly investigated proves to be nothing more nor less than lice. Keep the newly-hatched poults free from lice, if possible, by properly dusting the hen used to hatch the eggs. Then watch the poults for head lice. These will be found burrowing into the skin on top of the head above and in front of the eyes and under the throat. If any are discovered, grease these places carefully with plain lard, lard to which a few drops of kerosene have been added or by using a drop of olive oil. Too much grease may prove fatal to the poults.

As the poults grow, lice will sometimes be present in harmful numbers and yet escape the notice of the person who does not know where to look for them. If one looks in the hollows or creases on the upper side of the wing between the quills of the main wing feathers, they may find hiding places there literally swarming with lice. Grease applied to these places will prove effective in getting rid of the lice.

Lice may also occur on other parts of the body and must be combated.

If your young turkeys are droopy and unthrifty and you have examined them without finding any lice, do not be too sure that none are present until you have tried the following: Submerge the little turkey in warm water, holding it with just its bill sticking out, so that it can breathe, until the entire plumage is wet. Then remove it from the water and wrap in a light-colored cloth which has previously been warmed, and hold it in this manner for several minutes. Then take the cloth off. If there are no lice, on it, the turkey is free from them, and some other explanation than lice must be sought for its condition. Usually, however, a surprisingly large number of lice will be found on the cloth, even in cases where a cursory examination had convinced the owner that it was absolutely free.

HANDY DUST BOX FOR FOWLS

Confined Hens Should Be Given Opportunity for Bathing—It Discourages Vermin.

When the flock is confined in laying houses the hens miss the opportunity afforded when they are on range to pick out a likely spot and take a dust bath. It is just as important to a hen's well-being that she be able to take a dust bath when cooped up as well as when on range. Besides, it provides her with the sort of ammunition which nature intended she should use in combating vermin and natural parasites. Hens that have ample facilities for dust baths will not be "carried off" by lice.

FEEDING PIGEONS IN WINTER

Failure to Provide Proper Kind and Quantity of Grain in Winter Causes Falling Off.

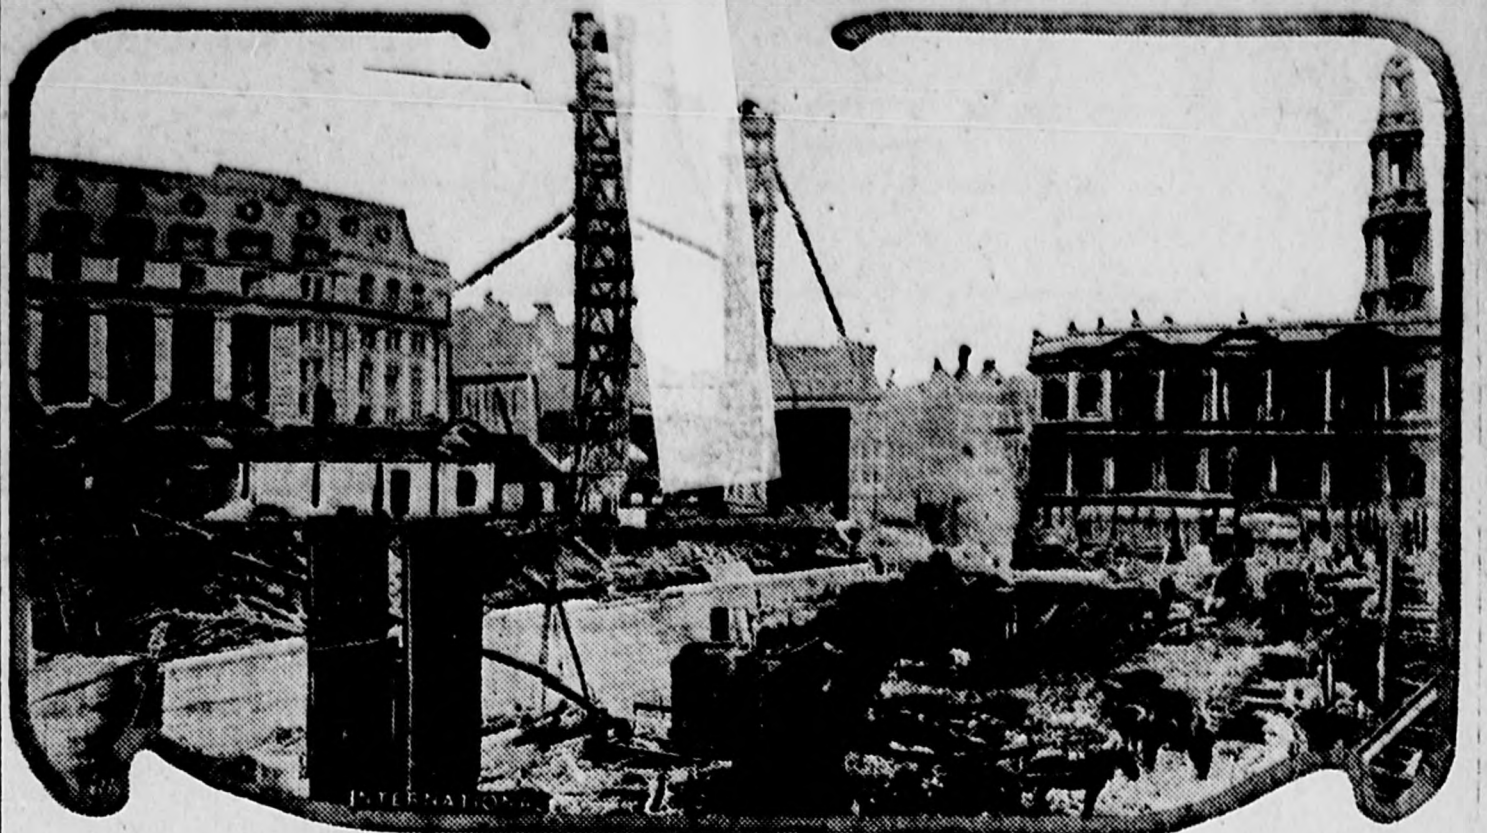

Neglect in feeding the right kind and amount of grain to pigeons in cold weather is often the cause of the marked falling off in the production of squabs in winter. More time and effort is required to feed and manage pigeons at this time of the year, but the owner is well paid for the extra work.

DEFECTIVE TREES FOR FUEL

Specimens Not Suitable for Good Timber Should Be Removed and Used to Cut Fuel Bill.

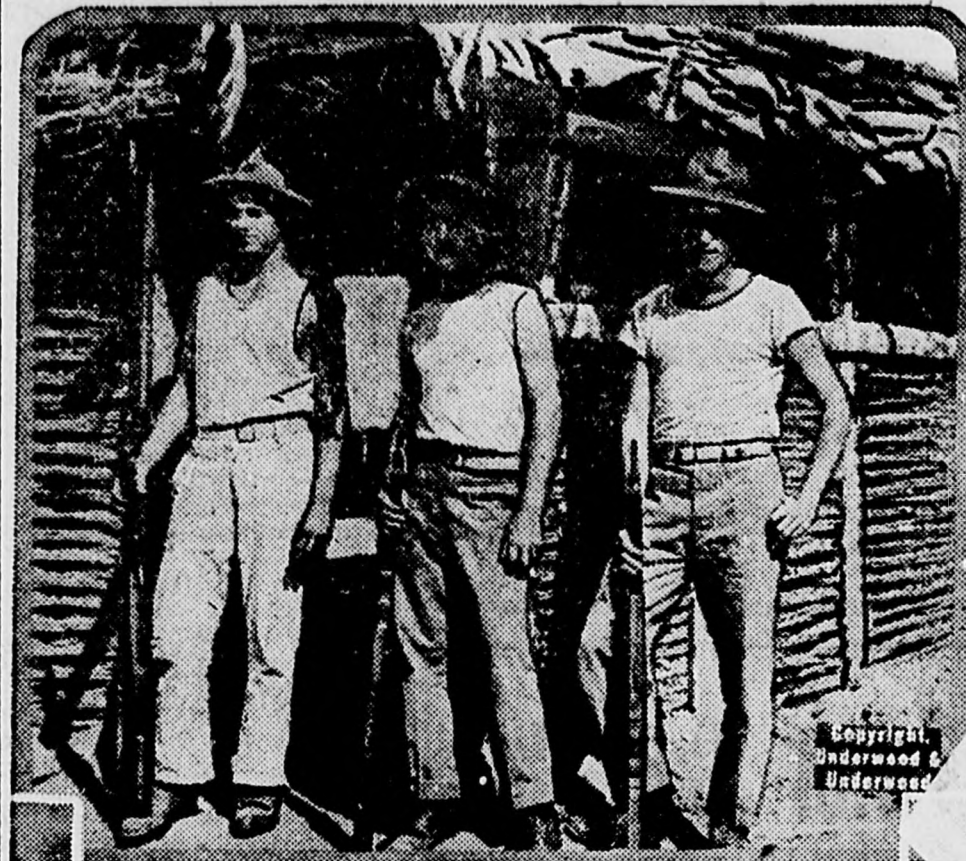

It is just as possible to remove weed trees from the wood lot as it is to weed the garden; besides, the wood from the defective trees, and those that are not good timber species will make a good fuel.

A general view of the three-acre site at Aldwych-in-the-Strand, London, on which the great Bush International Sales building will be built. Steel construction has already been started on the structure, which when completed will represent an investment of $10,000,000. It is said to be the largest single building enterprise undertaken in London in 20 years. The picture was taken at the Aldwych end of the site, looking toward the Strand, and shows the famous church of St. Mary le Strand, to the architecture of which the new Bush building will conform.

Feeling the Poinsettia.

The florists were long puzzled by the problem of bringing all their poinsettia plants to full bloom for the holiday season. In time a solution was offered by Dr. W. W. Garner and H. H. Allard of the United States Department of Agriculture, who discovered that by regulating the amount of light which was allowed to reach the plants, the blossoming date could be speeded or retarded at pleasure. If the sunshine is allowed to fall upon the young poinsettia only a few hours each day, it evidently takes the lack of light for the approach of the shortest day and puts all its efforts into blooming before the end of the year.—Christian Science Monitor.

A New Romance of the Storm Country

"DEAR CHILD!"

Synopsis.—Lonely and friendless, Tonnibel Devon, living on a canal boat with a brutal father and a worn-out, discouraged mother, wanders into a Salvation army hall at Ithaca, N. Y. There she meets a young Salvation army captain, Philip MacCauley. Uriah Devon, Tony's father, announces he has arranged for Tony to marry Reginald Brown, a worthless companion. Mrs. Devon objects, and Uriah beats her. Their quarrel reveals that there is a secret between them in which Tony is the central figure. Tony refuses to marry Reginald and escapes a beating by jumping into the lake. She finds a baby's picture with offer of reward for its delivery to a Doctor Pendlehaven. With the Pendlehavens, a family of wealth, live Mrs. Curtis, a cousin, her daughter and son, Katherine Curtis and Reginald Brown. Katherine is deeply in love with Philip MacCauley. Tonnibel returns the picture to Doctor John, and learns it belongs to his brother, Dr. Paul Pendlehaven. It is a portrait of Doctor Paul's child, stolen in infancy. Doctor John goes with Tony to the canal boat. Mrs. Devon is deeply agitated and makes Tony swear she will never tell of Devon's brutality. The older Devons disappear and Tony is taken into the Pendlehaven house as a companion to Doctor Paul. Philip saves Tony from Reginald, after a fight. Uriah appears, orders Philip off and looks Tony up in the canal boat. Philip again rescues her.

CHAPTER IX—Continued.

"When?" asked Philip, eagerly. "Tonight," she replied wearily. "I'm dead beat out." "And I forgot that," cried the boy. "Tony, darling, will you—will you kiss me before you go?" "Two firms shot out and clasped around his neck. Two eager lips met him in such passionate abandon that for a long time after Tony and Gussie had gone away toward the boulevard Philip MacCauley lay face downward on the shore, the sun peeping at him from the eastern hill.

Paul Pendlehaven lay wide awake in his bed, his sunken eyes filled with darkened sorrow. His brother had stayed with him the most of the night and now sat beside him.

"Will you sleep?" asked Doctor John.

"I'll try," was the response. "I could if I knew where she was."

Doctor John reached over and took his brother's thin hand.

"The morning may bring her back," he said soothingly. "And Paul, old man, if you worry like this, you'll be back where you were four weeks ago."

The invalid sighed heavily.

"I've grown so accustomed to her," he said in excuse, "and somehow since you told me of her people, I fear something may have happened to her."

"We'll hope for the best," said John Pendlehaven, rising. "Now if I run down for a wink or two will you lie quietly while I'm gone?"

"Yes," came in a breath, and true to his word, Paul Pendlehaven scarcely breathed for a long while after his brother went out, although his heavy gray eyes stared at the breaking dawn. If anyone had told him a month ago, he could have longed for any human being as he now longed for Tony Devon, he wouldn't have believed it. He dreaded the day without her dear smile bending over him. Perhaps she would never come back. At that thought he groaned.

If he could only go to sleep. Only close his eyes—

His lids sank slowly down, and he slept fitfully. Mingled in his dream of Tony Devon came a sharp sound. That, like Tony, must be a dream, too, that sound that was out of the ordinary noises of the day, for although the sun had called into life the bees and birds, Ithaca still slumbered.

The noise came again, striking against his nervous brain and waking him. Suddenly, with panting breath and beating pulses, he lifted himself on his elbow. The screen had fallen from the window and perhaps ten seconds passed as he stared mutely at it. Then like a shot from a gun, Tony Devon sprang through the window into the room. For a moment the sick man gazed at her with mingled emotions. Something dreadful had happened. She was so white, so wraithlike and changed, yet blotching the pallor of her face were reddish blue bruises. Then the bare feet took the distance between them in a bound. The dimples at the corners of her lips lived a moment and were gone.

When Paul Pendlehaven dropped back on the pillow, she spoke.

"Me and Gussie's back," she said brokenly. "I climbed up the tree and got to the roof, fearin' to wake up the other folks in the house." She sat down beside the bed. "Somehow I knew you'd be lookin' for me, sir."

It was because she had passed through such a dreadful night and was so terribly tired that she cried a little as a child cries after it has been cruelly punished.

Paul Pendlehaven let his thin hand drop on the frowly head. Tears stung his own lids like nettles.

"Dear child," he breathed, "dear pretty child, I've waited all night for you. My God, what's happened to you?"

Tony covered her face with her hands. "Somebody beat me up," she moaned. "I can't tell anything now. And I lost my pretty clothes."

Sudden strength came to Paul Pendlehaven. He sat up straight and forcibly lifted the pitiful hurt face so he could look at it.

"Tony," he began gravely, "I command you to tell me what happened to you. Tell me instantly. If I knew, I could take steps to punish the ruffian who dared to do this thing."

That was just what Tony didn't want. Hadn't she sworn to Edith in the presence of the infinite Christ, that good Shepherd who had given up His life for His sheep, that no matter what Uriah did she wouldn't peach on him?

The tears were still rolling down her cheeks from under lowered lids.

"You have so helped me, Tony," continued Pendlehaven, "and yet you refuse to let me do what I can."

She tried to think of something to comfort him.

"But sometimes daddies and husbands beat their women folks," she explained.

"Then your father whipped you?" quizzed the doctor.

"That I can't tell," said the girl. "Don't make me. . . Oh, Lordy, I'm all tuckered out."

It was of no use to put questions any more, thought Pendlehaven. He was persuaded that her father had done this dreadful thing.

At eight o'clock, when Dr. John Pendlehaven softly entered the sick-

"Me and Gussie's Back," She Said Brokenly.

room he found his brother in sound slumber, and Tony Devon, her face discolored with bruises, fast asleep in the chair by the bedside.

It was a stubborn Tony that faced Doctor John that morning. Adroitly he tried to draw from her the reason for her extreme paleness, for the dark marks stretched across her face, and the meaning of the shudders that suddenly attacked her.

"I can't tell," she reiterated in distress as she had to his brother. "Please don't ask me."

That her mother was dead, she firmly believed. This she did tell the doctor between many sobs and tears.

"I'll never see her ever any more," she told him tremulously. "And if you'll let me, I'll live here forever and forever and take care of Doctor Paul."

"My brother can't get along without you, dear," he said, deeply touched. "If you had seen how he grieved last night, you wouldn't have made that remark."

"I know he likes me," said the girl, sighing, "and I love him. Why, I love him—"

She searched the man's face and caught his smile.

"Better than you do me?" he came in with.

"Yes," said Tonnibel, honestly, "but you next—"

Then she thought of Philip, of the hours he had held her against his breast, of the kiss in the morning's dawn, and she fell into a bashful silence.

When Doctor Pendlehaven told Mrs. Curtis that Tony had returned, her face drew down in a sulky frown.

"But we needn't care," Katherine said afterward, "she doesn't bother us much. For my part I can't see how Cousin Paul stands her."

"John says Paul almost died last night," took up Mrs. Curtis. "I suppose she's one of the things we've got to stand in a house run by an old bachelor and a grieving widower."

"To say nothing of a father with a daughter lost somewhere in the world," supplemented Katherine.

"There's no danger of Caroline's returning after all these years," said Mrs. Curtis. "If—that girl hadn't come, Paul wouldn't have lived long. John told me so himself. I almost hoped that—"

"That he'd die?" interrupted Katherine, maliciously. "Well, to be truthful I have wished it many times. Cousin John would have to think of somebody else then. Perhaps he'd turn his attention to you, mother darling."

"He won't while Paul lives," sighed Mrs. Curtis. "I don't know just what to do. I've thought of every conceivable way to get that girl out of the house, and John forestalls me every time."

"I'm glad Philip hasn't seen her," remarked Katherine. "He's just the religious maulin kind who would fall for an appealing face like hers." Mrs. Curtis made an impatient gesture, and Katherine proceeded. "We can't deny she is appealing, mamma, even if we hate her! And God knows I loathe her so I could strangle her with these two hands." She held up clenched fingers, then relaxed them and laughed bitterly. "Heavens! What's the use of butting our heads against a stone wall? . . . Give me a cigarette, my dear Sarah. Philip won't be here until night, and I can get rid of the odor before that."

Meanwhile upstairs Tony Devon was fast getting back to her normal self. The blessed assurance she had that she was needed by her sick friend lifted her spirits. She grieved inwardly for her mother, but shuddered when she thought of her father. Now all ties were cut between them. She had no doubt but that both Uriah and Reggie thought she was dead in the lake. She hoped they did! She'd never see either one of them again.

She was sitting thinking deeply when Paul Pendlehaven spoke to her. "Little dear," said he, reaching out his hand toward her, "come over a minute. I want to talk to you!"

Tonnibel went to him instantly, as she always did when he called her.

"You will promise me something," he insisted, as his hot hand clasped hers. "Tony, don't go out again like you did yesterday. I shan't be able to stand it if you do!"

Tonnibel's mind flashed to Philip. She felt sure he would go to the corner of the lake every day to meet her, as he had gone to the canal boat.

Yet as she gazed into the imploring eyes of her friend, she had no heart to deny him his wish.

"I'm selfish, perhaps," the man went on, "but, Tony dear, if you want to go out, there's lots of cars in the garage, and horses in the stable. Won't you promise me?"

Tony thrust the memory of Philip's face from her mind. She put the wish to be in his arms again, to feel his warm lips once more on hers behind her, and tremblingly smiled in acquiescence.

"I promise," she said in a low voice, but a sob prevented her from saying anything more.

CHAPTER X.

The Stoning.

Never before since he had taken up his work of redemption had Philip MacCauley found the hours so long and so difficult to live through. Day after day he canoed to the place Tony had promised to meet him, only to return to Ithaca more at sea than ever. He had the sickening idea that the girl he had grown to love was again in the clutches of her brute of a father and Reginald Brown.

Tony, too, began to lose the high spirits that had returned almost immediately after her escape from the canal boat. The gray eyes grew darkly circled, the lovely mouth seemed to have lost the power to smile.

Paul Pendlehaven noted all this with apprehension. He questioned the girl time after time, asking her if she felt well, if there was anything she wanted, but she always replied in the negative.

One day after they had had their dinner, he sat looking at her curiously. She was close to the window reading a book, when he caused her to look up by calling her name.

"Run downstairs, Tony dear," he went on, "and tell my brother to come up here before office hours, will you, honey?"

The girl rose, laying aside her book. She dreaded venturing into Mrs. Curtis' presence and shivered when she remembered the critical Katherine who looked her over with supercilious toleration whenever they happened to meet. But she made no complaint and went slowly downstairs.

The dining room door was closed, but the sound of voices from within told her the family was at dinner. She opened the door slowly and stepped inside. For one moment her vision was obscured by the fright that suddenly took possession of her. As the blur cleared from her eyes, she saw John Pendlehaven smiling at her. Then a sharp ejaculation from some one else swung her gaze from the doctor's face, and it settled on—Philip MacCauley.

"I thought, oh, I thought you were dead."

THE SAD BROWNIE.

When the girl and the boy were adventuring along the road they began to get a very fine opinion of themselves—and not only that, they didn't act in the least like a regular boy and girl, but they acted as though—well! You'll hear for yourselves how they acted!

The Luncheon.

funny little plants, and, too, it seems to me that the sun shines down more brightly upon this road than upon the Road Commonplace which we took once by mistake."

"I say we have some food," said the boy after a few minutes.

"Yes," said the girl, "for we had quite an exciting time in the woods when we found we almost went the wrong way, and I'm very hungry."

So the boy took his knapsack from his back and they undid the luncheon. It was extremely good. There were delicious sandwiches and some jam and some good, cool brook water which had been put in a crystal bottle.

There was also some candy.

"I hope it isn't magic candy, which can disappear when it wants to," said the boy.

"What a horrible thought," said the girl. "Why did you have to think up such a terrible thought about the candy?"

It would have been better if you had thought it about the sandwiches, though for that matter the sandwiches are what I most want at the moment. I'm so extremely hungry."

They sat down and ate their luncheon and pecked into the basket and saw three other packages, one with a card attached which said:

"For supper this evening," and the second package said:

"For breakfast tomorrow morning." And there was a third package which was marked, "Extra goodies for extra times." This had all been fixed for the adventurers by Mrs. Wood Elf.

"She was nice," said Mrs. Wood Elf, "said the girl. 'I am going to be very like you like nice people and I'm going to make no mistakes, and I'm going to think of serious things and not behave in a foolish way.'"

"Why, I'm even going to enjoy things when they're hard, for I'll be feeling they are doing me great good."

"Maybe we will find the House of Secrets that way sooner," agreed the boy.

"Well, let's be off," said the girl a little later, as she wiped her mouth with one of Mrs. Wood Elf's leaf napkins. "You are through, aren't you?"

"All through," said the boy. Just then they heard a sobbing. It sounded very near.

They walked along a little way, looking in the direction from which the sobbing came.

"Oh, it's a poor little creature, a little bit of a brownie, or something of the sort," said the girl. "See, he is hidden behind this stone."

"I'm hidden because you made me so small," said the little brownie. "You aren't behaving like a regular boy or a regular girl at all, and it breaks my heart!"

"What in the world was, or is, the matter with you?"

"Do you always stay behind that stone where we found you and so never get a chance to grow, but make folks wait on you and spoil you like a little gnome we once met?" asked the girl.

"No," said the brownie, "I'm no relation to that gnome at all."

"We're having adventures," said the boy, "and we're going to the House of Secrets. I hope you're feeling better now, little sir. We really must be off if you haven't anything special to ask us. You've dried your tears, I see, so you must feel better."

"Oh dear! Oh dear! Oh dear!" sobbed the brownie again, and burst into fresh tears.

"This is a nuisance," said the boy. "A perfect bother," said the girl. "I do believe he is just doing that because we said we were going on as he had dried his tears."

"No," said the brownie, "only I've grown small because you've talked as if you didn't want to be joyous. That's one of the most important things in life, and what's more, do things that are hard because you won't let them get the best of you—not because it makes you feel so proud of yourselves! I'll grow big again if you become natural."

Which he did!

He's Hidden.

A CROSS PUZZLE.

Fig. 1 shows the completed cross, with the blocks numbered in the order in which they should be assembled, while Figs. 7, 8 and 9 show the steps in assembling, with the blocks similarly numbered. The patterns in Figs. 2, 3, 4 and 5 give the necessary dimensions for marking out the blocks and their notches; the diagrams in Fig. 6, showing the completed blocks, will help you interpret the dimensioned drawings, and by the positions of the numbers upon their ends you will see exactly what positions the blocks occupy in the formation of the cross.

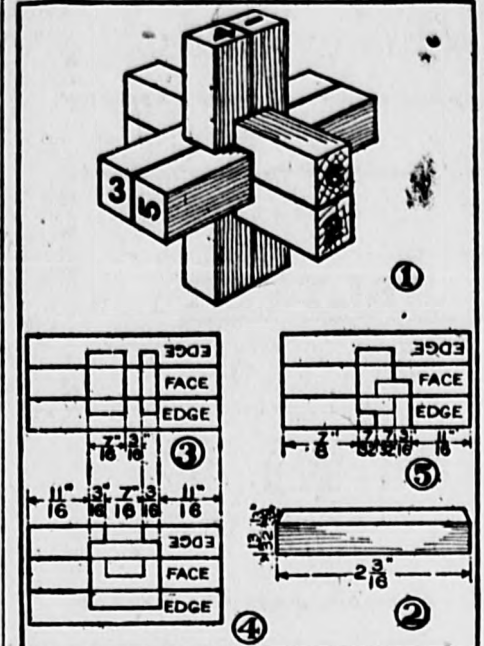

Use a close-grained wood out of which to cut the blocks. Hardwood is better than soft, because the grain is firmer, because there is less danger of splitting out portions between cuts, and because it is easier to get square, clean-cut corners.

After planing up six blocks to the dimensions given in Fig. 2, sandpaper their surfaces, using care in doing so for block No. 4. No. 6 is not notched. It is not necessary to number the block ends. It is better not to give your friends a clue to the order in which

By looking at the steps shown in Figs. 7, 8 and 9, you will understand how to assemble the blocks. Possibly you will find it necessary to trim up not to round the corners. Then with a sharp pencil and ruler mark off the positions for the notches. One pair of blocks are similar, and another pair have similar notches, but reversed. Therefore, only four diagrams are given (Figs. 2, 3, 4 and 5).

Fig. 3 shows a plan of one face and two edges of block No. 1. When you have very carefully marked out the notches as shown, you can cut down the ends of the notches with a fine saw, then split out the wood between with a chisel, or you can do all of the cutting with a jackknife. In either case, your cutting edges must be very sharp. Blocks No. 2 and No. 5 are similar (Fig. 6); Fig. 4 shows the pattern. The notches of No. 4 are the reverse of those of No. 3, and the pattern in Fig. 5, for block No. 3, can be reversed some of the notches before the blocks will fit, and possibly you will find it necessary to make over a block or two because of the notches being made too large. This will depend upon how carefully you have marked out and cut the pieces. The cross should have as perfect fitting joints as you can make.

PICTURE COLLECTIONS.

For the covers of the scrapbook in Fig. 1, use heavy cardboard from cardboard boxes, for the leaves go to your grocer and buy manila wrapping paper, for the screw posts for binding together the covers and sheets (Fig. 7), go to a hardware store and buy 1/4-inch stove bolts 1 1/2 or 2 inches in length, according to the thickness of book desired. The size of page should be determined by the size of sheet that you can obtain.

Fig. 2 shows the back cover. Cut this 3/4 inch wider and longer than the pages so there will be a margin on all edges. Cut a second piece of cardboard of the same size, for the front cover, and from the left-hand edge cut a strip 1 inch wide (B and C, Fig. 3). Strip C is to be the hinge strip. Cut a piece of dress lining or heavy linen large enough to lap over both sides of the hinge strip and project 1/4 inch over the inner edge (Fig. 3). Glue the cloth to strip C, then glue the projecting edges to B. When the glue has set, place the covers together, and punch holes for the stove bolts. You can drill these holes with a small bit. By clamping the pages between pieces of board, you can drill the holes with a wood bit.

Fig. 4 suggests how to mount a clipping that has a picture upon each side, by pasting along one edge.

The picture roll in Fig. 5 hangs upon a wall. Instead of covers, the pages are held between wooden strips A (Fig. 6) by means of stove bolts. Screw a screweye into each end of strips A, and attach cord or wire hangers to the screweyes.

If you can get a business letter file, all that you will have to do is cut pages to fit it, to make the picture file in Fig. 8. If you cannot get a letter file, make one out of a cardboard box. Remove one box side, and hinge it to the box bottom with a cloth strip (Fig. 9). Cut a strip from a side of the box cover, then hinge it to the cover with cloth as directed for the scrapbook cover. Glue the hinged strip to the box sides (Fig. 8). To classify your pictures according to subjects, paste index tabs to the edges of the sheets as suggested in Fig. 8.

The filing case shown in Figs. 11 and 12 can be made out of a grocery box. Saw down the ends of the box on a diagonal line, as indicated by the lines A in Fig. 13, and remove the box side to which the small triangular pieces are attached. This will give you the two parts shown in Figs. 14 and 15. Nail the box cover boards to these sections, in their original positions, and hinge the smaller section to the larger one. A pair of handles fastened to the box ends, and a couple of coats of paint, will finish the outside of the cabinet. The inside may be partitioned into compartments.

SURVEY OF PROPOSED HOSPITAL

The property which it is planned to use for hospital purposes comprises a tract of land somewhere in excess of six acres, fronting on Lake street and bordering on Whitman pond. All of the land is level and tillable. Its location, practically in the geographical center of the territory to be served, its accessibility, the possibility of securing water, electricity and gas from the town supply, the easy absorption of sewerage, the beauty of the grounds and their surroundings, all combine to make the site an ideal one for the purpose.

The house, situated approximately in the center of the property from east to west, and sufficiently removed from Lake street to insure privacy and to guard against noise and dust, is in excellent repair and is designed as to require practically no interior alteration to render it suitable for hospital purposes. It is of such size and arrangement as to provide ample accommodations for 15 patients with the necessary quota of nurses and employees. At a future date the barn, also in excellent repair and well situated, can be economically remodeled into a home for nurses and employees with a corresponding increase in the number of patients' beds.

CARPENTER WORK

The basement, first and second floors will require no carpenter work other than changing two exit doors on the first floor to swing out to comply with the State laws concerning buildings used for hospital purposes, the relaying of that portion of the floor in the small room on the second floor which it is proposed to use as a nurses utility room, the shortening of the door to permit of it swinging over this raised floor, and the relaying of a portion of the front hall flooring. On the third floor, to be given over to operating room, sterilizing room and quarters for 5 nurses, the front room should be divided by a sheathed partition so as to provide single rooms for the charge and night nurse, and an entrance to these rooms supplied, as the present door will be blocked by the sterilizing room by the erection of a similar partition in the bath room.

A satisfactory sterilizing room, approximately 12 feet by 8 feet in size, may be provided by the erection of a sheathed partition across the northern recess of the front hall, or this may remain open and a partition to exclude odor and noise from the floors below erected across the hall at the head of the stairs.

A window should be cut in the closet adjacent to the bath room and a movable sash placed in this portion to supply light and air.

The light in the room designated as the operating room, might be materially improved by widening the present northerly window to 5 feet six inches or 6 feet, but this is by no means essential. Shutters should be provided for the easterly window in this room to eliminate "cross light."

All of these changes, together with the proposed use of the rooms, are shown upon the accompanying floor plans. In addition, four windows opening upon the fire escape must be cut down to the floor level and French windows installed.

FIRE ESCAPE

An iron fire escape, reached by balconies from the second and third floors, will be required by the State Police, and should be erected at the northeast corner of the house. This with the present front and rear stairs, will supply easy means of egress from all of the rooms on the second and third floors.

HEATING

Certain of the rooms on the second and third floors are inadequately supplied with radiation and others are entirely without heat. Additional radiation must therefore be installed to the amount of approximately 300 square feet.

Casual inspection would indicate that the steam heater now in the basement, though still apparently serviceable, is not of sufficient capacity to supply this added radiation. (This heater should be subjected to test, and if, as anticipated, found to be serviceable, a second heater of small size could be installed at the present one replaced by a sectional heater of greater capacity. Unless a second-hand heater could be purchased, the installation of a secondary one would be found to be the more economical. This plan would not involve change in the present supply, and return main in the basement, and would present the advantage of heat being supplied to the nursery, maternity ward and operating room at a minimum cost during those seasons of the year when heat in other portions of the building would be not only unnecessary, but decidedly objectionable.

PLUMBING

The plumbing, ample for the purposes of the ordinary household, certain of the rooms having running water, and for the most part modern, is insufficient for hospital purposes, and additions must be made thereto.

Third floor. No changes or additions will be required in the nurses' bath rooms. A surgeons' sink should be installed in the sterilizing room and the necessary connections made to the stills and sterilizers.

Second floor. Bath room—no changes or additions are necessary.

Nursery. A babies' bath should be installed. As this room is located directly beneath the sterilizing room on the floor above, connections can be made to the same stack.

Utility room. An enamel iron slop sink and maids' bath should be installed.

First floor. The service on this floor will require the installation of a "low down closet" in the toilet room off the front hall, and an additional 60-gallon hot water tank and cast iron sink in the kitchen. The set tubs in the laundry, off the kitchen, are sufficient.

The Major's Chastenings

By MARTHA M'WILLIAMS

(© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Why not be frank, major? It's a shocking waste of swear words—this way of merely thinking them," Mella asked, her accent intermediate between amusement and faint contempt.

"Be-frank? I don't want you to shut your door in my face. You women are so illogical—aggravate us beyond reason, then pretend to be amazed at what is your own doing," the major spluttered, clenching the arms of his chair so hard his knuckles showed white.

"As how? Examples, please!" Mella returned demurely. "But talking of examples, while I think of it, permit me to call attention to my rise, think what a grouch I'd be—with the steadfast provocation of my name."

"What's the matter with your name? Anyway, you can change it," the major retorted, grinning. Mella lifted her eyes. "Mella, M'Ellis," she ejaculated. Martha Ellnor would have been bad enough as the penalty of grandmothers, but Mella-Mella Muri—why, I sound like a counting-out rhyme!"

"Your own fault—you know you can change to Mrs. Elliott Jamieson whenever you have a mind to do it," the major said airily. "Mrs. Elliott Gore Jamieson on your visiting card."

Mella smiled. "The prospect tempts, but it strengthens character to overcome temptations."

"A heap easier and pleasanter to succumb to them—witness this," the major said audaciously, kissing her full on the lips, the while he held her close.

"Now, I should be wanting to swear. But I don't," Mella said composedly, wiggling free. "You see I knew there would be toll to pay whenever I provoked you into an outright proposal."

"So! You were sure you could?" the major asked, half angry, wholly amused.

"Dead sure!" Mella flung at him.

"Thank you for a great deal. In my own name—and Mrs. Jamieson's," the major said stiffly, getting up with a motion of finality. But after a step Beaming Like the Sun.

doorward he stopped short to say, "I would like a bill of particulars. Was I slaughtered on general principles or to make a week-end holiday?"

Mella appeared to ponder deeply before replying. "Something of both. Every man needs to find himself—not wholly irresistible. Women have spoiled you, so your need was pitiable. You are chargeable with contributory negligence, to say the least, yet there must be a lot to you, else you'd be insufferable and past redemption."

"More thanks!" the major snapped, again preparing to leave. "I suppose I may offer congratulations—to Doctor Beverly. You'll send me wedding cards, I hope."

"Can't—there won't be any. But you shall have an obituary if ever I am a widow."

The major rushed away. What he said in the wide privacy of the lawn certainly would not look well in print.

Mella, nodding to herself in the mental mirror, sighed a sprightly sigh and murmured: "The soldier man is peeved—a right smart. I'm glad of it. Do him good. A man naturally hates other men—in case of a girl—but a rival his own size wouldn't be nearly so wholesome for the adorable Jamieson as poor Billy Beverley, who has to be helped if he is to make love decently. Billy is a sort of compound of the metals—as good as gold, as bulky as silver, as dull as lead. By token of all which I shall put him out of his misery—in the happy fashion of turning him over to Miss Joey Dancy, to whom he will be as manna from heaven."

Mella, you perceive, was a rather lawless young woman, as well she might be, having never known the chastenings of brothers, sisters, cousins or aunts. Sole heir to doting parents reasonably rich, the wonder was, not that she flirted or danced or sang or rode or sat silent exactly as pleased her, but that it pleased her to be for the most part a singularly delightful and considerate entity, eager to give pleasure, even where she knew the return would be jealous criticism.

Also and further, she had a certain social prescience that made her adept in straightening tangles. Billy Beverley needed a wife with money and management, if he were ever to be anything but poor and plodding.

Joey Dancy had money, and was openly in the marriage market—but she would hardly have looked at Billy if Mella had not so much more than tolerated him as to make the major furious. There had been a feud, politely veiled, betwixt the two girls since Mella had put up her hair. If Joey could be made to believe she had snatched Billy a brand from the Mella burning—There Mella giggled and went off for a spin in her small electric, taking Billy along, and ostentatiously passing three times by the Dancys, place. And at the psychological moment in Passage Three she refused Billy for the fatal third time. When he asked: "Do you mean it; cross your heart?" she nodded mournfully, whispering more mournfully: "I have no heart, Billy. A bad, bad man has taken it—and run away." Then somehow, as women will, she shed Billy upon the Dancy piazza and whirled triumphantly away, but not until she had said privily to him: "I ought not to tell—but Joey loves you dearly. It would make me mighty happy to see you happy with her."

So she was not surprised when Billy boomed joyously next morning: "Mella, you're a witch for guessing—and other things. Sure, I'm engaged to Joey—day's set and everything. Old folks gave me their blessing. Made me feel about seven feet high."

When she had said all the proper things several times over, she got rid of the exuberant lover, who went out beaming like the sun. The major, coming for what he told himself would be a final good-by, encountered him half-way down the lawn, misread his face, and passed on with the briefest icy greeting. The ice had melted when he came upon Mella, looking out of the window with eyes of lamb-like innocence.

"So glad you came in time to see Billy," she said smiling softly. "His face is like the morning—a real poem."

"Naturally—as becomes a bridegroom," the major said bitterly.

"Why, who told you?" Mella asked artlessly.

"Intuition," the major snapped, glowering down from his height of six feet two.

"And did it tell you the lady's name?" Mella asked.

"No—I have known it since yesterday," the major said hoarsely. "Mella, Mella! Why do you do this? I could bear to lose you better—to a real man."

"Better not know so many things than to know so many that ain't so," Mella quoted with a twinkle. "I really know things—for instance, that Billy is to marry Joey Dancy; also the girl who is going to marry you." Her blush said the rest—as the major smothered her in his arms she whispered: "You ought to have guessed. I wouldn't have taken such trouble with you—if I had not meant to keep you for good."

MAKE BUSINESS OF SAVING

Wise Administration of One's Income Is the Foundation Stone of Building of Success.

Saving part of the income ought to be the rule of every man's life. Of course, this may be overdone, though it doesn't happen very often. To make a business of saving, a profession of economizing, a trade of thrift, is likely to develop a narrow nature, even as reckless spending develops habitual improvidence. Which state of man is the worse?

To use good judgment in saving and spending alike—that's the ideal. Ruskin put it in another way:

"Economy no more means saving money than it means spending money; it means administration of a house; its stewardship; spending or saving, whether money or time or anything else, to the best possible advantage."

The man whose wife spends his income as fast as he earns it keeps his nose flattened on the grindstone. The day will come when his earning capacity will be gone and no preserves will be found on the pantry shelf.

It is the same if the husband is the spender and the wife the saver. The best plan is when both follow Ruskin's idea of administration and stewardship, saving and spending with common sense and due attention to appropriate living.—Minneapolis Journal.

To Tell Time With Your Hands.

Hold your thumbs touching one another horizontally and extend the forefingers perpendicularly. Now hold the hands toward the sun so the shadow of one finger falls upon the other or upon the thumb of the other hand. Where the thumbs join is twelve o'clock, the tip of one finger 6 a. m., that of the other 6 p. m. The shadow will tell you what time it is with more accuracy than you can estimate it from the sun's position in the sky, after you have learned through experimenting what are the approximate "hour marks" on your improvised "clock." However, it should be remembered that these positions will change with the seasons, according as the days are long or short.

MRS. J. M. CRAIG, of Los Angeles, Calif., who says no one can feel more grateful for what Tanlac has done than she does. Declares she has gained twelve pounds and her health is now better than in years.

"Of all the people who have taken Tanlac, I don't believe there is anyone who feels any more grateful to it than I do," was the statement made recently by Mrs. J. M. Craig of 674½ East Fortieth street, Los Angeles.

"Like so many other families during the influenza epidemic last year we all had it, and my own illness, together with the worry over the rest of our family, brought on a case of genuine nervous prostration."

"I was so weak I couldn't even sweep the floor, and during the day I would have to lie down four or five times. I tried to walk but found out half a block was all I could stand before I gave out. Nervous spells came on me often."

"Every medicine I tried failed to reach my case until finally my husband urged me to try Tanlac, and I am indeed thankful that he did, for it proved to be just what I needed."

"The first two bottles didn't seem to help me. I guess that was because I was so extremely bad off, but on the third bottle I could tell I was improving and that gave me more hopes than ever of getting well."

"My improvement from then on was rapid and by the time I had taken five bottles of Tanlac I was better and stronger than I had been in years. I was sleeping soundly at night and had gained twelve pounds in weight. That was several months ago and from then until now I have been in as good health as I ever was in my life and have been doing all the housework by myself."

"It is simply remarkable how Tanlac has built me up and I have told everyone of my friends and relatives what a wonderful medicine it is." Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—Adv.

Simple Explanation.

"Dorothy, whatever makes you talk so much?" "Because I always think of sumpin' to say."

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it. Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased. Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness, are often times symptoms of kidney trouble.

Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kliner's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store. However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kliner & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

Directed. "Professor, what is the logical way of reaching a conclusion?"

"Take a train of thought, my boy."

RUB RHEUMATIC PAIN FROM ACHING JOINTS

Rub Pain right out with small trial bottle of old "St. Jacobs Oil."

Stop "dosing" Rheumatism. It's pain only; not one case in fifty requires internal treatment. Rub soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Oil" right on the "tender spot," and by the time you say Jack Robinson—out comes the rheumatic pain and distress. "St. Jacobs Oil" is a harmless rheumatism liniment which never disarranges and doesn't burn the skin. It takes pain, soreness and stiffness from aching joints, muscles and bones; stops sciatica, lumbago, backache and neuralgia.

Limber up! Get a small trial bottle of old-time, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" from any drug store, and in a moment, you'll be free from pains, aches and stiffness. Don't suffer! Rub rheumatism away.—Adv.

A Mind Reader.

"Are you Doctor Smith?" "No, but I know where we can get some."

Good health cannot be maintained where there is a constipated habit. Garfield Tea overcomes constipation.—Adv.

A GREAT GIRL

By HATTIE OXFORD.

(© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Five animated wearers of sweaters which in hues approximated the perennials of Mrs. Baylie's old-fashioned flower garden, were bending over the beds with delighted exclamations. These five young women, Mrs. Baylie's roomers, were saturating themselves with the summer morning outside before going to their respective places of business.

The postman handed Miss Old Rose Sweater the mail for the house. She separated a card from the rest, announcing: "That's for Dwight Elwood, our interesting new roomer from the West. Want me to read it to you?"

"That would be awfully cheeky," Miss Lavender Sweater objected.

"Oh, do, do," coaxed Miss Orange Sweater and Miss Blue Sweater, with mischievous dancing eyes.

"All right, here goes:

"Dwight, my dear boy—Yesterday for one happy—"

"She dropped it as though it had suddenly grown red-hot. A tall, smiling young man stood at her side.

"I'm not homesick any more," he said. "You folks here are just like the good, curious folks 'way back home."

He picked up the card and handed it to her. "Go on, Miss Ainslie, the girls want to hear the rest."

"I don't want—I won't read another word," Miss Ainslie declared, blushing and looking extremely uncomfortable. She handed back the card.

"Very well, then," he said briskly. "I'll read it to you."

"Dwight, my dear boy—Yesterday for one happy moment I thought I heard your footsteps on my veranda. Then I remembered the thousands of miles between us. I am thinking of you constantly and wishing all kinds of good things for you. I will answer your nice, long letter soon. Don't let any of the New England girls take away my place in your heart. Devotedly,

"Your Chum Next Door."

"There," he exclaimed with a satisfied smile, "aren't you glad I have a girl back home who isn't ashamed to let the world know how much she thinks of me?"

The girls murmured with a conspicuous lack of enthusiasm that his girl was certainly worth having.

Just then four of the girls got on the electric car. Ruth Holt, in the lavender sweater, started to walk, as her office was barely half a mile away. Dwight Elwood asked permission to walk with her.

"I work in the building opposite yours," he said; "so glad I can have company."

The young man spoke at length on the excellence of the girl back home as they walked along, on her cool quick-witted management of her car in emergencies, on the quantity, quality and diversity of the work she did for her country in war time—

"And her letters, Miss Holt—I'm going to read you extracts sometime. They are so bright in spots they'd fairly put your eyes out. Oh, I tell you, Priscilla Arden's a great girl. She lives right next to where I live with my father and aunt—my mother died when I was a baby—and has always been my jolly good chum."

Not long after this Dwight began to act as if he had forgotten Priscilla Arden. He stopped reading extracts from her letters to Ruth, and rarely mentioned her name. Ruth wondered a great deal.

Three seasons passed and spring came. Dwight sought until he found Ruth in a vine-covered summer house in the lower end of the garden one day. He had something on his mind. Off it rolled right then and there. It seemed to him as if a million air lights were making luminous the fact that Ruth and himself were just made for each other. He spoke his convictions. He was bound that the girl should see as he saw and agree to his life-together proposition.

But the girl jumped up and faced him squarely, eyes flashing: "Confess you made a similar fervent speech to your girl back home before you left. No doubt you'll make another to tell another girl before long. Shame on you for forgetting that fine girl."

"Ruth," the young man said, "I could tell you something which would immediately set your mind at rest, but I want to feel you trust me without any more explaining."

"Miss Holt, a letter for you."

Ruth took the letter from the maid. She opened it, and read the signature first: "Priscilla Arden." Surprised? She was. So was absurdly apprehensive, too. So, Dwight had told the girl and the girl was going to upbraid her. She started to read:

"My Dear Ruth—You are Ruth to me already. So glad you have decided to make Dwight happy; but you can't take my place in his heart—no one can. You will have a big place of your own. How tired I used to get before the boy went away, trying to be youthful. Oh, the strain of autoing and tramping with him; for I'm growing old. I'm old enough to be his grandmother—in fact, I am his grandmother—"

Ruth stopped reading. "His grandmother, his dear old grandmother," she cried out, feeling as if she would burst with joy. "Oh, oh, oh!"

After she had shown Dwight the letter, she heard him singing: "Oh, my grandfather's girl was a great old girl."

Has Your Back Given Out?

Are you dragging along with a dull, throbbing backache? Do you feel lame in the morning; suffer sharp twinges at every sudden move? Then there's something wrong! You may never have suspected your kidneys, yet often it's the kidneys that are at fault. You may have headaches and dizzy spells, too. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. They have helped thousands and should help you. Ask your neighbor!

A Massachusetts Case

25 Mrs. M. E. Smith, Greenfield, Mass., says: "My kidneys went back on me. My back became lame and sore. There was a constant twinge in the small part of it and I was always tired and my kidneys were very sore. A friend advised Doan's Kidney Pills and I got a box and in short time the troubles began to leave me. I used a few more boxes of Doan's and they rid me entirely of all the ailments."

BEAUTIFUL COURSE AT ORIENTAL PARK, HAVANA. HAS FINEST SPORT

Never in the history of racing at Havana, Cuba, has the sport been as popular as it is this season. Orient park is crowded daily with enthusiastic lovers of the thoroughbred. While a majority of the throng are natives, there are thousands of Americans present. The course is one of the most beautiful in the world and its club house is the scene of lively parties almost every day.

The caliber of the horses is much higher than in former years, too, and the jockeys are riding better. There have been no scandals and everywhere Charles A. Stoneham, the president and principal owner of the track, is being commended for the way he is conducting the meeting.

There are two ways for the patrons to make their wagers, for there are pari-mutuel machines and bookmakers. And the men who lay the odds are under strict surveillance by the authorities.

Nearly a hundred stables have shared in the purses, which are much larger than ever before. The prize money each day averages $4,718.

RIGHT AWAY CLARKE GOT TEBEAU'S GOAT

Former Pirate Manager Tells Yarn of Early Days.

Fiery Pat, First Baseman for Louisville, Lost Temper When Teased by Recruit and Chased Him Clear Around Bases.

Fred Clarke, former manager of the Pirates, was a visitor at the minor league meeting, at Kansas City recently. Fred told a story on himself that has been printed before in a garbled form.

It happened when Fred first broke into the majors at Louisville. He was practically a kid and thought everybody had it in for him. So he played hard and viciously, stepping on the toes or heels of the first sucker or the other basemen as he circled the sacks.

The Pittsburgh club went to Cleveland, where Pat Tebeau was playing first base. Right away Clarke got Tebeau's goat. Pat kept waxing madder and madder at the rough work shown by the recruit.

At one stage in the battle Fred knocked a dinky grounder toward Pat. The latter, smiling, yet gritting his teeth in rage, waited for the ball. It reached him about the time Clarke did, took a bad bounce on a stone and went over Tebeau's head.

Pat never paid any attention to the ball, letting it go unmolested. Instead he tore around the bases after Clarke, yelling at the top of his voice, "You lucky stiff; just wait till I get you, you lucky stiff!"

BREAK ATTENDANCE RECORDS

Fist Fight Between Giant and Philly Players Was Pleasing News to President Brush.

John T. Brush, the late owner of the Giants, was one of the wisest men who ever handled a ball club. One Saturday, when Charles W. Murphy was acting as Brush's secretary, the former was watching a Giant-Philly game over the ticker.

Suddenly Murphy exclaimed: "Isn't this terrible?" He showed a section of the tape to Brush in which a Giant and Philly player were reported as being engaged in a fist fight.

"Terrible nothing," replied Brush to the astonished Murphy. "I'll bet they'll break all records for a Monday attendance there Monday."

Brush was right, as 18,000 cash customers were out next Monday, many attracted by the hopes of seeing another fist battle.

PRACTICE FOR EARL EBY

Earl Eby gets his outdoor work-out whether it be summer or winter. He is shown here taking a few whirls on the board track at Franklin field. Eby expects to have his best year during the coming season. On his present form he is looked upon as a world-beater. Many other University of Pennsylvania stars are getting outdoor practice, despite winter weather.

SOUTHPAW TO PLAY POLO

English polo authorities have waived the rules of the game in their country in order that one of the players eligible to win a place on the American challenging team may play next year. J. Watson Webb is a left-handed player, and Great Britain has a rule against southpaws playing in important matches. Fear of ponies' forelegs being entangled in a mallet handled on the near side caused the rule to be adopted.

CANNOT PASS SIMPLE TESTS

Surprisingly Large Number of Princeton Freshmen Cannot Run 50 Yards in Seven Seconds.

Doctor Rayeroff of Princeton has issued a report which shows that 1,000 out of 1,800 students are engaged in some form of college athletics. Simple tests such as were used in the army disclosed a surprisingly large number of freshmen who could not pass. These tests were to run 50 yards in seven seconds, broad-jump 12 feet, registering ten points in three throws with a baseball at a six-foot target 90 feet distant, and the climbing of an eight-foot fence in three seconds.

SECURING LACROSSE STICKS

Where Five Indian Makers Were Formerly Occupied in Work One Lone Expert Is Employed.

The problem of securing lacrosse sticks to play the national game of Canada is a serious one. Where formerly five Indian makers of the sticks were busy the field is now occupied by one lone expert. Toronto Lacrosse club members will donate funds to buy sticks for schoolboys' use.

FICKLE FORTUNES OF RACING ILLUSTRATED

How fickle are the fortunes of the turf has been aptly illustrated this year by the case of Samuel D. Riddle, who through the ownership of one great horse was able to become the second largest money winner of the season. Man o' War brought the earnings of the Riddle stable up to $186,087, though, except for the marvelous three-year-old king, the stable was exceptionally weak. Twenty-two horses were under the Riddle colors and the twenty-one besides Man o' War earned slightly more than $20,000.

Squibs of Sport

International league clubs will play a 168-game schedule, beginning April 20.

India will have a team entered in the preliminary Davis cup tennis matches.

Harry Greb has quit Pittsburgh and will make his home in New York in the future.

William W. Roper has been again chosen head coach of the Princeton football team.

Boston college and McGill university of Montreal may meet in a football game next fall.

Grand Rapids Boat and Canoe club is bidding for central states rowing regatta this year.

Speaker will lead his Indians against Lee Fohl's Browns in the opener at St. Louis. Coincidence!

Manager Gibson of the Pirates is ready to spend some real money to strengthen up his infield.

The Houston Texas league club has sold Catcher John Harkins to the Bloomington Three-I league club.

Boston college is negotiating for a football game with California to be played at Braves field November 5.

Little Rock of the Southern association has signed Dick Paderni and Frank McNamara, Chicago semipro.

Lafayette has scheduled 24 baseball games for the spring season, meeting the strongest college nines in the East.

Princeton's faculty has a basket ball team which is thinking seriously of challenging a Yale team of teachers.

Coach Fisher of Harvard would like to see a touchdown count seven and give it real value over the place or drop kick.

Axworthy, 2,155, and Baron Wilkes, 2,18, are now tied as sires of dams of 210 performers, each having the same number—28.

The Yale rifle team recently defeated Columbia 982 to 955 out of a possible 1,000 score in a meet held at New Haven.

George Cutshaw has sent word to Barney Dreyfus that he wants to stay in California next season and will not return to the Pirates.

Lance Pitchburg, the University of Florida last sacker, who was South with the Giants last spring, will get another trial from McGraw.

Hans Kohlenstein, Olympic record holder and who competed for Finland at the Antwerp games last summer, is now a citizen of the United States.

John Ackerman has turned professional. The backstop of the Columbia college team has signed with Reading of the International league.

The Wabash university (Tokyo) baseball team will tour this country next spring. The University of Philippines may also clash with colleges next year.

Considering the cry for second basemen in the National league, the fact that Cincinnati could get Morris Rath out of the league on waivers is rather surprising.

Officials of the Intercollegiate boat races at Poughkeepsie have invited crews of the college world to compete this year. It is especially hoped British crews will enter.

Jabez White, the Albany lightweight, is anxious to meet Joe Lynch. Lynch and White have fought two draws, one at Boston and the other at Madison Square Garden.

Efforts to organize a Western professional football association are being made. Omaha, Kansas City, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Des Moines and St. Louis are the larger cities under consideration for such a circuit.

SAW THINGS IN NEW LIGHT

Object Lesson Given Prisoner Altered His Determination to End Life by Rope.

In a certain prison there have been several attempts to commit suicide. This desire to die has given the wardens much trouble and anxiety.

A few days ago a warden entered a cell to find the inmate preparing to hang himself. He was standing on his stool and trying to throw the end of a strip of torn blanket around one of the cell bars. The other end was around his neck.

"You're making a mess of it," said the weary warden. "Let me help you."

In a trice the blanket rope was about the bar and the noose properly fixed.

The warden gave a tug. He tugged and tugged until the man was raised from the stool—until he was standing on air. There he was held until his eyes and hands made eloquent appeal for release.

"That's the way," said the warden, releasing him. "Now try it yourself." But the prisoner has not tried it. He had decided to live.

Where Small Savings Count.

Small savings are like stones in a bridge; they form a firm support to carry one over the flood of an emergency.
